Apollo Streaks Homeward

By PAUL RECER

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The men of Apollo 14 rocketed away from the moon Saturday and streaked homeward with 106 pounds of precious rock, some of it from a lunar hill the moonwalkers tried and failed to conquer.

Astronauts Alan B. Shepard Jr., Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa, tired from their adventure and yearning for home, fired the engine of their command ship, Kitty Hawk, to start a 2½-day coast toward earth and a splashdown Tuesday in the South Pacific.

"Okay, we got a good burn," Shepard reported after the spacecraft reappeared from the back of the moon following the rocket firing.

"We are on our way home!"

Hours earlier, Shepard and Mitchell had thundered off the moon after 33½ hours on its surface, setting up a science station and collecting rock samples in which scientists may find clues to the moon's origin.

Although they could not climb to the top of 400-foot-high Cone Crater, they accomplished their other tasks so well scientists called the mission the most successful of man's three moon trips.

Kitty Hawk and the lunar lander Antares docked smoothly on the first try — a relief to all. It had taken six attempts to dock the craft after launch last Sunday.

Antares — named for a star — was abandoned in lunar orbit and then performed its last duty for science — self-destruction against the moon's surface. The crash not far from the Apollo 14 landing site was detected by seismometers and radioed to scientists on earth.

"And we say Sayonara (goodbye) to Antares," Roosa commented as he moved the command ship away.

Shepard comes home with the record for time spent walking on the lunar surface — nine hours and three minutes in two walks on Friday and Saturday — added to his records as the first and oldest American in space.

As Antares left the moon, it soared straight up and streaked at 4,116 miles an hour into an orbit of 10½ by 60 miles.

"What a liftoff!" Shepard screamed as the small craft leaped into the dark lunar sky.

As Antares headed upward, Roosa cried from above in the command ship:

"What are you doing way down there, oh fearless one?"

"You've lost a little weight since the last time I saw you," said Roosa, referring to the descent stage of Antares which was left on the moon.

Then they tried the docking system which was so troublesome Sunday.

"We have capture!" Roosa called out.

"Beeeutiful!" said Shepard happily.

"There was a beautiful big sigh of relief around here," said Mission Control.

Shepard and Mitchell transferred into the orbiting command ship, bringing with them the precious rocks and the film they shot of their lunar surface adventure.

The mission's biggest disappointment was being forced to turn back, gasping and exhausted, before the moonwalkers achieved the top of the 400-foot slope of Cone Crater. They had started the walk two hours early, anxious to get the job done.

The aim was to seek at the crater's rim clues to the birth of the solar system. However, scientists held out hope that the rocks picked up during the climb may have been just as fruitful as those they hoped to find on the rim.

The blastoff ended man's third visit to the moon and his first expedition to the rugged mountain ranges which cover most of the lunar surface. The Fra Mauro region, where they landed, is believed to con-

Crime Combatted by Self-Protection Steps

(Editor's Note: Because of a decade long spiral of increased crime, the ordinary citizen might believe the crooks can outsmart anyone. They can't. There is a way to safeguard your life and your property and gain peace of mind. In this first article, condensed from ON GUARD, Protect Yourself Against the Criminal, the author sets down a rationale for gaining a sense of security).

By BERNARD GAVZER
Associated Press

With consistent reports of increasing crime, more and more Americans today are concerned with problems of protecting themselves and their property. Even thieves worry about being victims.

The number of crimes — in 1969, there were almost 5 million serious crimes — brings home to the average person the fact that no one is immune. No one.

Preventing crime, apprehending criminals, determining their guilt, and punishing them for their actions, is the business of police, courts and penal institutions. Law enforcement, of course, is the major thrust against crime.

BUT THE individual today is being urged to take steps to avoid being a victim. There are locks and devices, and weapons, and alarm and detection systems which are sold for security purposes. Some involve an investment of only a few dollars. Others have price tags into the hundreds and even thousands. Newspapers, magazines and books offer advice on how to combat the burglar, how to avoid the robber, and so on.

Most how-to works are based on customary sources in the field of law enforcement, criminology, human behavior and related disciplines.

But one aspect of dealing with crime is to approach it from the point-of-view of a criminal.

How does the burglar decide which home to victimize? Why does the robber pass one person and assault another? What does the rapist do when a potential victim screams?

Any advice is based on two major premises relating to criminals: (1) No criminal wants to be caught, (2) The thief abhors work.

THE GOAL is to make the criminal understand that if he is going to attempt to burglarize your home, rob you or assault you in any way, he is risking getting caught — or he's going to have to work very, very hard to get what he's after.

A run-of-the-mill thief whose crimes are com-

GOLF ON THE MOON

By DARRELL MACK
United Press International

In the true style of a weekend duffer, Al Shepard — the first golfer on the moon — took a "mulligan."

The old pro of space loped up to the tee Saturday with his custom-made six-iron, wriggled in his moonsuit and kept his head down. But his backpack shortened his swing and he missed.

With millions watching on color television, Shepard took another poke — the extra chance golf duffers call a "mulligan" and connected solidly.

Shepard said the ball went "miles and miles and miles."

His fans only had his claim to go on. The ball went out of sight of the TV camera.

A 15-handicapper, Shepard staged the golf exhibition as a surprise climax for the second moonwalk of Apollo 14.

EVEN his pro kept secret the fact that Al had taken his "trusty club" and three special heat resistant golf balls aboard the spaceship which he and Edgar D. Mitchell landed on the moon.

"I'm going to try a little sand trap shot here," Shepard said, dropping a ball into the biggest sand trap in the solar system and going for a crater-in-one at the "Fra Mauro Valley Country Club."

"You got more dirt than ball that time," chortled Mitchell, a gallery of one, when Shepard missed the first shot.

"Got more dirt than ball," Shepard agreed. "Here we go again."

"That looked like a slice to me, Al," said Fred W. Haise, in Mission Control 238,000 miles away.

"There we go — straight as a die," Shepard shouted after his second shot. "One more . . . miles and miles and miles."

Shepard's club was devised by golf pro Jack Harden at the posh River Oaks Country Club near the astronaut's $150,000 mansion in Houston.

Harden said Shepard can hit a six-iron 135 to 140 yards on earth. In the one-sixth gravity of the moon, he figured the ball would travel more than 800 yards.

SHEPARD had trouble with his backswing and follow-through in the bulky moonsuit. He finally ended up hitting with one hand, but some observers estimated the clubhead traveled as fast as if he used two hands because of the airless surroundings.

"Al could play a pretty good game of golf if he wanted to, but he doesn't get to play very much," said Harden, who figured Shepard averages an outing to the course once a month.

Golfers who play for cash, like Arnie Palmer, and some who just putt for fun saluted Shepard for playing the first golf game truly "out of this world." They had a few suggestions for him too.

"He's the longest six-iron player in the world," said Palmer, who is playing in the Hawaiian Open golf tournament this weekend. "He ought to claim the world's

Sports Boat on Rocks, 4 Lost, 16 Injured

At least four persons were missing and 16 others were taken to a hospital after swimming ashore when an 85-foot sportfishing vessel ran onto rocks on the Central California Coast Saturday night.

Officials at Vandenberg Air Force Base — near where first survivors swam ashore — reported 21 persons had been hospitalized for shock.

Coast Guard spokesmen, however, said crewmen aboard the cutter Cape Hedge, searching the dark coast, could still hear screams for help coming from the water, but could not locate anyone.

Air Force officials said helicopters from the base and Coast Guard installations were also attempting to locate victims, and airmen had lined the beach to play searchlights over the waters.

THE BOAT was tentatively identified as the Rogue vessel from Avila Beach, just north of San Luis Obispo. Coast Guardsmen said the craft left its home dock about 8 a.m. Saturday with a fishing party, possibly from Bakersfield.

The Rogue was scheduled to fish between Pt. Sal, north of the Santa Maria River, and Pt. Concepcion.

The accident was first reported to Coast Guard rescue center in Long Beach at 7:25 p.m., minutes after the first survivor made it to shore on a beach at the northern boundary of the air base.

The unidentified survivor told airmen others were still in the water and in danger of drowning, touching off the emergency search operation.

THOSE TAKEN to the air base hospital for treatment were all men between 22 and 50 years of age, according to a base spokesman.

They apparently swam nearly a mile from the scene of the accident off Purisima Point to reach shore.

Man Slays Wife, Self in Dispute

A Los Alamitos man apparently shot and killed his wife, then committed suicide after a predawn domestic dispute Saturday.

Dead are Miguel Lopez Sr., 65, and his wife, Soledad Hernandez Lopez, 60, both of 10791 Cherry St., investigators reported.

Police said Lopez apparently shot his wife twice with a .38-caliber revolver during an argument in the couple's bedroom about 4:30 a.m.

Mrs. Lopez was discovered moments later, dying

N. Viets Shell Allied Laos Invasion Force

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnamese artillery opened up for the first time Saturday against the allied drive in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, inflicting the initial U.S. combat death in the week-old operation.

While the shellings were not heavy, they could pose a threat to the U.S. base at Khe Sanh, reactivated last week for the operation near the border of Laos.

A U.S. spokesman said North Vietnamese artillery bombarded the "Rock Pile," an American outpost nine miles northeast of Khe Sanh. One U.S. soldier was killed and three others were wounded.

THREE South Vietnamese outposts in the area were hit by mortar fire and there was a slight increase in enemy shelling elsewhere in the operation area.

If the shells that hit the Rock Pile came from Laos, it could mean enemy artillery was being readied for further bombardments.

Khe Sanh is vulnerable to any North Vietnamese artillery dug into the face of a bluff on the Laotian border, called "Big Rock Candy Mountain" by the U.S. Marines who withstood a 77-day siege at the base in 1968.

North Vietnamese 130mm artillery zeroed in on Khe Sanh during the siege, and U.S. fighter-bombers never were able to knock out the guns. It is not known whether the North Vietnamese still have guns on "Big Rock Candy Mountain."

Marina Combed for Killer

Combined News Services

Yacht owners at the exclusive Cozy Cove Marina in Danai, Fla. were questioned Saturday about a "swarthy" man police say could be the revenge killer of cosmetics executive George W. Beck and his blonde bride aboard their luxury "party boat."

The husky, dark-complexioned man was seen "staring intently" at Beck's $60,000 houseboat "Bachaven" the night before a marina employe found the couple's nude bodies lying in a pool of blood on the foldout bed in the salon of the 57-foot yacht.

The sheer viciousness of the killing, and the fact that cash and thousands of dollars worth of jewelry were left untouched, led police to theorize it was a jealousy or revenge murder.

Mrs. Beck, a 31-year-old ex-model who married the vice president of the Revlon Corp. last Christmas, had her throat slashed and had been stabbed at least six times in the chest. She was curled up on the bed next to Beck with her head under a pillow.

Police said Beck, a 51-year-old decorated fighter pilot and former Navy intelligence officer, had been hit on the head, as well as stabbed several times.

There was no sign of a struggle in the plush salon of the flag-bedecked houseboat that marina employes said was the scene of frequent parties.

Police say the couple, both of whom had been previously married, may have been murdered in their sleep.

ALIOTO HIT

The California Newspaper Publishers Association Saturday censured San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto for supporting three union leaders convicted of contempt of court in connection with a strike at a newspaper in nearby Marin County.

Alioto retorted that the publishers don't have their facts straight and accused them of "name-calling" and "innuendo."

The mayor had appeared at a rally for the three union leaders and personally chauffeured one of them to jail to serve a 15-day sentence.

The CNPA called the action "unseemly" and "unbecoming" for a man who was a mayor, a member of the bar and an officer of the court.

"If the California Newspaper Publishers Association chooses to pander to its own self-interest by opposing mediation, conciliation and labor peace," Alioto said, "then it should feel the sting of public condemnation.

OUT OF JAIL

They called John Burr Brown "Pop." And he called prison home.

"Pop" Brown was 96 when he died last Wednesday in Nashville, Tenn. and he had spent more than 70 of those years behind bars. His time was up in 1968 on his last conviction, but he had no desire to leave. So, the Tennessee State Prison "found a place for him."

"Pop" was first arrested in 1898 for cattle rustling and subsequently served at least nine prison terms. He made four successful jail breaks, one of which kept him away from the Tennessee prison for 24 years. But during that time, he served 15 years for burglary in Missouri.

His last prison term began here in 1962 when he was sent up for a burglary which netted him only a quilt and a jar of honey. His final years were spent feeding the pigeons and serving as yardman for the prison hospital.

BERNADETTE DEVLIN

BERNADETTE

Bernadette Devlin, the Northern Ireland civil rights leader, joined an Irish-American picket line on Fifth Avenue in New York City Saturday and said she hoped while in the United States she could attend a "free Angela Davis" rally.

Miss Devlin, 23, and the youngest member of parliament, said she also hoped she could meet Miss Davis, a black militant who is in a California jail awaiting trial on charges of murder and kidnaping.

Miss Devlin, who served time in jail in Northern Ireland last summer in a protest by the Roman Catholic minority, said Miss Davis was unjustly accused and compared the situation of blacks in the United States with Roman Catholics in Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland.

EDWARD KENNEDY
Blasts CIA

TED HITS CIA

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., accused the Central Intelligence Agency Saturday of diverting half of the U.S. aid for refugees in Laos to irregular forces fighting the Communists.

He estimated that in the past four years, $27.4 million in food, drugs and other aid had been channeled from the refugee program to paramilitary units operating in Laos. "It's notorious," he said.

Kennedy charged that the U.S. Agency for International Development mission in Laos had been a "cover" for supplying paramilitary groups, channeled "in large measure through the CIA."

ROYAL VISIT

Prince Charles and Princess Anne arrived in Kenya by air Saturday moments after Nairobi's Embakasi Airport had been cleared of Asian demonstrators.

Security officials surrounded the airport and sealed it off from surging crowds, mostly pro-British welcomers, but including a few Asian demonstrators protesting Britain's stiff immigration laws. By the time the Royal Air Force VC10 aircraft touched down, the demonstrators had been ordered off the base.

Prince Charles and his sister will spend two weeks in Kenya during which they plan to make trips to game and wildlife parks in this former British colony.

NEW SEARCH

A final search for missing lawyer Ronald Hughes began Saturday in the rugged Sespe Hot Springs region where the portly defense attorney in the Sharon Tate murder trial disappeared last November.

Ventura County deputy sheriff Merle Hollis said it was decided to make one more attempt to find the bearded, 250-pound Hughes because of good weather conditions.

However, only horses and men would participate in the search, Hollis said.

WILD HORSES

Gregory Gude, 11, arguing at the dinner table with information from a book on mustangs, has persuaded his congressman father to introduce a bill that would protect "free roaming horses and burros on public lands" from ending up as pet food.

Rep. Gilbert Gude, R-Md., noted in a statement Saturday that despite a law that prohibits hunting of "unbranded horses" on public lands from a motor vehicle or airplane, wild horses are now being stampeded until they drop from exhaustion and are then captured and shipped for slaughter.

Reflectively I drive Sort of, Maybe

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Dear Boss:

Just wanted to let you know I might be late to work the next few days while I recover my self confidence.

After what happened yesterday I think I'll ride the bus.

Only it doesn't run where I live.

You remember yesterday? The day you told me to go take that test for negligent drivers?

"You're joking, of course," I purred.

Anyone could look at me, I said, and tell I'm a model driver. Stable, sober, tuned-in, considerate. And I've never had but 43 parking violations andone little old "47-in-a-35" ticket all these years and that was because I was trying to get to work on time. You couldn't call that negligence, could you? Except with the nickels in the parking meter, right?

Would you believe "model driver" bashed the back end of a bus, peeled off a layer of rubber trying to park, another layer trying to stop for a dingy jaywalker, and nearly wiped out 12 feet of junipers in a parkway — all in the space of 12 minutes?

Yes, you'd believe.

I HAVE THE feeling you think women, even us nonlibbers, should never have been allowed inside the Department of Motor Vehicles, much less the voting booth.

Fortunately, all thta traume happened inside a simulator on the Wilson High School campus.

Simulator: that's where I joined 15 other drivers, referred from courts and the DMV, for a short lesson designed to shatter confidence and complacency.

That's where we sat in electronic car mockups and drove through a filmed booby trap of simulated traffic situations.

You and Charles Smith of the Long Beach Safety Council conspired weeks ago to get me into the drivers seat. Fortunatell neither of you saw me blow it. More fortunately still, the jaywalker, the bus, and the junipers never felt the impact of my vintage Mustang — nor did Long Beach police write me up for their records.

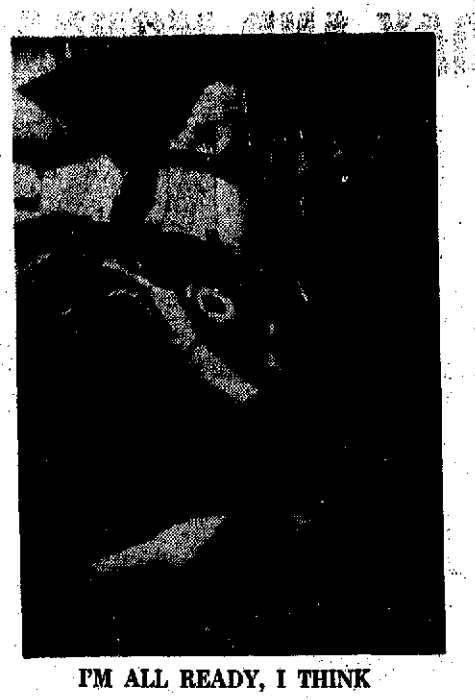

The nice young instructor, Ron Lindeman, explaned the "Aetna Drivotrainer system" and how the white light on the control panel means you goofed. As we turned on the ignition and shifted into drive he cautioned:

"Drive pessimistically. Always imagine the worst will happen; it often does."

It did.

My white light quotient was second to none in the room.

Lindeman said not to feel too bad, however.

I'M ALL READY, I THINK

Of the estimated 125 people who have been to this part of the driver improvement school since it opened in December, almost all "white light" during the 45-minute test. Reports on their attendance and performance go back to the court or DMV.

Some participants complain that the film is out of synch, that the picture isn't clear enough, and that the simulator is no help.

They're in the minority, however, if the mixture of recidivists and first-time violators who make up the monthly night tests.

Typical reactions, written on unsigned forms at the end of the experiment:

"I'll be a lot more alert after going through this . . ." "It will help me to be a more defensive driver and always expect the unexpected . . ." "I can't see as well as I thought I could . . ."

I CONSOLED MYSELF with the knowledge that high school students who tawe the simulator test on an electronic read-out sheet as part of their driver improvement training have practiced about nine hours behind the wheel before the exam. They're adjusted to the apparatus and their white lights are few.

Another consolation is that young drivers all over the state are enrolled in courses like this in a concerted drive to make all our driving lives safer.

Long Beach's program, suggested by the Safety Council and put into gear by the courts and the DMV, is unique in utilizing for adults the equipment which has been adjudged highly effective for young drivers over the past five years.

"It's not perfect," Smith and Lindeman agree," but it's an eye-opener for most people. We feel it's an experience which will stay with them and remind them driving must be a full-time exercise in responsibility."

So how did I drive home?

Defensively — and reflectively.

Your chastened
Molly B.

IT'S BEEN A LONG, LONG, LONG DAY

Boat Hits Whale Off Catalina

A 40-foot pleasure craft out of Long Beach struck a whale Saturday morning near Santa Catalina Island, apparently killing the whale.

The plastic-hulled Slo-An-EZ, owned by Glen Sloan, of Long Beach, sustained a bent propeller shaft and damage to two propellers, estimated at "several hundred dollars," according to a passenger aboard the craft.

The passenger, Ray Hamilton, of Avalon, told this story:

"We were on our way fishing just before 10 a.m. We were about a quarter-to a half-mile off the east end of the island. Then we saw what we assumed to be a whale.

"It swirled about four times, but didn't break the surface," said Hamilton. "The owner, who was at the wheel, slowed down, and then, just a moment later, we felt the boat jar as we hit.

"After that, we saw this big black tail come out of the water and trash around, and blood started to boil up," Hamilton added. "I'm afraid we did kill it."

He said while none of the five persons aboard the Slo-An-EZ were sure, they believed the whale to be a pilot whale.

Pilot whales, Hamilton said, have been seen often near the island in large numbers recently — apparently feeding on squid, also plentiful in the area.

After the collision, Hamilton said Sloan slowly piloted the crippled craft — running on one of its two engines — into Avalon Harbor, where a skin diver assessed the damage.

Late Saturday night, Sloan returned the craft to Long Beach, where it will undergo repairs, according to Hamilton.

AUBURN (UPI) —, A teen-aged girl, whose identity stumped Placer County juvenile authorities for a week, turned out Saturday to be Denise Harrel, 17, of Oakland.

The Juvenile Probation Department said her mother learned the girl was her daughter from a photograph in a newspaper. The mother told counselors at the juvenile center that her daughter was a runaway from a hospital in Alameda County.

Center Superintendent E. J. Barbeiro said Miss Harrell either would not or could not identify herself throughout her time in his facility. He said she might be suffering from a psychological disorder.

Space Leader in Europe

By AL EISELE
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — When the Apollo 14 astronauts spash down in the South Pacific Tuesday, a man who will be one of the chief congressional architects of the U.S. space program for the 1970's will be attending an international conference on environmental problems in Geneva, Switzerland.

In fact, Rep. Joseph Karth, D-Minn., probably won't even watch the return of America's fourth manned lunar mission, just as he didn't go to Cape Kennedy to see it launched last Sunday.

But his presence in Geneva at a preparatory meeting for the 1972 United Nations Conference on the Human Environment offers a solid clue to the new direction this country's space program may turn in the 1970's.

KARTH, who is slated to become chairman of the House Science and Astronautics (space) Committee two years from now, is convinced that it's time the costly space effort begun in the 1960's starts paying some dividends of more practical value than increased knowledge about the moon.

Like many Americans, Karth is wondering why the scientific knowledge and technological expertise paid for by the $35 billion which the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has spent since its creation 12 years ago can't help solve some of the more pressing needs on earth.

Karth, who supported the basic goals of the U.S. space effort of the 1960's has become increasing critical of greater space spending now that the U.S. has won the race to the moon.

He doesn't downplay this nation's achievements in space, but he feels that NASA's future lies in attacking problems on earth rather than pressing for more space spectaculars.

"NASA has been a great agency — it's advanced every scientific discipline there is, but it hasn't applied the technology it's developed," Karth declared last week before leaving for Geneva.

"We've just kind of put our technology on the shelf and pursued the development of further technology. I think we ought to stop, take stock of what we've developed, and see how we can apply it to solve some of our problems on earth."

Karth arnting in his role as chairman of the House subcommittee on space science and applications has held a series of meetings over the last three months to discuss some specific ideas about NASA's future.

He met with NASA's top officials and scientists, representatives of the aerospace industry, and experts at leading private scientific centers such as the Bell Telephone Laboratories "to find out their capabilities in applying existing technology to solving some of our problems on earth", Karth explained.

HE CAME away from those meetings convienced that the space program should direct part of its energies and talents in the 1970's towards meeting the nation's electric power needs.

"The production of electic power is one of the most critical environmental problems we face," Karth declared. "We're going to have to double our power supply in the next 10 years and that's a lot of pollution, whether it's thermal pollution, or water pollution or radioactive pollution.

"We are talking about the possibility of putting a series of solar energy collectors in orbit around the earth and then beaming the energy they collect to receivers on earth where it could be transmitted over existing transmission facilities."

Woman Wounded by Killer Survives Long Desert Trek

GALLUP, N.M. (UPI) — A 23-year-old woman, shot by ex-convict Bertram Greenberg who killed two persons before being gunned down by police, wandered in shock in the desert in subfreezing weather before finding help, authorities said Saturday. A physician called her endurance "remarkable."

Greenberg, 38, was killed by police Friday night near Grants, N.M., ending a flight across New Mexico and Arizona that left James E. Brown of Springfield, Mo., and Arizona Highway Patrolman James L. Keeton dead. Wounded were Mrs. Karen Brown and Keeton's Co-officer, Don A. Beckstead.

GREENBERG, of West Covina, Calif., was a suspect in the Griffith Park slaying last Thursday of 13-year-old Mary Louise Hill, also of West Covina. A hiker spotted his car and took down his licence plate number.

Mrs. Brown was shot three times in the face by Greenberg. Beckstead was shot in the chest. Mrs. Brown was in fair condition at a hospital here and Beckstead remained critical.

Dr. Charles Kettle, who treated the woman, said she was "dazed and in a state of shock when she regained consciousness, lying by the body of her husband."

Kettle said Mrs. Brown "wandered around trying to get help, came to a ravine and apparently lost consciousness again. When she came to, she saw lights and went toward them. The lights apparently were cars on the highway."

In Brumley, Mo., the slain man's father, Wyman Brown, said the couple was returning from Oregon and was due home Saturday."

Grants Police Chief Jay Woodward said Greenberg apparently tried to kill himself with a paring knife when police caught up with him as he tried to dodge a roadblock on U.S. 66 east of Gallup.

"I THINK he wanted to die," said Woodward. "It appeared he tried to kill himself because we found his wrists cut and three stab wounds under his heart." He said a paring knife was in the Brown auto.

Arizona authorities said the killings began when Greenberg wrestled Keeton's gun away at a Sanders, Ariz., roadblock, and shot him several times. Beckstead stopped Greenberg a few miles away and was shot in the stomach.

Police said Greenberg then flagged down the Brown vehicle, forcing Brown to drive to the Mintmore mining area north of Gallup where he shot Mrs. Brown and her husband.

ON POLLUTION WAR

6th Graders Bottled Up

TOLEDO, Ohio (UPI) — The sixth grade class at a nearby school cashed in 6,642 bottles Saturday and sent the $16.61 received to President Nixon with a note "use the money to protect our future" by improving the environment.

Gary Meier, sixth grade teacher at Evergreen West High School at Wauseon, said the students started the project on their own initiative.

Owens-Illinois Inc. agreed to buy the bottles and use them in a recycling project.

The students said in the note to Nixon they wanted to contribute the money to aid in the government's fight against pollution.

"So please, Mr. President use this money to help protect our future," said the students. "We also hope that by doing our thing in the fight to improve our environment, other young people will begin to do their thing."

He said the line, for the poor, the unemployed, striking workers and others, also is being sponsored by Truck Drivers Local 692 and Carpenters Local 710. Volunteers from the Free Clinic will man the line.

Torrance Moose Hall Robbed of $1,000, Official Kidnaped

The Torrance Moose Hall was robbed and one of the lodge's officers briefly kidnaped by a young bandit armed with a pistol and hunting knife, who accosted the man outside the hall Saturday.

Torrance police said the victim, lodge Secretary James H. Johnston, 69, suffered a shallow facial cut when the robber felt he was slow to produce his car keys following the holdup.

Johnston had approached the side door of the lodge, at 1744 W. Carson Ave., about 8:40 a.m. to open the building when the bandit surprised him from behind, brandishing a .32-caliber revolver, investigators said.

The robber then forced Johnston inside the lodge and at gunpoint ordered him to open the organization's safe, from which he took between $600 and $1,000, according to detective Frank Solis.

The gunman also took a stereo and amplifier and two quarts of liquor before tying Johnston to a pillar in the building.

When he told Johnston to indicate where he kept his car keys, said Solis, the lodge secretary was slow to react and the bandit drew a hunting knife from a belt sheath and sliced the left side of Johnston's face from his ear lobe to the corner of his mouth.

Johnston was then cut loose from the pillar and took his keys from a pocket to give to the gunman.

Solis said the robber then forced his victim to accompany him in the car for about 1½ miles, to an open field near 223rd Street, west of Western Avenue, where Johnston was released.

The bandit, described as between 25 and 30 years of age, five feet, 10 inches tall and weighing about 160 pounds, drove off in Johnston's car with the stolen cash and equipment, the detective said.

IN 'PAKISTAN HIJACK'

India Seeks Retaliation

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Saturday the Indian government is considering further steps against Pakistan to retaliate for the blowing up of a hijacked Indian Airlines plane last Tuesday.

"Pakistan has violated international law by this act," Mrs. Gandhi told an election rally here.

"We have already taken some steps, we are considering more and a decision on them will be taken on my return to Delhi."

India has banned Pakistani military and commercial flights over Indian territory, accusing the Pakistan government of complicity in the hijacking which was carried out by two Indians seeking the release of Kashmiri prisoners held by India. The hijackers were granted asylum by Pakistan.

India is demanding that Pakistan pay damages for the Fokker Friendship airliner and the cargo, mail and baggage destroyed with the plane, on an airstrip in Lahore, Pakistan.

Pakistan has refused, saying it was not responsible for the hijacking or the plane's destruction.

Pakistan, meanwhile, has asked India to rescind its ban on Pakistani flights over the 1,000 miles of territory separating East and West Pakistan.

A diplomatic note said the suspension of the flights, which have forced planes to make a 2,400-mile detour via Ceylon, "cannot but adversely affect the present relief operations" in East Pakistan, which was hit by a devastating cyclone and tidal wave in November.

Earlier Saturday police used teargas to prevent four groups of students from marching on the walled compound of the Pakistan High Commissioner in New Delhi.

Police put a halt to the six days of demonstrations when they sealed off the entire six-square-mile diplomatic enclave from outside traffic and pedestrians.

Student leaders meeting at Delhi University announced they would call off their protests.

Tate Cult Bombing Feared

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The sheriff's office says it has received information that explosives may be used to disrupt the final days of the penalty phase of the trial of Charles Manson and three female members of his "family."

Sheriff's Capt. William H. Alley Jr., said in an affidavit that as result of this information, security measures for the entire Hall of Justice have been tightened. He said the information came from a "sufficiently reliable government source."

ALLEY'S affidavit was made public Friday but it was not revealed when it was made. Security at the Hall of Justice was noticeably stepped up at the time for guilt phase of the trial went to the Jury Jan. 15.

Manson, Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie Van Houten already stand convicted of first degree murder in the Tate-LaBianca murders. The only thing left for the jury to determine is whether they be sentenced to life imprisonment or death in the gas chamber.

A number of other members of the Manson "family" have testified during the penalty phase of life at the Spahn Ranch in nearby Chatsworth. They said Manson's life was one of love, not death.

One of the witnesses, Sandra Good, 26, said that any suggestion that Manson would send anyone out to commit murder was "crazy."

MISS GOOD said that all of the women in Manson's "family" wanted to have all the babies they could because "babies are what it's all about." She said she had a child named Elf but she did not know who the father was.

"God is the father," she said. "I don't know who actually implanted the seed. does it matter? Is it relevant?"

Miss Good said that babies at the ranch actually were the clan's leaders, not Manson.

"We all want to have babies," she said. "Babies are our leaders."

Egypt Hits Israel for Denying Peace Bid

By The Associated Press

Egypt accused Israel Saturday of rejecting "the last chance for peace in the Middle East."

Egyptian government spokesman Munir Hafez said Israel had turned down President Anwar Sadat's proposal to reopen the Suez Canal in return for a partial withdrawal of Israeli forces from the waterway's eastern bank.

Sadat made the offer Thursday in a speech accepting a new 30-day extension of the Mideast cease-fire that would have expired at midnight Friday.

HAFEZ said Israeli Premier Golda Meir rejected Sadat's "Egyptian initiative" in an interview broadcast by the NBC television network Friday.

Mrs. Meir said in the interview there was "nothing astonishing" about Sadat wanting Israeli troops to pull back from the canal.

"That is exactly what he wants without even a peace agreement," she said, adding: "If the canal is opened, it should be opened also to Israel shipping."

Sadat had not specified what he meant by partial withdrawal of Israeli troops nor did he say it Israeli ships could use a reopened canal. Egypt barred Israeli vessels after seizing control of the waterway in 1956.

CAIRO officials were arranging a Monday tour for news correspondents to the Great Bitter Lake where a number of ships from various countries have been bottled up since the canal was blocked in the 1967 war.

Hafez' statement said "Israel's rejection of President Sadat's initiative clearly shows Israel is unwilling to implement the United Nations Security Council resolution calling for the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territory and is clearly against efforts for peace in the Middle East."

Some of Mrs. Meir's critics in Tel Aviv also described her statement as a rejection of Sadat's proposal.

There has been no official Israeli comment and one official said Sadat's suggestion was under careful study.

Haim Herzog, a reserve general and military analyst for the Israeli state radio, said Sadat's plan was one-sided and would force Israel to "forego the very considerable military advantage which the Suez Canal guarantees."

But he noted it "bears some slight resemblance" to a partial pullback and canal reopening proposal attributed some months ago to Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan. It was understood Mrs. Meir rejected Dayan's plan at the time.

The Council of the Settlement Movement aligned to Mrs. Meir's Labor party adopted a resolution warning of renewed fighting in the Middle East and supporting the government policy.

The resolution, read over the state radio by Minister without Portfolio Israel Galilee, said Egypt's extension of the cease-fire by only 30 days "means that the danger of new warfare looms ahead."

Arabs observed the holiest Moslem feast, Kurban Bairna but without the traditional outcries for holy war against Israel.

In Amman, Jordan, Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat led a demonstration of 7,000 guerrillas to commemorate victims of September's civil war between Guerrillas and Jordan's army. Hundreds died in the conflict.

Heads of state in all Arab countries attended day break feast prayers at the grand mosques of their capitals to hear sermons urging closer Arab unity to drive Israel from occupied Arab territory.

Bayh Raps Arab Plan to Reopen Suez Canal

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., Saturday said the United States should not support an Egyptian proposal to reopen the Suez Canal under condition of a partial Israeli withdrawal from the east Bank.

Bayh said the reopening of the canal, which has been closed since the 1967 six-day war, would play into the hands of the Soviet Union at this stage because the Soviets have the greatest interest in reopening the waterway. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat made the proposal Thursday night.

Bayh added, however, that an Israeli withdrawal could be part of a Mideast settlement negotiated between the parties involved, but that Israel should not pull troops back from the east bank of the canal without appropriate compensation.

Bayh made his remarks at Lydda International Airport where he arrived to begin a three-day fact-finding tour. He has been mentioned as a possible Democratic presidential nominee in 1972.

Bayh is scheduled to meet with Premier Golda Meir, Deputy Premier Yigal Allon and Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

N. Viets Shell Allied Force Massing Along Laos Border

sion, operating along Route 9 near Laos, found an enemy cache of 135 mortar rounds. It was one of only about half a dozen small munitions caches turned up so far.

Although advance intelligence had reported large numbers of North Vietnamese deployed in the area, it appeared they have faded back north across the demilitarized zone or slipped westward into Laos.

Military spokesmen reported 29 enemy killed and 5 captured so far in the drive, launched by 20,000 South Vietnamese and 9,000 U.S. troops Jan. 30. Allied casualties have been light. Counting Saturday's action, one American has been killed and eight wounded in the action.

One other American was killed earlier but this was listed as an accident. He stepped on an old mine and was killed when a sling raising him into a helicopter broke.

Official spokesmen in Saigon continued to deny repeated Communist charges that South Vietnamese troops have crossed into southern Laos.

THE LATEST claim came from Col. Soth Phethrasy, head of the pro-Communist mission in Vientiane, capital of Laos.

He told Japanese newsmen Saturday the South Vietnamese had invaded and had reached Sepone, also known as Tchepone, 20 miles inside the country, Kyodo news service reported.

Furthermore, he said, the South Vietnamese with U.S. support were moving toward Muong Phine, 15 miles southwest of Sepong. Sepong, however, is a North Vietnamese base, and Hanoi's troops could be expected to put up a fierce battle to hold it. It would seem highly that Sepong would fall so quickly.

The French newspaper Le Monde quoted French sources in Saigon as saying three battalions of South Vietnamese rangers had moved into Laos and were operating between the border and Sepong.

Newsmen in the field have found evidence that only small numbers of South Vietnamese had entered Laos by helicopters.

ALTHOUGH some South Vietnamese officers told Associated Press correspondent William Barton in Quang Tri that up to 5,000 Saigon troops had entered Laos, he could get no substantiation from senior officers.

Western sources in Vientiane said a South Vietnamese invasion may be held up pending approval from Laos' premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma.

These sources said President Nixon will make the final decision on such an invasion and that he may call it off if he cannot get Souvanna's approval. Souvanna's decision, Nixon's, could come within 3 to 10 days, the Western sources added.

The Communists in various capitals kept up denunciations of the United States, charging it with escalating the Indochina war.

The North Vietnamese Foreign Ministry in Hanoi issued a statement saying the U.S. is planning "large-scale aggression in Ls." The statement was Laos." The statement was released in Paris by the North Vietnamese delegation to the Vietnam peace talks.

IN CAMBODIA, well to the south, South Vietnamese forces clashed with veteran North Vietnamese troops Saturday in one of the biggest engagements since the allied sweep into the enemy sanctuaries last May and June.

South Vietnamese headquarters said 91 North Vietnamese troops were killed and listed their own losses as 10 killed and 17 wounded.

The battle was the third large encounter in the 20,000-man offensive in eastern Cambodia launched by Saigon forces earlier this week to prevent the North Vietnamese from setting up again in their old sanctuary areas.

The fighting took place close to the French-owned Chup Rubber Plantation, the largest in Indochina and scene of heavy fighting last year. The plantation is 25 miles west of the South Vietnamese border and 110 miles northwest of Saigon.

FBI Nabs 56 In Nationwide Crackdown on Bookie Ring

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI agents arrested 56 persons in seven states and the District of Columbia Saturday in what the agency called a major crackdown against organized interstate gambling dealing with sports contests.

The announcement, by Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, said the FBI is still seeking 10 other persons.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said the gambling operations involved over $60 million annually, with some of the operation handling over $1 million each month on football and basketball bets.

In addition, he said, the "books" also handled wagers on horses, numbers and lottery operations.

In addition to the District of Columbia, the arrests were made in Florida, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Virginia.

Hoover said the arrests came after extensive investigations covering almost 12 months. The arrests were based on warrants issued in Newark, N.J., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Alexandria, Va., and Washington.

The warrants charge violations involving six anti-gambling statutes.

The FBI said the investigations were conducted in cooperation with organized crime strike forces of the Justice Department.

HOOVER SAID part of the evidence on which the warrants were based was obtained through wiretaps authorized by U.S. District Courts.

He said the arrests resulted in the seizure of "considerable" gambling paraphernalia.

Hoover indicated that those arrested will be brought before the committing magistrates as soon as possible.

Penalties for the violations charged range up to a $20,000 fine and or five years imprisonment.

Thieves Themselves Suggest Ways to Discourage Crime

mitted to pay for drugs, relates:

"I'm what you'd call a door-knob turner. I'll just try doors to see if they are open. I could use a shim or a jimmy (burglar's tools to open doors) but when I begin to panic for money I sometimes haven't got time to even get a jimmy, except for maybe a screwdriver. So if you've got a jimmyproof lock on your door, you're really beating me."

This run-of-the-mill crook is probably typical of thousands of thieves.

Among thieves, being professional connotes being skilled and resourceful in the same way as a doctor or lawyer.

Such a professional burglar — an expert safecracker — explains that he will burglarize private homes when there is no large commercial job, such as a jewelry store or supermarket.

"YOU HANDLE that kind of job differently than a commercial job, which is mostly night work, or Sunday work. I try to be as careful with a house job as a commercial one because a bust (arrest) on a house job is still a bust and hurts as much as getting busted in a safe job. So, if it's night and I've cased a place and there are lights in different rooms, or sounds coming from the place, I will probably pass it. There are other things which stop me or which stop other guys. The idea in my business is not to get caught."

There are purse snatchers and muggers who get upset if members of their family go into certain areas at night. One purse snatcher says:

"We used to hide near an underpass and you could always count on some dumb old lady walking through. Even a kid can shove a woman like that off her feet and get away with her bag. Some people never learn no matter how many times you tell them. If I was a woman I wouldn't take such a chance."

Another purse snatcher, incidentally, says "I would never grab the purse of any woman carrying an umbrella. That scares me because once I got poked in the eye and almost went blind."

AS THESE various thieves talk about their crimes in subsequent articles in this series, they provide clues to steps the law-abiding citizen can take to frustrate criminal designs.

AS CRIME statistics soar, it is not uncommon for many businesses to devise their own protection.

No miracles are promised. It would be a cruel deception to suggest, for example, that it is truly possible to have 100 per cent security and still move freely in society. There is a teeter-totter effect in self-security because the more secure you make a place the more you restrict convenience.

There simply is no safeguard — in terms of weapons or devices — against people who suddenly begin shooting strangers on the street. In many instances, what is perfectly sound advice regarding a robber or a burglar, may not apply when that robber or that burglar is drunk or influenced by drugs.

But there is a way to deal with criminals by exploiting their basic ignorance, weakness and fear. By understanding what they do and why they do it, it may be possible to follow common sense routines to tip the balance in favor of the law-abiding person.

(Note: The book, On Guard: Protect yourself Against the Criminal, can be ordered through this newspaper at a cost of $1. Mail your order to the Independent, Press-Telegram, Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. Make checks payable to the Associated Press.)

AS RIOTING SPREADS

Troops Clash with Snipers in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops and snipers shot it out Saturday night in the deserted streets of Belfast. Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark declared his government at war with Irish Republican extremists seeking to unite Ireland.

Rioting struck several sections of the Ulster capital Saturday night, but the streets cleared when snipers and army troops began exchanging rifle and automatic weapons fire.

Heavy shooting was reported in the Mixed Roman Catholic-Protestant Crumlin Road, a chronic trouble spot in Belfast's long-standing feud. Troops and armored cars cordoned off the area and the army said the firing subsided shortly after midnight.

The army reported two civilians struck by bullets and police said a 14-year-old boy had his hand blown off when he tried to throw a homemade bomb at soldiers.

RIOTING also broke out Saturday night in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second city, but an army spokesman reported it under control.

It was the fifth night of conflict in the Northern Ireland capital, where four persons were killed Friday night.

The British Defense Ministry in London said it was sending 600 fresh troops to reinforce the 6,000 already in Ulster. Many troops were exhausted from the continued fighting.

It was the worst outbreak of fighting since Bernadette Devlin, 23-year-old member of the British Parliament and civil rights activist, was sent to jail in June of last year, setting off battles that left five dead and 240 seriously injured.

Miss Devlin served four months for her part in August 1969 rioting that took eight lives and injured hundreds. She is currently in the United States on a speaking tour.

Chichester-Clark read a statement from the steps of Stormont Castle, the seat of government in Belfast, vowing his government would "never surrender to tiny groups of Irish Republicans."

Fraud Fund

Q. I have been told the California Real Estate Commission has a fund to repay persons who have been defrauded by real estate salesmen. Is this true? If so, how can one apply for money from this fund? A. N. S., Torrance.

A. According to Section 10471 of the California Business and Professions Code, the state Real Estate Commission must maintain a recovery fund for persons who have been defrauded. To obtain money from this fund, you must first file a civil suit against the salesman. If you are awarded a judgment, and are unable to locate the salesman's assets or if he doesn't have any, you can then file a claim with the commission to obtain the money from the recovery fund. Once you have filed a claim, it is examined by the commission and then the matter is turned over to the courts where a judge will decide if the commssion must pay the money. The recovvery fund can be used only to pay only claims of less than $20,000 from their fund.

Peanut Empire

Q. We have a long-standing dispute as to who invented peanut butter. Was it Dr. Carver or Kellogg of Michigan? W. H. W., Gardena.

A The credit goes to the black scientist George Washington Carver. However, butter was only one of more than 300 products he derived from the "humble" peanut. And it was with the peanut that he revolutionized the agriculture of the South. He convinced many of the poor Alabama tenant farmers of the folly of totally depending upon a one crop economy. He urged them to plant less cotton, to diversify — to grow peanuts, sweet potatoes and soybeans. Then absorbed in a laboratory that he put together from discards salvaged from trash heaps, Carver took on the task of finding home and market uses for these crops. From the peanut plant he made butter, milk, ice cream, pickles, meal, instant and dry "coffee," soup, salve, bleach, washing powder, metal polish, ink, plastics, synthetic rubber and even paper. From the sweet potato he made more than 100 products from shoe blacking to candy. From the soybean he made flour, meal, coffee, oil and milk. Carver was born a slave in Missouri around 1864. He worked his way through school — often by cooking and laundering. He graduated from Iowa State College and stayed on as a member of the faculty until 1896 when he came to teach and experiment at Booker T. Washington's Tuskegee Institute in Alabama where he spent the rest of his life. He turned down many lucrative offers to work elsewhere. Thomas A. Edison had tried in vain to get Carver to work on his staff. Before Carver's death in 1943, his old friend, inventor Henry Ford, called Carver "the greatest living scientist.'

Namely

Q. My little girl will start school next September. I would like to know if she can register using her stepfather's name or does she have to register under the name which appears on her birth certificate? Mrs. C. L., Long Beach.

A. Unless your child's name has been legally changed to that of her stepfather's, she should be registered for school under the name which appears on her birth certificate, ACTION LINE learned from a spokesman for the Long Beach Unified School District. He quoted section 10756 of the California Education Code which requires that a student register in a California public school under his legal surname.

Late Calendars

Q. Our senior citizens club orders stationery from Current Inc., Box 2020, Colorado Springs, Colo. 80901, then we sell it to make money for the club. Until November, our orders had always arrived promptly, but part of our Nov. 3 order and half of our Dec. 2 order have not arrived. In these orders were 20 1970 calendars. If they do not get here soon I'm afraid our customers will cancel their orders and we will be stuck with them. I have written to the company twice but have received no answer. Can ACTION LINE help us? Mrs. H. R., Long Beach.

A. You should have what you ordered soon. But if it hasn't arrived by now, you can call collect to Current Inc., (303) 471-4910 and ask for Mrs. Carol Koester. She will mail you a duplicate order right away. Mrs. Koester said all back orders had been mailed by Jan. 2. She said, "We know we've caused a lot of confusion and unhappiness, but we were just swamped with orders. We've given refunds to anyone who asked and will do so for your reader if she isn't satisfied."

'Mail' Fraud?

Q. In early November a man named William R. Russel was arrested for possible fraud. My sister and I had a total of $6000 invested in his compsny, the Sunday Mail Inc. Can you find out what is happening in this case. J. K., Long Beach.

A. Russel, company chairman of the bankrupt Sunday Mail Inc., is facing trial on charges of grand theft. His preliminary hearing is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m., Feb. 22 in Division 49 of the Los Angeles Municipal Court, Temple Street and Broadway in Los Angeles. For further information, you can contact Mike Lapidus, investigator with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office at 626-3888. Russel sold some $2 million worth of dealerships at $3,000 each to individuals in the Sunday bulk-mail distributing operation. An attorney conversant with the case said it doesn't look as if investors "will realize anything" back on the money they put into the business.

EAST COLD EASES

United Press International

High pressure systems brought generally sunny and dry conditions to most parts of the country Saturday, bringing many areas their first relief from winter storms in days.

Occasional light snow occurred from Montana to the Texas Panhandle, east of the Great Lakes and in the northern portions of Minnesota and North Dakota. One inch of fresh snow was recorded at Colorado Springs, Colo. and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

A snowstorm which dumped up to five inches on Maine slowly tapered off and rain falling in portions of New England subsided as afternoon temperatures reached into the 20s and the 30s, the warmest in some time.

In New York state two persons were killed and at least 16 injured in five traffic accidents on a 20-mile stretch of the state thruway. Fog and wet roads made morning driving hazardous.

Afternoon temperatures around the nation varied from 7 below at Havre, Mont. and Williston, N.D. to 81 at Miami, Melbourne and West Palm Beach, Fla.

Attendance Low, School Sets Reward

OAKLAND (AP) — McClymonds High School, where attendance has been "very sporadic," is going to reward perfect attendance with trading stamps.

Louis Jones, principal of the racially mixed school which has an enrollment of 870, said: "They'll get 100 stamps a week for perfect attendance and a semester bonus of 500 stamps."

This, he said, should add up to "several" books of stamps with a redemption value of about $3 each.

The program was proposed by Vice Principal Ralph Griffin, who said he thought it would work "because our culture is trading-stamp oriented."

"Frankly, our attendance has been very sporadic," Jones said. "Some day perhaps half of a calss of 30 will fail to show up. The next day they'll be back and others will be out."

Marcus Foster, who took over as superintendent for Oakland schools last July, has allocated $5,000 to pay for the stamps.

LAST September, Foster asked the district's 63,000 pupiles and 5,888 employes to suggest ways to improve the educational program.

Flooded with proposals, he has made grants totaling $100,000 for all sorts of projects costing from $25 to the $5,000.

Trudy Kemperman of Westlake Junior High School got $366.50 to finance her "Respect Our Books" drive.

A pupil book patrol regularly checks the building and grounds for lost books. Turned in at the library, they ae good for coupons entitling the bearer to free paperback books at a nearby store.

Other more conventional ideas include more appetizing cafeteria menus.

McClymonds has produced a number of sports stars, including Bill Russell, formerly of basketball's Boston Celtics; Frank Robinson of baseball's Baltimore Orioles; Vada Pinson, of Baseball's Cleveland Indians, and Joe Ellis of basketball's San Francisco Warriors.

Nixon Blueprint to Shuffle Departments Made Public

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A proposed blueprint for President Nixon's plan to overhaul the federal bureaucracy was made public Saturday by the White House, but officials cautioned that some changes already had been made and hinted others could be expected.

The reorganization proposals, drafted by a presidential advisory council, were submitted to Nixon in November, about two months before he announced in his State of the Union message that he would seek to merge seven Cabinet-level departments into four new, broad-scope federal departments.

WHITE HOUSE Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the plan was being made public now to help stimulate discussion of the reorganization.

This prompted speculation that the President wanted to get an idea what course the opposition would take before he gives Congress his formal proposal early this spring, as well as to divert initial criticism to the advisory council.

Nixon's Advisory Council on Executive Reorganization, headed by industrialist Roy Ash, called basically for the same kind of design the President laid out Jan. 22 in his State of the Union message.

The council, like Nixon, suggested that the present departments of Interior, Agriculture, Labor, Commerce, Transportation, Housing and Urban Development and Health, Education and Welfare be dismantled. Only the departments of State, Defense, and the Treasury would remain untouched.

In brief, the council plan would establish these four new departments:

NATURAL RESOURCES — To assume responsibility for most Agriculture and Interior Department programs, ranging from rural electrication to national parks. This department also would take over river and harbor projects now under the Army Corps of Engineers and the Atomic Energy Commission's authority over civillan nuclear power production.

HUMAN RESOURCES — To administer most of the programs now run by HEW, including education, Social Security and food and drug supervision plus Labor and OEO manpower training programs among others.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT — operate all HUD activities, ranging from urban renewal to mortgage insurance, and to supervise a broad variety of other programs involving construction and community action.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT — To take over all Commerce Department programs — with the exception of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which would go to the natural resources agency — from census to patents, and most of the Labor Department's activities.

Some of the council's recommendations have been rejected. The council, for example, suggested that the Transportation Department be left as a separate entity, while the President wants to put it into the new department of economic development.

Nixon also has dismissed the council's proposal for abolition of the Office of Economic Opportunity, preferring to keep it as a small White House agency primarily experimenting with new domestic programs.

Tax-Free Living

ANDORRA LA VELLA (AP) — A census showed 20,550 citizens from 34 nations live in this tiny, tax-free principality high in the Pyrenees between France and Spain.

14 DIE AS QUAKE JOLTS ITALIAN CITY

TUSCANIA, Italy (AP) — A severe earthquake jolted this ancient hill town in central Italy Saturday night, killing 14 persons and injuring at least 100. Another weaker quake hit the area several hours later.

The initial tremor, with an intensity of six on the 10-point Mercali scale, damaged or destroyed 60 per cent of the city's buildings. It was so strong that even residents of northern Rome, 50 miles south, fled their homes.

RESCUE workers said a number of bodies were seen in the heaps of rubble and stone but could not be extracted immediately. Among the dead was an entire family of five killed when their house collapsed.

The first persons to reach here from nearby villages found the medieval section of the town practically leveled and some of the romanesque churches, including the famous Basilica of St. Mary Major, severely damaged.

The first quake was felt at 7 p.m., sending most of the city's 12,000 residents from their dinner tables into the streets and near-freezing weather.

Buildings in the center of town fell "like a deck of cards," one witness said. Part of the municipal hospital collapsed.

The town plunged into darkness when power lines were ripped out and dropped across the rubble-strewn thoroughfares. Children ran through the streets looking for their parents. A woman plummeted to her death from the third floor of a tottering building.

Hundreds of soldiers and policemen, some from as far as Rome, dug frantically in the rubble to free mangled survivors. Ambulances sped to nearby towns with the injured.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

A MILLS STORE

In the past we have discussed the technical aspects of diamond quality and value. This week we shall discuss "How to buy a Diamond".

When you go shopping for a diamond there are a few important things to look for which will insure that you will get the best possible buy:.

1. Always buy from a reputable dealer. Always be sure you can trust the person you are dealing with before you buy.

2. Buy only from a jeweler who is willing and able to give you the facts about diamonds. He should give you an explanation of the quality of the stone you are considering. He should allow you to look at the stone under a 10 power glass or microscope. He should be willing and able to answer any questions you might ask. A jeweler who will not do these things is either dishonest or imcompetent. You should always buy from a professional who knows dismonds.

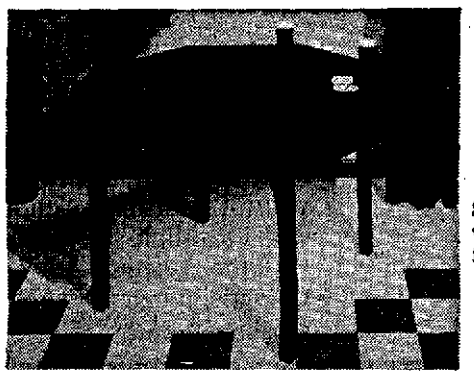

3. Demand a selection of qualities. Remember, slight difference in quality can account for considerable differences in price. Often a difference in quality between two stones can make a considerable difference in price; yet have no effect on the appearance of the stones. Keep in mind: Diamond prices are based on rarity, not beauty. A jeweler should inform you of such differences and show you a selection of stones of various qualities. This will enable you to select a stone which satisfies you at the lowest price you need to pay. All too often a person will pay much more than necessary to get what he really wants. He may buy a flawless stone when a stone with a few microscopic flaws would be just as good and cost 20% less.

Remember, it is bad to be over-charged, but just as bad to be uninformed. It is bad if a stone is misrepresented to you, but just as bad if you are not told what is available. In both cases, you will pay too much.

For all these reasons you should deal only with a jeweler who will inform you, then let you judge for yourself what you want.

If you have any questions please feel free to contact Lawson's Jewelers at 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach only.

CARNIVAL VIOLENCE GROWING

New Orleans Eying Cautious Mardi Gras

By C. P. TROSCLAIR

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — It's getting tougher to be carefree at carnival. Even in the city that care supposedly forgets each Mardi Gras.

Orleanians are approaching their 11-day carnival with excitement, but with more than a bit of caution.

The carnival, which begins Saturday challenges fun-seekers to get their fill of kicks before the lenten season. But the fun is threatening to get out of hand.

Forty-eight policemen were injured trying to control the 30 parade crowds last year. Several hundred persons were given emergency room treatment or booked with disturbances ranging from drunkenness to assault.

"It was the most dangerous Mardi Gras to date," said Irwin Magri, head of the Patrolmen's Association of New Orleans.

Unlike the carnival in Rio de Janeiro, the New Orleans Mardi Gras has caused very few deaths over the years. But many Orleanians fear their celebration is growing in violence.

The concern reached a peak last year when trumpeter Al Hirt's career was almost ended by an injury. He said he was hit on the lip by a rock while riding on a parade float.

Nearly everyone agrees that the celebrations have been amazingly happy and the troubles small, considering that on Mardi Gras — Fat Tuesday — nearly a million people are encouraged to jam the streets and shed their inhibitions behind masks, costumes and alcohol.

But police fear the trouble potential is growing.

One concern is the increasing influx of college students and young hippies bent on having the time of their lives. Many do not understand the traditions or limits of the celebration. Thousands poured into the city last year without housing reservations and tried to convert parks and riverfront areas into camping grounds.

Police objected, saying they could not handle the additional enforcement and sanitation problems. Some city leaders bluntly said people without hotel or housing reservations were not welcome at carnival.

More welcome are the hotel tourists and the several thousand sailors who pour into the city aboard the half dozen U.S. Navy ships that annually dock here for carnival. The sailors bring their own shelter.

Hotels are usually booked solid months in advance with visitors who must take rooms for a minimum of three days, at special carnival rates.

Young Moon Landrieu, preparing for his first Mardi Gras as mayor, appointed a committee in 1970 to recommend carnival safeguards. But the proposals—including a ban on drinking while riding floats — were rejected by the city council.

Councilmen are traditionally reluctant to regulate the carnival because the extensive freedom to let yourself go that has made the celebration the nation's biggest fun festival.

Magri's police union has demanded triple pay for carnival overtime. That could break the financially troubled city because all 1,500 police work 12-hour shifts during carnival.

But if the troubles are increasing, so is the native appetite for carnival. New organizations spring up each year to conduct additional carnival balls and parades.

The growth is especially evident in New Orleans suburbs, where neighborhood groups are avoiding some of the inner city troubles by staging their own parades. They are attracting increasing — and less-worried — crowds.

But on Mardi Gras, which is the final climactic day of the carnival, the action is still downtown and in the French Quarter.

Behind masks, crazy costumes, cans of beer and leather wine bags, several hundred thousand natives and tourists are expected to again jam St. Charles, Canal and Bourbon Streets, to laugh at one another and squeeze as much fun out of Feb. 23 as they have on any previous Mardi Gras.

Police report that Fat Tuesday usually produces less trouble proportionately than the preceding carnival weekend.

BESS TRUMAN NEARS 86

HER 86TH BIRTHDAY

Truman Return Is Gift for Bess

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (UPI) — Bess Wallace Truman approaches her 86th birthday next Saturday with the greatest possible gift, her husband's recovery from an instestinal illness that kept him hospitalized for 12 days.

There will be no party, because Mrs. Truman wants none. It will be a day of quiet, rest and relaxation, a day tailored like all other days to the needs and happiness of Harry S. Truman, also 86.

FRIENDS say Mrs. Truman also needs rest now. Her general health remains remarkable good but she's "bone tired" from the taxing routine of day-long hospital visits and the daily 30-mile round trip from home to Kansas City's Research Hospital where the former president was hospitalized from Jan. 21 to Feb. 2.

Mrs. Truman never was seriously alarmed about the former president's condition after he was stricken "but it had to be a strain," an intimate friend said, and when physicians pronounced the former president in good health for a man his age "it was the greatest gift Bess could possibly get."

The two have picked up their quiet ways of life with little change since Trumans' illness but there was at least one adjustment. They have occupied a large bedroom on the second floor and at the front of the 71-room Victorian mansion which has been Mrs. Truman's home since girlhood. Despite the stiffiness in his knees and his occasional dizziness, Truman continued to climb the long flight of stairs.

But when Mike Westwood, his long time bodyguard, companion and chauffeur, brought Truman home from the hospital the former president was installed in a first-floor bedroom at the rear of the house.

Britons Face the Decimal

LONDON (UPI) — Fifty-five million tradition-minded Britons are about to embark on a revolutionary change in their national way of life. On Monday, Feb. 15 — "D-Day" — the 800-year-old British currency of pounds, shillings and pence "goes decimal."

It's almost as though the U.S. government abolished baseball and told Americans cricket would be their national game. The shillings and pence and the whole bewildering system of counting money that Britons accept as normal but that have been the despair of generations of American and other foreign tourists, are being scrapped.

ALONG with them go the cartwheel pennies that wore holes in the strongest pockets, the 12-sided three pence (three cents) pieces, not to mention the shillings (12 cents) and florins (24 cents) that confused foreigners.

The dime sized six pence (six cents piece or "tanner" has been given a two-year stay of execution. But it too is likely to disappear.

The former halfcrown (30 cents) and halfpenny (half cent) coins already had been consigned to limbo in 1969.

In their place comes a whole new range of decimal-based coins.

There will be a new halfpenny (1.2 cents), new penny (2.4 cents) and two new pence (4.8 cents) bronze coins and five new pence (12 cents, 10 new pence (24 cents) and 59 new pence (1.20 dollars) coins in a light metal alloy. The 50 new pence coin is seven-sided.

New Rescue Sub Locks on in Test

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Navy says its first rescue minisub has demonstrated it can locate a submarine trapped underwater, lock onto it and pluck its crew to safety.

The $41 million deep-submergence rescue vehicle, known as DSRV-1, performed the crucial tests this week at a depth of more than 150 feet off San Clemente Island, the Navy reported Friday.

"This is a major step forward as the ability of the sub to spot and mate with a stranded submarine is the key element in the Navy's global resuce system," a Navy spokesman said.

Under development since 1963, when the atomic submarine Thresher sank off New England with the loss of 129 lives, the DSRV can be airlifted almost anywhere in the world.

IN THIS week's trials the 50-foot-long sub located a metal structure representing a stranded submarine, locked its transfer hatch over it and passed a man through the connection.

AT S.F. ACADEMY OF COMIC ART

'Zip! Pow!' Krazy Kat Slugged by Ignatz Again

By WILEY MALONEY

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — "Zip!" "Pow!" — Krazy Kat is hit in the neck with a brick by rascally Mouse Ignatz. Officer Pupp looks another way. Krazy Kat sweats hearts.

Is it art?

"Yes," says Bill Blackbeard, founder-director of the San Francisco Academy of Comic Art, probably the only institution of its kind in the world.

Blackbeard, 44, devotes most of his time to putting together the world's largest private collection of comic art. This collection now is the heart of the nonprofit academy he founded.

"Comic art is not trivial — only the tasteless would consider it so," Blackbeard said. "More important, it is a wholly indigenous American art form."

IN EUROPE serious consideration is given to the form, he said. Hundreds of books and papers have been written abroad about comics.

"Yet, in this country, exactly only seven books have been devoted to the comic strip in the past 75 years since the form was created," he added. "Consider, then, the thousands of books that have been devoted to two other indigenous American art forms — films and jazz. Why have the comics been neglected?"

Blackbeard now is engaged in writing a definitive study of the comic strip — a task he believes will take the next three years. "Krazy Kat," cartoonist George Harriman's famous strip, has not been seen for more than 25 years, but as one of the first steps to be regarded seriously as artistic expression, provides a good example of Blackbeard's definition of "classic."

Among the stacks of yellowing newsprint he has collected are Happy Hooligan with his tomato can hat, the Captain and the Kids, the Katzenjammer Kids, Thimble Theater, Polly and Her Pals.

Blackbeard's treasure house shelters the first comic book published — an 1897 magazine reprint of R. F. Outcault's Yellow Kids strip, printed the previous year in the New York Journal. Some historians consider the Yellow Kid the earliest comic. Not so, Blackbeard claimed.

"THE COMIC strip was first invented in San Francisco," he said. "It was invented by Jimmy Swinnerton, a San Francisco Examiner artist."

He considered it the first strip because it had recurring characters — little bears — appearing in sequential panels with the words above.

However, Blackbeard gives credit for the "true" first comic strip in the modern sense to Rudolph Dirks, creator of Captain and the Kids in the old New York American.

JIM THOMPSON
"Case Closed"

Legend of a Missing Silk King

By ARNOLD DIBBLE

TANAH RATA, Malaysia (UPI) — They've closed the case on the mystery on Jim Thompson, but the pesant people of Cameron Highlands believe that somewhere, somehow, he is still alive.

Their gods tell them so.

H. W. (Jim) Thompson, 62, an American who became the "silk king" of Thailand by reviving an ancient weaving industry, disappeared on Good Friday, March 24, 1967, from a vacation bungalo called Moonlight House.

The sixth sense feelings of the residents may be a combination of mysticism and a Chamber of Commerce spirit that no one would dare to disappear and die in a land so lush and lovely as the Cameron Highlands.

MALAYSIAN police don't seem to agree with the legend makers. They have closed the case, canceled a standing reward of 10,000 Malaysian dollars ($3,333) and ruled out any possibility of kidnapping.

The life of Jim Thompson gave itself to mystery. A former OSS (U.S. Office of Strategic Services) officer during World War II, he had participated in his share of the cloak and dagger. And he had disappeared before. Once, after a lengthy disappearance, he reappeared and airily dismissed all by saying he had gone climbing in the Himalayas. Few believed the story implicitly.

The day of his last disappearance Thompson, a chain smoker and a popper of pills because of chronic illness, stepped out of his room at Moonlight House for "a short walk." He left his cigarettes and pills, indicating he expected to return in a few minutes.

Two days later, on Easter Sunday, Thompson was reported seen walking toward mountainous foothills, but the report was never verified.

More than 1,500 police, Air Force helicopters and aborigine trackers joined in the search. So did native medicine men.

Theories of what happened to Thompson are colorful, if unsubstantiated. Among them are theories that he was eaten by a tiger, that he was spirited off to Red China by Communists anxious to avenge some of his OSS deeds.

THE MOST bizzarre: That he was abducted by an amorous sakai (an aborigine woman) and held ever since as a prisoner of jungle love.

The scene of Jim Thompson's disappearance — the Cameron Highlands — is one of the most incredibly beautiful areas of Asia. It is a broad plateau 75 miles north of Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur at about the 5,000 foot level.

The Cameron Highlands was named for William Cameron, a British surveyor who discovered the area in 1885. Today it is one of Malaysia's most famous vegetable growing regions, and a favored vacation spot for fugitives from tropical heat. On the Cameron Highlands plateau, the temperatures range from 38 to 70 degrees Fahrenheit.

Total Moon Eclipse Coming Up Tuesday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An eclipse is coming up Tuesday night that will be not only beautiful but safe to behold.

It is a total eclipse of the moon by the earth. Assuming clear skies, it will be visible everywhere in the United States, starting at 9:32 p.m. PST.

You must never look directly at the sun when it is being eclipsed because doing so could make you blind.

But staring at a lunar eclipse is perfectly safe, barring any side effects resulting from rousing yourself from sleep at the requisite hours.

One reason an eclipse of the moon is lovely to look at is that even at totality, if the atmosphere is clean, it never entirely disappears but glows weirdly as a dull coppery red disc.

As worked out by Myron Miranian of the U.S. Naval Observatory, here is the lunar eclipse timetable:

Moon enters earth's shadow at 9:32 p.m. PST Tuesday.

Moon totally immersed in shadow at 11:03 am. Tuesday.

Moon starts emerging from shadow at 1:27 a.m.Wednesday.

Moon, freed of earth's shadow starts shining full again at 1:38 a.m.

In a solar eclipse the, moon gets between the earth and the sun. This produces a complete blotting out of the sun.

In a lunar eclipse, however, there is nothing between the earth and the moon except the long shadow cast by our planet when the sun is at its back and the moon is in just the right position out front to pass through the shadow.

The longer red rays of sunlight streaming past the earth are refracted by the atmosphere enough to bend them toward the moon illuminating it enough to make it still readily visible.

Lunar eclipses are observable somewhere on earth about once a year when the lineup of sun, planet, and moon are right. There have been eclipses when the moon was completely darkened.

A few years ago, probably as a result of volcanic dust, the sun's rays were not refracted by the earth's atmosphere and, for a moment, the moon disappeared from man's view.

Earthquake Jars Alaska

PALMER, Alaska (UPI) — A large earthquake occurred 70 miles south of Adak Saturday afternoon, the Palmer Observatory reported.

The quake was felt quite strongly at Adak, a spokesman said. He said there were no reports of injuries but there was some minor damage.

The earthquake, with a magnitude of 6.7 on the Richter scale, was not severe enough to cause a tidal wave, the spokesman said.

Numerous aftershocks were recorded.

GEN. JOHN D. RYAN
Parade Grand Marshal

Gen. Ryan to Lead Parade

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John D. Ryan will be grand marshal and reviewing officer, for the Torrance Armed Forces Day Parade and Celebration on May 14-15.

He will be the highest ranking officer so named in the event's 12-year history, Gen. Mark Bradley, USAF (ret.), general chairman, said Saturday.

THE TORRANCE affair is the largest civic-sponsored military celebration in the nation. Last year 8,000 members of the armed forces paraded and 135,000 spectators turned out for the two-day observance.

Gen. Ryan will hold a press conference prior to the 10 a.m. Saturday parade and speak at the post-parade luncheon at Long Beach Naval Station's Allen Center.

Gen. Ryan was named chief-of-staff Aug. 1, 1969, is a former boss of the Strategic Air Command and of the Pacific Air Forces. He was vice chief of staff prior to moving to the No. 1 spot.

In 1962 Gen. Ryan was named to Sports Illustrated's "Silver Anniversary Al America" squad, an honor for former grid stars successful in their professional careers after leaving college.

He played football at West Point and was graduated in 1938.

HIS CAREER took him to the European Theater in World War II where operations officer of the 5th Bombing Wing in Italy.

In the post war years he worked in advanced bombing techniques and weapons, commanded several wings and air divisions and then joined SAC as material director in 1956.

The general spent a year commanding the 2nd Air Force in Barksdale, La., before being named force inspector general in late 1963.

He became SAC's boss in December 1964 and commanded Pacific Air from August 1967 to August 1968. Gen. Ryan holds two Silver Stars for gallantry in combat.

'Youth Day' Leads Sea Ecology Events

By JACK BALDWIN
Marine Editor

An audience of more than 3,000 area high school and college students will participate in the "Youth Day" conference which will open the "Ocean '71 — National Conference and Exhibition on Marine Reccreation and conservation March 11 to 14 in the Pacific Terrace Convention Center in Long Beach.

The "Youth Day" conference will be unde rthe chairmanship of M. Jean-Michel Cousteau, president of the Living Sea Corporation, the firm designing the Museum of the Sea exhibits aboard the Queen Mary.

ACCORDING to Mrs. Pat Bridger, executive director of the four-day conference, Capt. Jacques Cousteau, star of the TV series, "Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" will join his son in participating in a Youth Day panel discussion with a select group of California high school and college students.

The panel, comprised of Cousteau; Ronald Linsky, coordinator of the Sea Grant Program, University of Southern California; Willard Bascom, president of Ocean Science and Engineering, Inc.; and conservationist Wesley Marx, author of the best-selling "The Frail Ocean," will debate the state of the environment with a student panel.

Sitting on the student panel will be Tee Guidotti, a college student and member of the Student Council on Pollution of the Environment; Ron Eber, an officer of the Student Environmental Confederation in California, South; and one high school student and one college student selected from the audience.

The conference is being staged as a public service venture by the American Society for Oceanography.

Other events of Student Day include an address, "the Future for Youth in Marine Related Fields," by Dr. Andreas B. Rechnitzer, the man who directed the dive to the bathy scaph Trieste to the deepest ocean floor; a color slide show, "The Beauty of the Ocean" and a new film "Gold from the Winfield Scott," by Richard Anderson who will also narrate the movie.

Thursday will also see the opening of the formal conference program. The opening session, National Environmental Control Policy Planning will include the following presentations, "Population Explosion, Control and Future Effects," Dr. Dudley Kirk of Stanford University; "Community Planning Compatible with the Environment," architect and master planner William Pereira; "Costs and Benefits in Conservation and Recreation," Fred Hoffman, assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget; "The Role of Federal Agencies in Environmental Research as Related to the Marine Field," Dr. Thomas C. Winter, National Council on Environmental Quality.

OTHERS who will appear include Robert Krueger, chairman of the California Advisory Commission on Marine and Coastal Resources; David Domenick, Federal Water Quality Administration Commissioner; Dr. Henry M. Hyatt, director of Maritime Plans, Department of Commerce.

Dr. Thomas Barrow, president of Humble Oil Company, and the American Society for Oceanography, will address the conference banquet aboard the Princess Louise Thursday night.

Friday will be highlighted by a special panel on Oil Spill Prevention and Control and will feature representatives of the U.S. Coast Guard, the Navy, Western Oil & Gas Association, California State Lands Commission, California Department of Fish and Game, U.S. Geological Survey, California Department of Conservation's State Inter-Agency Oil Spill Committee and the Federal Water Quality Administration.

tain material 4.6 billion years old.

Shepard and Mitchell left behind a science station that will continue to operate for months to probe the geological secrets of the moon.

AT CONE, they had no choice but to turn back.

The steep rise jammed with ragged boulders was just too much for them. Oxygen was limited and time and strength gave out.

Wrapped in their bulky suits, weighed down by their heavy back packs and tools, they struggled upward for 90 minutes, their breathing rapid and their words coming occasionally in choking gasps.

Their two-wheeled tool carrier, the first vehicle man has tried to use on the lunar surface, proved a burden on the rocky slope. Often they had to carry it up the boulder-strewn grade.

But even so, they gave up reluctantly.

Shepard, his heart beat soaring from a normal of 84 to about 150 beats a minute, was the first to suggest they stop and turn back. They had fallen behind on their time schedule, he said. Perhaps they should give it up.

"Aw, gee whiz, let's give it a whirl," said Mitchell, his breathing hard, deep and fast. "I think we'll find what we're looking for up there."

THEY FOUGHT on, cursing occasionally as rocks jammed the wheels of their cart and craters forced detours.

"Oh, it's hard, hard, hard," said Shepard, 47 and the oldest of the astronauts as he squeezed out the words with difficulty.

The angle of the slope increased and their struggle grew more intense.

"We're about maximum elevation now," gasped Shepard hopefully.

"Looks like we'll be approaching very shortly."

But it was too far and time was too short.

Finally, Mission Control ended the struggle, 1,000 feet from the rim, telling them to give it up, gather rock samples and start back down hill.

"That's the order of the day," said Shepard.

Lamented Mitchell "It's farther than it looks."

Later back in the lander, they talked ruefully of their battle against the crater.

"I think we just entirely underestimated the difficulty in going that far and getting that high in such a short time," said Mitchell. "It's a darn hard climb. The dust is too thin and mushy and the suits are bulky and all those problems are rolled together."

They he added, "It was too ambitious, I guess."

"It was just too great," said Shepard. "And the boulders and the craters and everything."

THE ASTRONAUTS gathered chunks of white rock they discovered near the Cone rim. They made readings with a magnetometer which tells scientists about the moon's magnetic field.

They also described formations of rocks with the sharp eye of trained geologists, and drove a core tube more than two feet into the soil. The tube preserves the material in its pristine layers for study on earth.

Scientists on earth were elated with the results of Apollo 14's lunar visit, particularly with Shepard and Mitchell's moon walks.

Excellent data was being received at Mission Control Saturday from the science station.

And the 9,000-foot moon hike produced much, despite the failure of Cone Crater.

"I would say results of the geology traverse were excellent," said Dr. Robin Brett, chief of the Manned Spacecraft Center's geochemistry branch. "They seemed to have covered the traverse well and they saw a variety of material and terrain."

McDONALD Observatory near El Paso, Tex., reported Saturday it has already hit a reflector on the moon with a laser light beam. The light was bounced off an instrument called the laser ranging retro-reflector. By measuring the time it takes the light to bounce back to earth, scientists can determine the distance between earth and moon.

The mountain climb was not the only struggle of the moon mission.

The astronauts and Mission Control have battled several mechanical problems.

Only hours after launch last Sunday, Roosa had to jam Kitty Hawk and Antares together six times before achieving a successful docking.

Later, a battery aboard Antares registered subnormal voltage.

After the astronauts checked the battery three times and Mission Control examined the findings, experts on ground decided the battery was not faulty. Antares was cleared to land.

Then, just four hours before the final descent to the moon, a switch began feeding a false signal to the lunar lander computer.

MISSION CONTROL examined data and decided the switch was contaminated, perhaps with a drop of loose solder. Unless the signal could be blocked, the computer would inadvertently rocket the spacecraft away from the moon instead of toward a landing.

Experts quickly designed a program which would tell the computer to ignore the false signal. Shepard and Mitchell fed the new program into the computer, outwitting the broken switch.

The procedure also forced Shepard to fly almost all of the final descent manually, without the guidance of the computer.

Apollo 14 will coast through space for more than 67 hours, the moon growing smaller behind them and the earth, which Shepard had called "home sweet home" while standing on the moon's surface, looming ever larger.

The spacecraft will scorch into the earth's atmosphere at 12:50 p.m., PST, Tuesday and splash down 14 minutes later in the Pacific Ocean 897 miles south of American Samoa.

Once back on earth, the spacemen face 18 days of quarantine.

THEY WILL be cloistered aboard a cramped trailer-like quarantine van aboard a Navy ship cruising to Samoa. There, they will transfer to a quarantine van aboard an Air Force jet and be flown to Ellington Air Force Base, not far from the Space Center.

The van will be removed to the Lunar Receiving Laboratory here and the astronauts will be isolated from the world until Feb. 26.

The quarantine is designed to keep any germs the astronauts acquired on the moon from being spread to other creatures of earth.

No such germs have been discovered from the two previous landings, but Apollo 14 was the first mission to the moon mountains. Scientists feared that the mountains may harbor bacteria which didn't exist in the flat plains where Apollo 11 and Apollo 12 landed.

NO LIVE COVERAGE ON APOLLO 14 TODAY

NEW YORK — The three major television networks plan no live coverage today of the Apollo 14 moon mission.

The Apollo astronauts will telecast 30 minutes of zero gravity experiments from their spaceship Kitty Hawk to Mission Control, beginning at 4:53 p.m. PST. Spokesmen for the networks said they planned to use taped excerpts of this telecast during their late evening news programs, pending unforeseen developments.

Live television coverage is scheduled to resume with Tuesday's splashdown.

Mapmaker Fra Mauro a Symbol

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Exactly 514 years ago Fra Mauro began work on what was to become the most accurate map of the earth the world had ever known.

Friday, two American astronauts began their explorations of that region of the moon named for that 15th-Century Italian cartographer. The symbolism was appropriate.

For, from what relatively little is know about the obscure Brother Mauro, he was a studious forward-thinking man, a monk who devoted his life to the meticulous study of geography and mapmaking and a man who, according to some experts, has never received proper credit for his cartographic contributions to man's explorations of his world.

Fra Mauro's map, which was titled "Mappa Mundi," was, for instance, the first to show that it was possible to sail around the southern tip of Africa. This was 30 years before the Portuguese Bartholomeu Diaz actually made the trip.

Fra Mauro's map was commissioned in 1457 by Prince Henry the Navigator of Portugal, whose interest in things maritime stimulated much of the earlier explorations, including Diaz's trip.

of head and chest wounds on the bedroom floor, by her daughter, 20-year-old Margery Alice Tayan, who also occupied the house.

Los Alamitos police began a house - to - house search for Lopez after Miss Tayan told them she had seen her father run out the back door of the home as she was making her way to the bedroom.

More than two hours after the search began, officers said they discovered Lopez crouched in a small chicken coop behind his home — dead of a single bullet wound in the head, apparently self-inflicted.

Shepard Lifetime Duffer

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — The U.S. Duffers Association president awarded a lifetime membership Saturday to the world's first lunar golfer, astronaut Alan B. Shepard Jr.

Bailey Root, head of the USDA which has more than 12,000 members across the nation, said that Shepard's "celebrated golf swing" qualified him for the membership. Root commissioned him as "president of the moon chapter of the USDA."

Root made the award via a telegram in care of the flight director of the Houston Space Center.

WHILE ON the lunar surface, Shepard took a one-handed swing at a golf ball he had smuggled aboard along with a makeshift 6-iron.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Alan Shepard's six-iron shot on the moon won him an invitation to the Greater Jacksonville Open Pro-Am Golf Tournament March 17.

Richard C. Martin, chairman of the event, extended the invitation.

The telegram read: "Following your great success in conquering the sand traps of the moon, may we invite you to try your six-iron on the traps of Hidden Hills Country Club March 17 in the Greater Jacksonville Open Pro-Am. Best wishes for a safe journey home."

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — After hitting a golf ball during his walk on the moon Saturday, Astronaut Alan B. Shepard was invited to demonstrate his lunar technique in the first Little American Golf Classic Satellite Tournament at Akron's Firestone Country Club Aug. 2.

Exports to S. Africa

OTTAWA (AP) — The Trade Department reported Canadian exports to South Africa were expected to top $100 million for 1970 when the final figures are computed.

record — but then he's not in the world right now."

"Eight-hundred yards?" gasped star Jack Nicklaus. "With a six-iron? I guess a tee shot would go into orbit then, wouldn't it?"

Nicklaus, reading about the Fra Mauro mountain area on the moon where Shepard staged his golf exhibition said, "It doesn't sound to me as if the moon is a good place to build a golf course."

"I wonder if anybody raked the sand traps for him?" Palmer mused.

AT PHOENIX, Ariz., where stars of pro football and baseball are competing in a fun-type tournament, there was nothing but admiration for Shepard.

Harden made the club for Shepard by removing the shaft and replacing it with a 4½-inch steel shaft. It was devised so an astronaut's all-purpose 30-inch handle could be inserted in the end.

The handle is used for moonwalk chores involving a shovel and an ax. Some viewers thought one of his swings had a bit of a chop in it.

Within hours after his first lunar game, Shepard's handicap was being questioned.

Jack Burke Jr., former Masters and PGA winner who operates Houston's Champions Golf Club, said Shepard "plays pretty good . . . in the low 80's and high 70's. I would say his handicap probably is less than 15, maybe 10."

'Harmony, Efficiency' Are Key Words at NATO

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of short stories by Military Editor Buck Lanier, just returned from a tour of U.S. forces in Europe in connection with the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance.

By BUCK LANIER
Military Editor

MONS, Belgium — The Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe sits quietly near this picturesque city 40 miles from Brussels, NATO headquarters since mid-1967.

It is a huge building where 2,850 military personnel from NATO countries go about their business efficiently.

NATO operates on the credo "an attack upon one is an attack upon all." Its member nations are the United States, United Kingdom, Denmark, Norway, The Netherlands, Portugal, Italy, Luxembourg, Turkey, Greece, Canada, Iceland, Belgium and West Germany — the last country to enter in 1955.

FRANCE, which dropped out of military participation on July 1, 1966, but still permits usage of pipeline facilities to the member nations, is not considered fully out it and keeps up socio-political interests.

The U.S., Britain and France are the only nuclear-capable nations within the alliance framework.

"We feel France would become an active partner if there were a full-scale attack," a NATO official said during an interview.

The building and its occupants were jolted into reality in August, 1968, when Russia invaded Czechoslovakia — with NATO radars suddenly clouding out at a critical pre-invasion time.

"It won't happen again," a spokesman said, "for this lesson in electronic countermeasures made us get better fast."

NATO is costly, particularly to Uncle Sam who pays about $14 billion a year, but has just concluded wresting some "we'll do more" commitments from its partners to the tune of $1 billion.

ARMY Gen. Andrew Goodpaster is the boss at SHAPE — at the top of an involved command structure that sees many general officers wearing two hats. . .

Gen. Goodpaster is considered an excellent liaison man, too, well liked by the top men from the partnership countries.

He has instantaneous communications with President Nixon and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The presence of 295,000 U.S. soldiers, airmen, sailors and marines has been criticized often in the U.S., but the President has said there will be no more review of troops strength until mid-1972.

A look at NATO and its general concept nets many conclusions from all sources. Here are a few observations:

NATO will be 22 years old on April 4 and looks with pride on not losing one foot of its territory to Communist aggression.

Despite numerous problems and obstacles the member nations have prospered economically, retained their political independence and devleoped military strength.

True, Marshall Plan assistance after World War II was the impetus. "They took the ball (of money) and ran with it well, parlaying it into progress and stability," an American Embassy official said in Brussels.

ANY unilateral U.S. withdrawal, unless and until other-country NATO units were ready to fill in the vacuum, could make the entire alliance vulnerable to Soviet political and military blackmail.

Some extreme viewing officials say it could lead to World War III.

Another school of thought maintains the U.S. could fulfill its NATO commitment by keeping only a fraction of its present troop level in Europe — 50,000 men to serve as symbolic hostages against a surprise Soviet attack.

Others argue any military conflict in Europe would escalate on short notice to all-out nuclear war in any case.

NATO's announced official strategy has shifted from "massive retaliation" to "flexible response." The new idea is based on "meeting any aggression with direct defense at approximately the same level and "to deter through the possibility of escalation."

The "flexible response" strategy will do nothing but buy time for decision-makers, a NATO official said, but elimination of the threat of massive detaliation has increased the possibility of conventional war.

DESPITE the Soviet/Warsaw Pact a 30-1 advantage in general purpose forces, U.S./Nato troops armed with and permitted to use tactical nuclear weapons could probably hold their ground against even a large surprise attack from East Europe.

Introduction of the "nukes" are considered by many experts as precipitator of full-scale nuclear escalation on both sides.

Thus the safest course, as most military leaders believe, is to maintain both a credible nuclear deterrent and a strong conventional force to combat aggression — without using nuclear weapons — by Soviet-Warsaw Pact conventional forces.

'WHAT NATION NEEDS'

New Maddox Goal: Religious TV Show

LESTER MADDOX
Presidency Second Choice

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — As Lester Maddox sees it, the future of the nation may be determined by the success of a religious television program — starring Maddox — called "Testimony Time."

If it fails, the Georgia lieutenant governor and ex-governor said in an interview, he probably will run for president with an excellent chance of winning.

If it succeeds, Maddox said he can do more good as the show's emcee than he could as president.

"THE PEOPLE who do agree with me will watch it, and so will the people who don't," he said. "Those who don't agree with me are the ones I want to reach because they need help."

Maddox moved from the governor's office to the lieutenant governor's office last month. If he ran for president, he would do so as a Democrat, Maddox said.

"First and foremost in my thoughts now are to develop my 'Testimony Time' program," he said. "If I could meet success in this, I'd rather do that than run for president.

"If I determine that this will not be the best course and I could better serve as president, then this will be my goal."

Maddox hopes to inaugurate the show this summer with a nationwide audience. It will have religious discussions, singing groups and talks by Maddox, who said he also would "join in some of the singing."

"This is what the nation needs now," he said. "It doesn't have a show like this. It has preachers and church services but you don't have the laymen themselves in a good strong religious program."

The show presently is in the formative stage, said Maddox, a Baptist who doesn't drink or smoke and uses "phooey" as his strongest language.

Maddox also disclosed two lucrative offers.

"I'VE BEEN offered $50,000 plus stock in the corporation for an hour-long television show on Lester Maddox," he said.

He said he also has been offered $50,000 for a 20-speech tour of the nation. The offers are under consideration.

St. Paul's Cathedral 'Unsafe'

LONDON (UPI) — St. Paul's Cathedral, architectural masterpiece of Sir Christopher Wren and a major Pride of Britain, is falling down.

The Lord Mayor of London, Sir Peter Studd, kicked off a $7.2-million drive Friday to save the cathedral, which has stood atop Ludgate Hill in the heart of London's business and financial center for 261 years, narrowly escaping German bombing in World War II.

Studd said parts of the cathedral were in danger of falling down. If restoration did not begin immediately, he said, "it would be unsafe to allow visitors into the west end of the cathedral or onto the steps."

"If a major portion of St. Paul's — say the west front — collapsed down Ludgate Hill, the cost of restoration would be immense," said the dean of the cathedral, The Very Rev. Martin Sullivan. "We would have a disaster appeal on our hands."

Lord Amory, former chancellor of the exchequer, outlined a seven-year reconstruction plan to save the cross-shaped cathedral whose lantern-shaped dome topped by a cross rises to 365 feet above the pavement.

The projected repairs will cost an estimated four times the $1.8 million.

U.S. Judge to Hear SEC Case in Texas Financial Scandal

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The case to come before U.S. District Court Judge Sarah T. Hughes in federal court here Monday may well present her with the greatest challenge of her 10-year career on the bench.

The plaintiffs, lodging a civil suit to seek a preliminary injunction, are lawyers from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, official watchdog over fair play in the nation's stock market.

The defendants are 11 business firms ranging from banks to insurance corporations and holding companies, and 14 individuals who are mostly top executives of those same fields. Some of the defendants are lawyers themselves. One, Waggoner Carr, is a former attorney general of Texas.

JUDGE SARAH HUGHES
Faces Greatest Challenge

TWO OTHER corporate defendants — the Dallas Bank and Trust Co. and the City Bank and Trust Co., Dallas — were dismissed from the suit without coming to court. So was Joseph P. Novotny, a former president of Sharpstown State Bank in Houston, who was until recently a high officer in the two banks released. All accepted a permanent injunction.

Thus far the only criminal indictment is against Michael Angel Socrates Makris on charges of making three false statements to SEC agents.

The case broke Jan. 19, when the SEC filed its voluminous evidence charging stock manipulation and fraud with Judge Hughes' court.

Top politicians found themselves unwillingly dragged into the limelight although they have never been defendants.

Past business dealings, outlined in detail in depositions or sworn affidavits, were raked over in the harsh light of press and television publicity.

Those named read like a roll-call of the most prominent persons in the state:

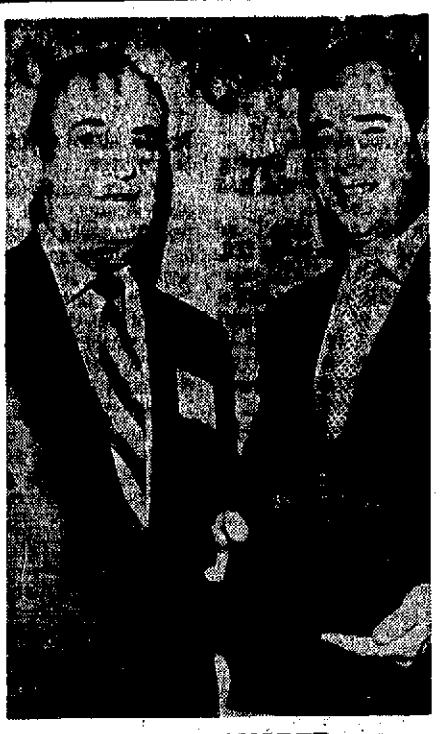

GOV. Preston Smith; House Speaker Gus Mutscher Jr., along with his father and two top aides, Rush McGinty and Sonny Schulte, Reps. Tommy Shannon of Fort Worth, Bill Heatly of Paducah and Ben Atwell of Dallas, former Gov. Allan Shivers, and Elmer Baum, State Democratic Chairman and member of the State Banking Board.

Churchmen too — the Rev. Michael F. Kennelly of Loyola University, New Orleans, and the Jesuit Fathers of Houston Inc. — found themselpes being questioned about their business dealings and banking. If the SEC case is proved, they were victims to the tune of several million dollars.

And, like an ever recurring theme all through, comes the insistent suggestion that some improper pressure could have been brought to bear on officials and legislators handling the 1969 banking insurance bill, which legislature passed but the governor vetoed. The SEC has suggested John W. Sharp, Houston builder and financier and a defendant, had interest in relief legislation because he was hampered by federal regulations in his dealings with the banks.

THE SEC says the defendants stepped outside the context of ordinary business practice by establishing companies which "were used as nothing more than a vehicle for the enrichment of the promoters, with a complete disregard for any potential harm done to the public."

Manipulation of stock in National Bankers Life Insurance Co., Olympia Life Insurance Co. and Master Control Inc. is alleged.

Mother, 2 Children Die in Fire

RICE LAKE, Wis. (AP) — A mother and her two children died Saturday when fire swept their farm home at Campia, six miles northeast of Rice Lake, in 12 below zero weather.

Killed were Mrs. Eugene Matts, 26, and her sons, Mark, 10, and Monte, 8.

The only survivor of the blaze was the 29-year-old husband and father.

Matts told authorities the family was awakened about 6 a.m., and discovered that the house was filled with smoke. Matts began leading his wife and children from the frame structure but they became separated in the dense smoke.

MATTS, the only one to get out, tried to return to search for the others but was unable to do so because of the smoke and flames. He ran a quarter of a mile to a neighbor's home and summoned the fire department.

When firemen from Rice Lake and Birchwood reached the scene, the house had been destroyed.

70,000 Abortions in 6 Mos.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Nearly 70,000 pregnancies were terminated in New York City, with a loss of 12 women's lives, in the first six months of readily-available abortion in the state, it was announced Saturday.

City Health Service Administrator Gordon Chase said the mortality rate of abortions in the city is eight per 100,000 compared to 17 in Britain and 40 in Scandinavia during the first year of liberalized abortion in those countries.

Seven of the 12 abortions which resulted in death were started outside of hospitals, at least one of them in a doctor's office, Chase said.

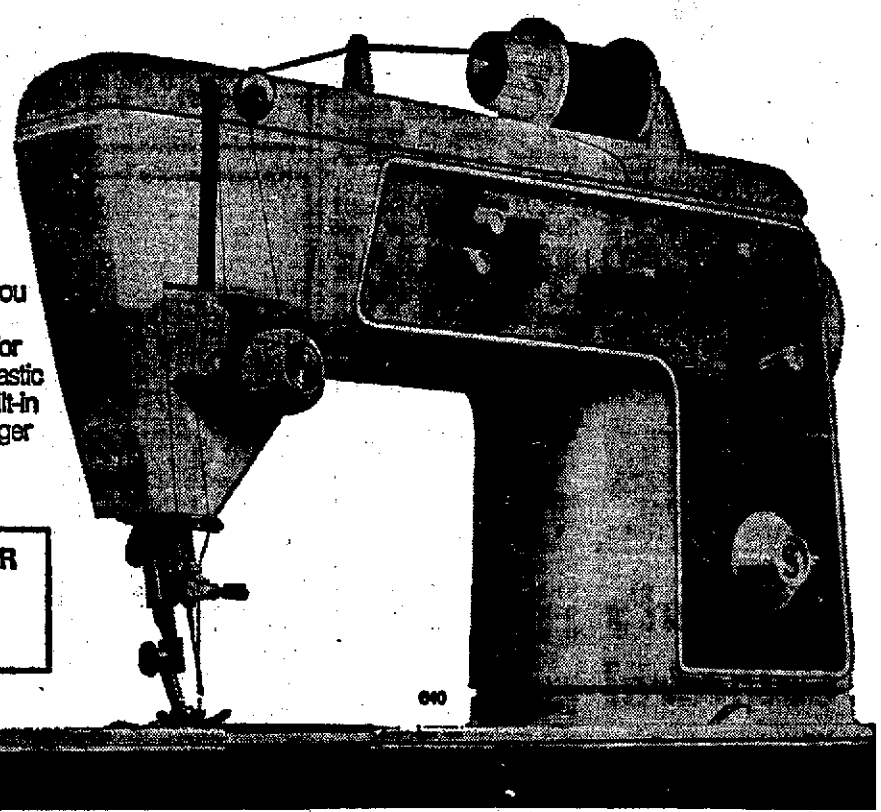

OFFICE abortions have been forbidden in the city since Oct. 19, when the adoption of new regulations limited performance of the procedure to hospitals, hospital-associated clinics or "mini-hospital" independent clinics.

Chase said the statistics indicate a trend toward earlier abortions, a development which he welcomed because it lessens the likelihood of complications.

During July and August, the first two months of liberalized abortion in New York State, 86.6 per cent of abortions were performed in the 12th week of pregnancy or earlier: in September and October, 70.8 per cent were early abortions and in November and December the percentage was 73.7.

Oil Prices Slated to Increase

By DEAN C. MILLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices on petroleum products, from gasoline for the family automobile to oil for industry, are going up. The question is by how much.

This is the conclusion to be drawn after days of (so far) fruitless haggling between 15 of the world's largest oil companies, mostly American, and 10 of the biggest oil-producing countries, mostly Arabian.

The two sides agreed in negotiations at Tehran, Iran, that the oil producing countries should get more money for their oil. They disagreed on how much. The current posted price on a barrel of light Arabian crude is $1.80.

IT HAS BEEN estimated that the producing countries in 1960 had a 50-50 split on the profits. "Now," said one New York oil executive, "they're getting 75-80 per cent of the pie."

THE SHAH of Iran suggested that a way out could be found in a formula adopted last Dec. 15 by Venezuela.

The Venezuelans increased, via the legislative route, a tax on its crude oil from 52 to 60 per cent.

It increased Venezuela's share in the profits to 80 per cent, making it the highest paid oil-producing country in the world.

Delegates from other oil producing countries (Iraq, Libya, Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Algeria, Indonesia, Abu Dhabi and Qatar) endorsed the Shah's suggestion and called for solidarity among the oil-producing countries. The Shah's suggestion came after talks between the countries and oil companies broke down after there had been reports the Arabs might shut down the pipelines.

THE LOSS of Mideast and African oil could produce an energy crisis in Western Europe and Japan which would spread quickly to the United States, industry sources agreed.

"If negotiations broke down and the Arabs stopped their oil, Western Europe and Japan would be out of energy, and maybe out of business as we know it today, in about 60 days," said a ranking oil executive in New York. "They'd have to go on oil and gas rationing just like wartime, and so probably would we to protect them. We probably could pull it through, but what a mess!"

While the United States gets only 3 per cent of its oil from the negotiating countries, U.S. companies are involved with 60 per cent of the organization's oil. Three million U.S. shareholders in American oil companies and 10 million persons involved in American mutual funds and pension plans would stand to lose money.

Nixon, Aides Spend Night at Camp David

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, accompanied by two aides, flew Saturday for an overnight stay at Camp David, the presidential mountaintop retreat in nearby Maryland.

With Nixon were Henry A. Kissinger and H. R. Haldeman, each a presidential assistant.

The President is scheduled to return to the White House today.

Copter Crash Kills 8 GIs

SAIGON (AP) — Eight American servicemen were killed and a ninth injured Saturday afternoon in the crash of a big U.S. Army helicopter 25 miles west of Tam Ky, U.S. military headquarters reported today.

A spokesman said the crash was due to "operational causes" and no enemy action was involved. The helicopter, a CH47 Chinook, went down in an area about 350 miles northeast of Saigon.

FUNNIES

ANGULAR

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Chamberlain, 21, who claims she was fired as a cocktail waitress because she was flat-chested, lost her case before the state Human Rights Division.

Miss Chamberlain filed a complaint after she was dismissed from a Holiday Inn in Syracuse. She claimed her lack of substantial measurements had been interpreted by the restaurant as bad for their interests.

The division ordered the complaint dismissed and said she was "terminated from her employment because the respondents believed her costume did not properly fit her."

The hearing officer said Miss Chamberlain did not want the costume to fit tightly.

TOUGH EGG

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI)—A clean-cut young man politely asked for an egg sandwich at the Quarrier Diner.

When the sandwich arrived, he rolled it neatly in a paper napkin and without batting an eye gulped down the whole bundle in a few bites. On his way out, he turned and scowled: "That was the toughest egg sandwich I ever ate."

SIT DOWN

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Several members of the Oklahoma Senate offered amendments to an anticampus riot bill, but the most original was Sen. Leon Field's proposal.

Field suggested campus rioters be sentenced to sit in the electric chair for seven days. The amendment failed.

TRUSTING

MIAMI (AP) — "You name it and we'll charge it," said Ben Shecter, who introduced credit cards at Temple Zion.

Shecter is financial secretary at the conservative synagogue which has a membership of 450 south Dade County families. The annual membership fee of $225 per family can be charged, as can Bar Mitzvah and confirmation costs.

"It makes it easier for people who can't afford to pay their dues on time," said Shecter.

WHO SAID?

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's Roman Catholic bishops attacked Friday the leftist government's plan to legalize divorce and quoted Karl Marx to prove their point.

"Nobody is obliged to marry, but one who does should be obliged to observe the laws of matrimony," Marx was quoted as saying in the 1,000-word document issued by the 17 bishops of this predominantly Catholic country.

The coalition government of President Salvador Allende has as its principal members two Marxist parties — the Communists and the Socialists. Allende is a member of the Socialist party.

IN ERROR

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh legislator told a legislative subcommittee that attorneys are not infallible.

Rep. Sam Johnson, himself an attorney, made his point by saying, "I recently had a call from a client about some difficulty he was in and I told him, 'Don't worry, they can't put you in jail for that.'"

The client replied, "But I'm calling from the jail."

OUTDATED

LONDON (UPI) — David Shilling, a 22-year-old insurance man, says he is fed up with jokes about his almost-obsolete last name and wants it changed. He said the jokes began when it was announced Britain would eliminate the shilling from its currency system when money is decimalized next week.

A HAZARD

CHORLEY, England (UPI) — When Jack Barrows arrived at the local maternity hospital with his pregnant wife, he found the door locked. Barrows was so anxious about the pending baby that he smashed the barrier down, and Mrs. Barrows became so excited she had her child in the wreckage.

Hospital authorities said they were having the door repaired and added: "We regard the damage to the door as a normal hazard of our business."

BY CHOICE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The women's lib group at Florida State University, an opponent of the idea that a woman's place is in the kitchen, decided to raise some cash. So the members held a bake sale.

Ecologists Fight for Free Speech

By GIL BAILEY
Contributing Editor

SACRAMENTO — The professional ecologists were fighting here last weekend.

The battle was over something pretty basic: Freedom of speech, or in this case freedom to express an opinion.

The ecologists were members of the American Fisheries and Wildlife Societies, marine biologists, game and fish managers, range experts and college professors in the subject.

Most of them are employed by federal or state agencies.

The question was: Should the societies take stands on environmental issues in which the membership has expertise?

The simple answer would seem to be an unqualified yes.

However, at the same convention a year ago the head of the State Department of Fish and Game had made a pretty strong speech.

GIL BAILEY

In so many words he told the state employes, "Sit down and shut up if you disagree with state policy."

And those words were for the societies too.

The federal government is a little less democratic, if possible.

It has a rule that its employes cannot hold office in any organization which might disagree with federal policy.

AS A RESULT the societies don't pass resolutions, although they can occasionally issue something called "statements."

On such key issues as the peripheral canal, the California Water Project, placement of sewage treatment plants and outfalls, construction of new dams, routes of freeways, et al, the guts of the environmental issues, these men with their specialized knowledge must remain silent.

The conflict over "advocacy" was welcomed by these men. They, in fact, asked for it, starting off one day with a five-member panel instructed to tell them what they should do.

Some of the words were harsh. For once, I can quote without fear of being charged with misquotation, as

Some of the words were harsh. For once, I can quote also representative of what others said:

"I do believe these environmental problems can be explained and must be explained to the public. And I believe it is the responsibility of the men in the field with the expertise to make that explanation. If you, the professionals, do not do that job, then you are not doing your job. It is as simple as that.

"And I am afraid that many of you are failing in that responsibility.

"THERE HAS BEEN a discussion here as to whether you should become advocates. If you are true professions, instead of false professions, I think in many areas you must become advocates."

Representatives of the Sierra Club, the legal profession and of the public agreed. These men should speak out.

One if the members asked from the floor about speaking out against state policy when you are a state employe.

Speak, was the reply, but pick a spokesman who doesn't work for the state.

The traditional role of these men and their societies has been to feed in information only, not opinions or value judgments. And then these men have lived with the political decisions made in their areas of expertise.

Some of them want to have a say now.

They should have a say, the public needs their evaluations and judgments.

So, gentlemen of Fish and Game, of the Federal Park Service, of Federal Bureau of Land Management, speak out—not forgetting to protect your backs—but speak up.

It will do some good.

Ashes From Burned Garbage Can Be Useful

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Ashes from burned urban garbage can easily and profitably be transformed into high quality, bricks, cement, or concrete highway fill, a Philadelphia research scientist has suggested.

Little modification of existing brick or cement factories would be needed, said Dr. P.E.D. Morgan.

And — in addition to environmental considerations — the process might save the $3 billion spent last year to dispose of 150 million tons of urban garbage, he told the American Chemical Society Friday.

"Between the years 1965 and 2000, New York alone will produce enough to cover Manhattan Island to a depth of 36 feet," added Morgan, of The Franklin Institute Research Laboratories.

The scientist said stronger than average bricks could be made from incinerator ashes ground into a powder.

By grinding the powder more finely and adding the proper proportions of lime and water, a cement as strong or stronger than Portland cement can be made, he maintained.

Road aggregate can be produced by partially melting or "slagging" the incinerator residue in an arc furnace, said the scientist, separating about 63 per cent of the iron or tin for later reuse.

Morgan said merely burning the garbage will provide enough energy to power the slagging process.

It would presently cost about as much in Philadelphia to add slagging equipment to the garbage incinerators as it does to dispose of incinerator residue and purchase new road aggregate, said Morgan.

However, he predicted that the economics will be much more favorable within five or 10 years because of higher costs of mining aggregate and of transporting the incinerator residues.

He is presently working on a pilot plant model, Morgan told the sixth Middle Atlantic regional meeting of the American Chemical Society, meeting this week in the Baltimore Civic Center.

Yank Delicacies?

PARIS (UPI) — Inno, one of the city's biggest supermarket chains, urged Parisians to sample "The latest made in U.S.A. delicacies: Le hot dog relish; les korn kurls; les peanuts brittle; pineapple schunks; canned corn and chow mein."

'Narcotics Factory' in Harlem Raided

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two men and a woman were arrested early Saturday in a raid on a Harlem "narcotics factory" which netted two kilos of pure heroin worth over $500,000 on the illegal market and $10,000 intended as a bribe, police said.

Police charged James Muller, Huster Harris and Cheryl Cherry with possession of narcotics and weapons and bribery.

Solon Urges Fleet to Hunt Down Air, Water Polluters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressman proposed Saturday that a small fleet of ocean-going ships about to be mothballed be converted to a task force to seek out air and water polluters.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., said in a statement that five 100-foot long tugs and a 442-foot World War II liberty ship could prowl the nation's major rivers and the coastlines seeking evidence of pollution.

Rogers said the vessels now are assigned to the Army's chemical-biological warfare test command, headquartered in the Utah desert, and have a primary mission of checking for atomic energy fallout around Pacific Ocean atomic testing sites.

Rogers said the fleet has been ordered retired because of cuts in military budgets. He said he had already asked Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird to keep the fleet active until the new Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the Interior Department determine whether his plan to use them for pollution fighting is feasible.

"These ships have the capability right now to detect air pollution and I have been assured they can be easily converted and equipped at very little expense to sample and test for water pollution," said Rogers. He estimated cost of operation of the fleet would be about $2 million a year.

"We could, for instance, send one ship down the Ohio River from Pittsburgh and then down the Mississippi River into the Gulf of Mexico," said Rogers.

German Airliner Offers Pay Hikes

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — Lufthansa, the German airline, and the Public Transport Services Union agreed Saturday on pay raises for ground personnel in hopes of ending a nine-day strike. The walkout had crippled the carrier's domestic and international services.

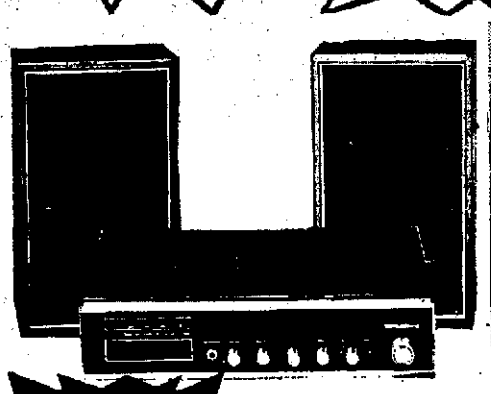

An airline spokesman vote Sunday on a 15 per cent boost in salaries offered by the company.

Wounded Viet Vet Denies Drug Abuse Can Be Linked to 'Fragging'

By JOHN LUNGREN Jr.
Staff Writer

A Vietnam veteran who lost a leg in the war contends the new war zone problem called "fragging" cannot be blamed on drug abuse.

Ron Williams, 28, of Long Beach, who served in Vietnam as a Marine fire team leader from September 1968 to January 1969 before he was wounded, disagrees with statements made by a Texas congressman linking fragging to marijuana and drug users.

RON WILLIAMS
Veteran Disagrees

"FRAGGING" is a slang term that describes attempts by American soldiers to injure or kill their own superior officers. The expression is derived from the "fragmentation grenade," an explosive charge that has been used frequently in such attempts.

Rep. Richard White, D-Tex., a member of the House Armed Forces Committee, who recently returned from a Vietnam inspection trip, said last week that the use of marijuana and drugs may be an underlying cause of the problem.

"Pot isn't what is making the fraggings," Williams says. "It is the 45-year-old sergeant who fights this war like World War II was fought."

"WHEN AN inflexible sergeant or inexperienced officer keeps harassing you when he is supposed to be helping you stay alive, then naturally the angered soldier will respond with violence," Williams says.

However, Williams was careful to say that he is not justifying or condoning fragging but only trying to understand and explain why it does occur.

He says that when soldiers know they are being withdrawn, especially in such an unpopular war, they do not want to be the last to die. The soldier just wants to do his job, protect himself and his buddy and be left alone.

"Drugs are not the problem — at least 90 per cent of men in my platoon smoked marijuana — but never on major patrols," he said. "It is the psychological and social attitudes the war has given the soldier."

WILLIAMS served in the Fourth Regiment of the Third Marine Division. He was leading a patrol out of Con Thien near the demilitarized zone when he was hit from behind by an enemy round just below the knee.

Because it was dark it took one hour to bring him inside the base perimeter and 15 hours to evacuate him to a hospital. His leg had to be amputated above the knee.

"I am sure President Nixon has his reasons for a staged withdrawal but there still will be a last man killed," Williams says.

He added that he thought Vietnam was a pretty country — except for the bomb craters.

Australian Flood

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — More rain was forecast Saturday for flood-ravaged New South Wales, where 21 persons have died in the worst flooding in 50 years. Damage has been estimated at $224 million.

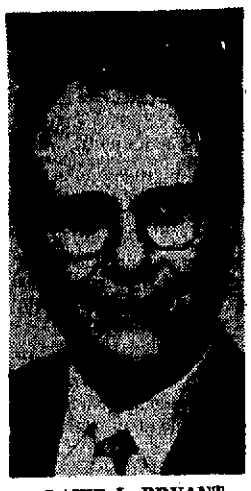

Polio Clinic to Be Held in Norwalk

An evening immunization clinic will be held at the Norwalk Health Center, 12360 Firestone Blvd., from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Offered will be immunizations against rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio, 10-day red measles and smallpox.

All immunizations will be free for children under six years of age. For older children there will be a $2 charge for 10-day measles and $1 for polio. Parents unable to pay will not be charged. Adults may be immunized against smallpox and diphtheria-tetanus for no charge.

Dr. Earl Kendrick, Bellflower district health officer, said that to be completely protected a child should receive three diphtheria-tetanus shots, two doses of oral polio vaccine, one 10-day measles shot, one rubella and one smallpox.

Soviet Hero Dies

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet air ace Amet-Khan Sultan, who shot down 49 German planes during World War II, died recently while test-piloting an experimental aircraft, the armed forces newspaper Red Star said Saturday. Sultan, 50, was twice named hero of the Soviet Union and held three Orders of Lenin, the highest Soviet decoration.

MARCUSE ADVISES RADICALS:

Violence on Campus 'Criminal' and 'Stupid'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philosopher Herbert Marcuse's current message for the young radicals who idolize him — violent acts are "criminal" and "stupid."

Even the non-violent sit-in is no longer useful, according to the 72-year-old teacher, who has been denounced by groups as diverse as the American Legion and the Soviet newspaper Pravda.

Marcuse, now a professor at the University of California at San Diego, also says he has turned down the role of spiritual adviser to the student movement but still defends it as a "vital social and political force."

"I have always rejected the role of a father or grandfather of the movement," Marcuse said in an interview in the current issue of psychology today. "I am not its spiritual adviser . . . they don't need me.

They don't need to be violent either, Marcuse said.

"There are acts of violence by pseudopolitical radicals that I think are stupid, criminal and only play into the hands of the establishment," Marcuse said. "Terror has been effective historically only if the terrorizing groups are already in power.

"Groups trying to gain power have never been able to use terror effectively. Look at the anarchists and nihilists in Russia. It didn't help one bit."

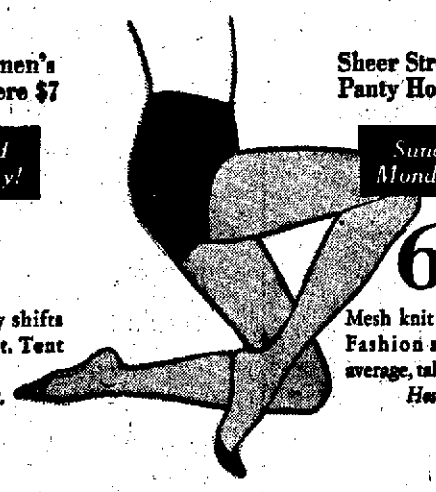

Sit-ins, one of the mainstays of campus actions, may be non-violent but they are still proving to costly, Marcuse said.

MALCOLM EPLEY

AN INGENIOUS answer to the Ecuador tunaboat fishing problem has been cooked up by a lively bunch here known as the Hof's Hut Liberational League.

Writing Pres. Nixon, the HHLL proposes the U.S. recommission the battleship New Jersey as a fishing troller, stationing it about 13 miles off the coast of Ecuador to peacefully fish in international waters.

"We doubt seriously if Ecuador would shoot at any U.S. citizen fishing from such a vessel," said the letter, pointing out that heretofore, captured U.S. tunaboats were small and unarmed, compared to the ex-U.S. destroyers used by Ecuador to harrass them.

A bow to HHLL for a great idea. Bring out the Jersey.

BEFORE going to vote in Tuesday's school tax override election, citizens should be sure to check their sample ballot material for the correct polling places. They are generally different from the polling places used in regular elections.

As for the tax over-ride, I'm voting "Yes." Here's an area in which I think we should be sure to provide the means of doing the job. I no longer have a youngster in school, but my daughter went from kindergarten through high school here and I am grateful for the good education she was provided at a reasonable cost. I feel obligated to help others, with kids still in school, to get equally good service.

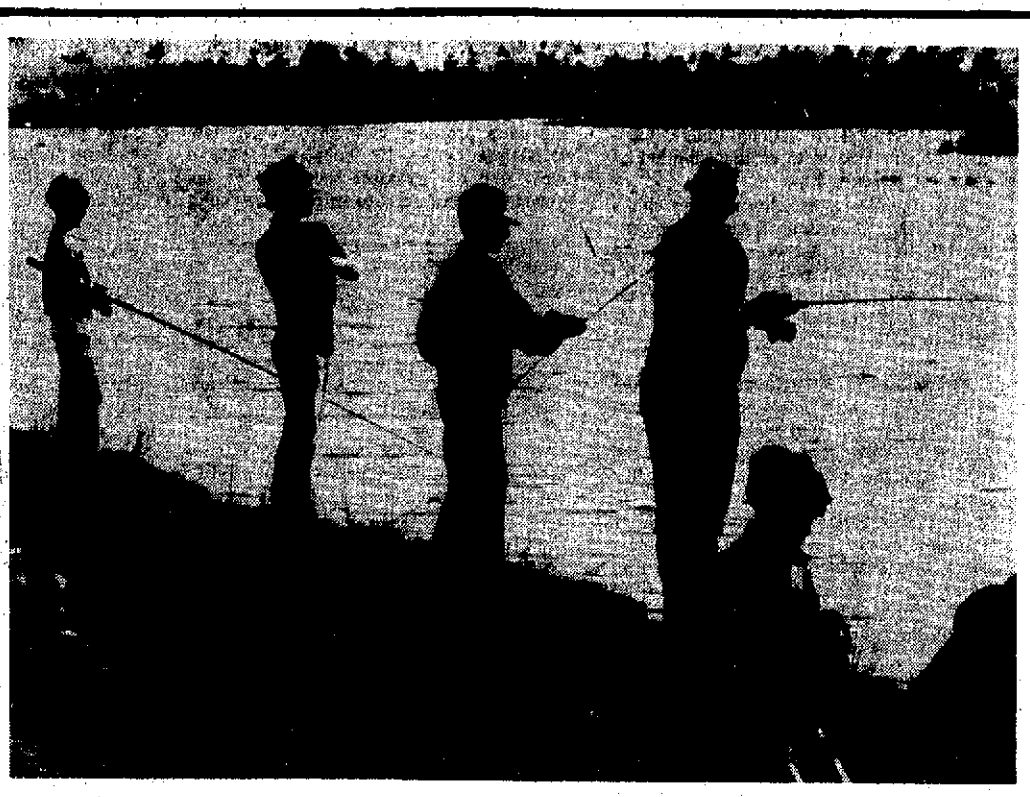

Several readers have written me about the amount of the over-ride, which is specified on the ballot, but which could be misconstrued in its immediate effect. What this vote proposes to do is to raise the limit to the designated figure, but the tax won't be raised to that level immediately, and probably not for several years. Last time we raised the limit it was eleven years before the added authority was "used up."

Finally, I'm not forgetting this: When there was a vicious, crippling teacher strike in L.A. last year, attempts were made to get Long Beach teachers to stage a one-day strike. Our teachers voted it down, 4 to 1, in effect rebuking the L.A. strikers. I resolved then to remember that when our teachers and the district came up with a reasonable financing proposal. The time is here.

DRIFTWOOD — If you wonder if people read the papers, consider the experience of Jim Gray and the typographical boo-boo that occurred in his published announcement as a school board candidate. The story said that Jim had won the "armed vice award" and his phone rang all day with buffoons making all sorts of wisecracks, lame and otherwise. Jim's comment: "I'm against armed vice and printing errors."

S. F. Scott doubts the validity of the charge that sheriff's deputies "shot to kill" at the riot which followed a Chicano rally in L.A. He notes there was only one fatality "and the deputies must be better shots than that." . . . On a sober line, I think it was encouraging that Sheriff Pitchess fired three deputies for abusing prisoners. It shows a determination to maintain standards, although one has to admit that provocations become almost unbearable in these tough and riotous situations.

Not all Hatfields and McCoys are fussin' and feudin', even when thrown into close contact. In a room of Memorial Hospital, Tracy Hatfield and Joseph McCoy are sympathizin' and empathizing with one another as they recover from identical, vascular surgery.

EL DORADO EAST

Park Opening Lures Hundreds

Several hundred persons turned out Saturday for the official opening of the 157-acre central section of El Dorado Park East. Although some listened dutifully as City Councilman Thomas J. Clark spoke and Park Director Don Obert, photo at lower left, traced the history of the park, others, such as the boy rigging his fishing tackle as Obert spoke, couldn't wait to try the facilities. Left, fishermen try their luck in the 7.6 acres of lakes, which have been stocked with 50,000 bullhead, pumpkinseed fish and trout. And below, the first bowmen try out the archery range. The range is equipped with special paths for use by those in wheelchairs. The new section, which lies between Wardlow Road and Spring Street, just east of the San Gabriel River, ultimately will also provide day and overnight camping and bridle and bicycle paths.

Better-Schools Caravan Plans Rally at LBCC

Caravans from 76 locations in Long Beach, Lakewood, and Signal Hill and airborne teams from Catalina Island will converge on the men's gymnasium at Long Beach City College, beginning at 1 p.m. today for the Better Schools Rally that ushers in a 48-hour victory drive to pass local school tax limit proposals on Tuesday. Overflow seating is being provided in the adjoining women's gymnasium.

"We believe we will have the greatest outpouring of supporters dedicated to saving of schools that has ever been assembled in a district of this size," said Henry Clock, co-chairman with William Williams of the S.O.S. Committee. "Additional thousands of our local citizens are coming daily to the realization that we are voting not only on the quality of education of our youth but also the future economic strength of our communities."

Early arrivals may view exhibits in the women's gymnasium from 1 to 2 p.m. The rally in the men's gymnasium will be from 2 to 3 p.m. Exhibits will be open a second time from 3 to 4 p.m.

"We want to stress that the rally is open to all citizens," said Williams.

The Independent, Press-Telegram ballot recommendation for Tuesday's schools tax election is on Page B-4.

"Many individuals have worked to keep good schools in our communities but have not been a part of the S.O.S. program. We want them to know that they will be welcomed at the rally and would appreciate their attendance."

Guests representing leadership from every major segment of the district who have endorsed the good schools program will be introduced at the rally by W. Odie Wright, superintendent of schools.

The All-District Junior High School Orchestra directed by Fred Ohlendorf, the Long Beach City College Choir directed by Wayne B. Gard, and the Long Beach City College Vikcount Band will supply music at the rally.

Harry B. Frishman, assistant to the superintendent, will speak on "The Drift Toward Disaster."

Williams Property Division

Automobile dealer Ralph Williams and his wife Annabelle will carry their estrangement to Santa Ana Superior Court March 13, when the court may divide his multimillion dollar holdings.

Williams bills himself in extensive advertising as the world's largest car dealer. His assets are estimated at $37 million in the petition for dissolution of marriage.

Mrs. Williams and their two children reside in the family home at 36 Linda Isle, Newport Beach. She receives $4,000 per month expenses to maintain the family and the palatial $275,000 residence.

In addition to the car dealerships, the couple has extensive holdings elsewhere.

They married March 9, 1957, and separated on Sept. 4, 1969, the court was told.

Behavior Lecture at Palos Verdes

A free lecture on behavior modification — "Who Is Running Your Life" — will be delivered at 8 p.m. Feb. 19 in the Palos Verdes Peninsula Center Library, 650 Deep Valley Drive, Palos Verdes Peninsula.

The lecture will be conducted by Rev. Marc D. Farjeon of General Psionics, Inc., a spokesman for the corporation has announced.

SCAG to Weigh Cities' Problems

Officials of more than 100 cities and six Southland counties will meet Wednesday and Thursday at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach to have a look at what tomorrow may bring.

Called to the spring assembly of the Southern California Association of Governments, they will consider such subjects as airport development, water pollution controls, open space preservation, housing, and other urban-related topics.

City Councilman Ned Chatfield of Camarillo, president of the association, said attendance will top that of any other spring assembly in the organization's history.

Keynoting the opening session Wednesday will be City Councilman Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles.

Scientology Group Has Party Aboard Bolivar

By NOEL SWANN
Staff Writer

The little-old-lady-from-Pasadena type might have been forgiven for thinking it was just another of those swinging dockside cocktail parties being held in broad daylight yet.

There was this sleek sea-going yacht at Long Beach's Pier "A" with bunting strung from bow to stern. That "freaky" rock 'n roll music blaring from loudspeakers.

AND ON DECK, in plain view of passersby, were all these young couples, sipping champagne, eating cake, laughing, joking, occasionally hugging each other and generally having a "wild" time.

Even the crew, whom you could tell from their blue uniforms, seemed to be joining in. Including the man with the fancy braid who must have been the captain.

And what was worse, one of the men aiding and abetting all the funmaking appeared to be a reverend. With a collar and a kind of crucifix hanging on his chest.

In fact, our fictitious little old lady would have been right in what she saw Saturday afternoon. But her interpretation of the festivities are another matter.

THE SHIP is the 174-foot TSMY Bolivar, an erstwhile submarine chaser which has been in and out of mothballs more than once before being whipped into its present shape as a research and training vessel for the Church of Scientology.

The man in black with the white collar is Rev. Neil Sarfati, port captain and counselor. The man in the braiding is seaside skipper, Bob Young, a Londoner with a past in the merchant marine and a future in the church he now espouses.

(Scientology is defined by its adherents as an applied religious philosophy possessing a technology for spiritual recovery and the increase of individual ability. It can be translated from its Latin and Greek roots as "knowing how to know" or "the study of wisdom.")

THE BOLIVAR crew is . . . well, unlike any other crew you're likely to find. Boys, girls, women, men, whole families, all Scientology followers on a trip to a greater understanding of what they're about and what they can find in their religion.

Anyone can do any job aboard the ship with the right training, and no one is fazed when you have to call the chief engineer "M'am." Women work the engine room, take turns at the wheel on the bridge and do other jobs usually reserved for hardy matelots.

Sarfati explains that the crew — all volunteers — gets a course in basic sea training as well as specialty training in the administration arm of Scientology.

EACH PERSON spends an average of two to three months aboard the vessel and usually qualifies as an able-bodied seaman by the end of it.

(A large part of the Scientology movement is based at sea. Its founder and leader, L. Ron Hubbard, actually has his headquarters aboard a yacht in the Mediterranean.)

The Bolivar was bought about May last year after it had been lying idle and decrepit at a dockside in Long Beach. The Church of Scientology took it over and rebuilt it all with volunteer labor and ingenuity.

THREE MONTHS ago it made its maiden voyage under the new colors to Vancouver, British Columbia; Seattle, and San Francisco with the crew visiting various Scientology churches in those cities.

Saturday the ship returned to Long Beach from its first successful trip which was the occasion for the champagne and partying. And since the vessel was open to tours there was the normal amount of greetings and huggings going on.

So, if you happened to see on Pier "A" a little old lady from Pasadena shaking her head, you'd have been able to tell her in true nautical fashion that the whole thing was "above board."

Let's keep good schools

A FRIEND WHO IS new to Long Beach was astonished when he learned that school officials are optimistic that an override tax will be approved if enough voters go to the polls Tuesday.

He said that in the Northern California city he came from the schools tried to keep people from finding out about override tax elections. The theory was that most citizens would never vote to raise their taxes.

We had to admit that things are no different in Southern California generally. But they are different in Long Beach, Avalon, Signal Hill and Lakewood—the communities in the Long Beach Unified School District.

For one thing, there has been no steady parade of bond and override elections. The schools have been conservative and have raised tax rates reluctantly. After the last override was approved by voters in 1956, it took over 10 years before the schools used the maximum tax rate.

EVEN AT THE maximum, the rate is lower than in all but one of California's 15 biggest school districts.

School officials expect to get by for a long time again without using the maximum tax rate they hope voters will authorize Tuesday. If the state gets its tax program straightened around and recognizes the top priority education ought to have, Long Beach schools may never have to use that maximum tax rate.

(We might just mention, though that legislators aren't going to straighten things out that way unless the folks back home demonstrate that schools are their top concern. The major way we can demonstrate that is by approving needed override tax rates.)

ANOTHER REASON override tax proposals have fared well here is that citizens know their taxes buy quality schools with a national reputation for excellence.

Even with higher tax rates, Los Angeles and San Diego spend less per pupil than Long Beach does. And the schools there have been torn by teacher strikes, resignations of superintendents and general turmoil.

Long Beach spends less per pupil than San Francisco and Oakland. Even so, San Francisco and Oakland have been plagued by internal dissension and administrative instability.

Effective schools give our children knowledge and greater earning power. They give our communities educated citizens and high property values. They make our area attractive as a place to live and as a location for industry. All that has helped keep taxes down.

WE HAVE SEEN what happens in neighboring communities when override taxes fail. Schools are boarded up. Property values drop. The economy deteriorates.

If you look at your sample ballot, you will notice that it was accompanied by an argument for the override tax but that there was none against it. Because of the city's pride in its schools and its recognition of their sound management, not one person or group came forth to offer a ballot argument against the proposal. That speaks louder for the schools than anything we could say.

Nor has there been any consistent pattern in the arguments offered by those who have written letters to the editor opposing the proposal. If there were good reasons to reject the override, they would be stated regularly in opposition letters.

Instead, the arguments against the override taxe are mostly based on misinformation.

SOME PERSONS, for example, argue that tidelands oil money should be used for the schools. That's impossible under the rigid restrictions of the California Constitution and of legislation and court decisions.

Some persons say the schools could operate more economically. Any business or any government agency could save some operating expenses. But no one has suggested any economies that could come near matching the increased costs inflation has inflicted on our schools.

IF THE TAX issue fails, 300 to 500 teachers would have to be dropped. That would not be economy. It would be educational and economic suicide.

Class sizes would become disgracefully large. The remaining teachers would find it difficult even to keep order, much less provide an education. Inevitable student and teacher militancy could throw our schools into turmoil.

You will note in the sample ballot below that the proposed increases of 95 cents in the unified school district tax rate and of 22 cents in the college district tax rate are maximums. They will not take effect next year or for the next few years. The total increase contemplated for next year is about 33 cents on each $100 assessed valuation.

FOR THE AVERAGE homeowner, the increase next year would be about $18, or about five cents per day. The ultimate possible increase would be $65. That many not come for 10 years. It may never come.

We strongly urge that voters mark their ballots as we have indicated to insure excellence in our schools and prosperity in our communities.

Younger voices to sub for Agnew

BOB HOUSER

ALREADY ELIMINATED as a site for the 1972 Republican National Convention—and the first locale to be thus slighted by name—is Russell, Kan.

Sen. Bob Dole, of Kansas, new chairman of the Republican National Committee, told newsmen last week in Sacramento that the convention will not be held in his home town. Russell lost 370 people from the 1950 to 1960 census to reduce its population to 6,113.

SOMEWHAT MORE surprising than that, however, was Dole's opinion that other "shock troops" will replace Vice President Spiro Agnew as stumpsman for the GOP and the Nixon administration this year.

He told reporters he sees no reason at this time not to keep Agnew on the 1972 ticket with President Nixon. But this was his response when asked what the GOP plans to do with its speakers, including Agnew, in tooling up in 1971 for the 1972 campaign:

"We hope to enlist some of our more articulate younger members of Congress. (He noted that freshman Sen. William Brock, R-Tenn., has pledged one weekend a month for speaking engagements). There are a number of others in the Senate who are willing to be helpful. We're also working on a program to involve young state legislators across the country. I believe we'll find our greatest success with the younger voters perhaps through the young state legislator or the young county official even more so than with some 'known' figure from Washington.

"I think perhaps this year you'll find the Vice President discussing revenue sharing, welfare reform, the environment and other administration goals. He'll have a very low political profile, I would guess, in 1971."

DOLE SAID HE has not consulted with Agnew on his plans. He said his role of assisting the administration makes it "very difficult for the Vice President because he receives hundreds and hundreds of speaking requests."

But because of Agnew's predicted 1971 "low profile," Dole said, "I think perhaps he'll be busy assisting the President in other ways. Therefore some of us shock troops will be called upon."

The Kansan described himself as a long-time Nixon loyalist. Nixon's homework on his party's minority status is replete. Because he knows the arithmetical certainty of the need for Democratic votes for election and because his stated theme has been "bring us together," Nixon, as President, has usually avoided the gratuitous put down of the opposition party.

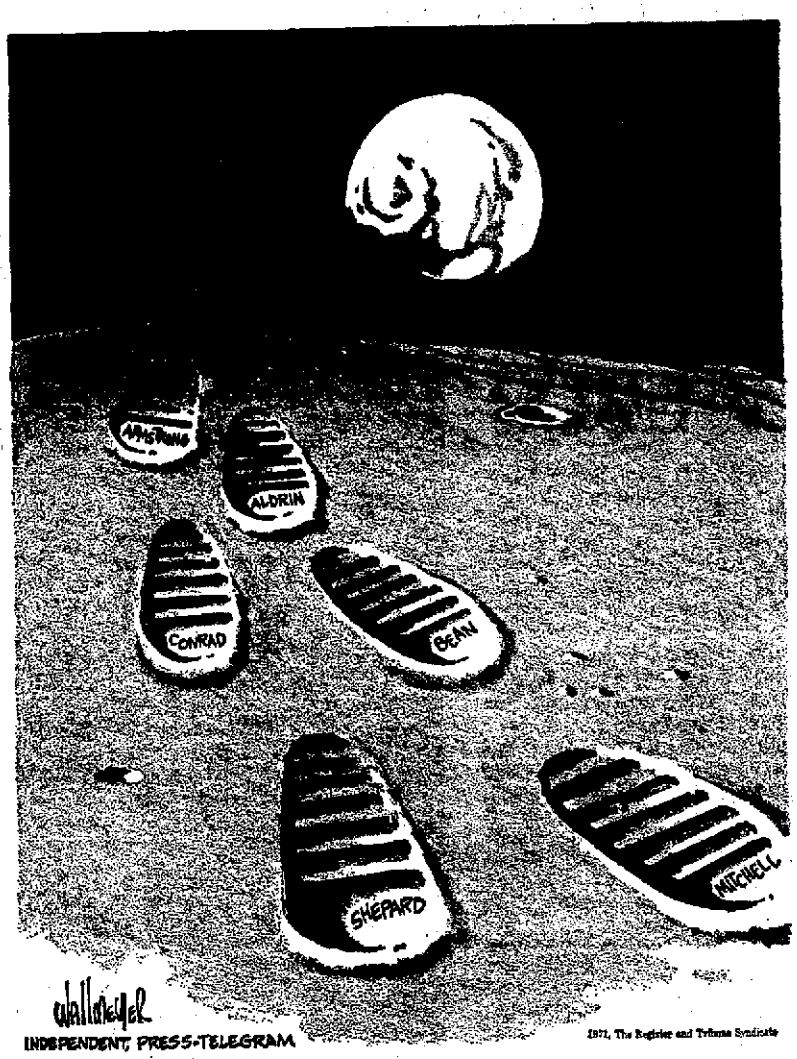

Dole, as national chairman and Nixon loyalist, has not yet shucked the GOP partisan's irresistible urge to be needlessly abrasive in referring to the opposition as "the Democrat party."

I asked Senator Dole why Republicans persist in refusing to call it the Democratic party, its proper name, in favor of an improper and contemptuous term.

"IT WAS JUST a slip of the tongue," Dole replied. "I wouldn't want to say anything that might be contemptible. I refer to them both ways—and some other ways too. But 'Democratic' is alright with me."

But Senator Dole's "slip of the tongue" persisted throughout his press conference and through his speech before the GOP State Committee, even to his reference on Vietnam as "the Democrat war."

Nixon, as President, uses "Democratic party." If, as Senator Dole said last week, the Republican party will be the "open door" party, eager for converts among Democrats, he would eschew a petty piece of billingsgate at which Democrats recoil.

Jack comes easy to Jill

THE RECORD of the Parvin Dohrmann stock fraud case gives an intriguing picture of actress Jill St. John as a business woman.

Jill's maiden voyage in the stock market seemed ideal. There were no brokerage fees, no legal fees, and for a time $115,000 in profit on a tip from Delbert Coleman, chairman of the board of Parvin Dohrmann.

Then the Securities and Exchange Commission named her as one of a dozen defendants, including Albert Parvin, Sidney R. Korshak, a labor consultant for Las Vegas casinos; and Edward Torres, a Las Vegas gambling figure.

JILL TESTIFIED she had never heard of Parvin Dohrmann until October 1968, when she lunched with Coleman and Mr. and Mrs. Korshak in a New York restaurant. She said Coleman told her Parvin Dorhmann "owned two hotels in Las Vegas and we are going to make a lot of money."

He asked her if she wanted to invest, and the impetuous Miss St. John bought 1,000 shares at $35 a share.

From that point, Miss St. John left everything up to Korshak and Coleman, and watched the stock soar to $150 a share. She sold in July 1969, following a call from Korshak, and it was all handled in a California law office.

THERE WERE NO papers to take home, no brokerage fees for buying or selling, and no legal fees. She received a check for $42,500 when she sold, plus a promissory note for $106,000 from Harold Butler, the key officer of Denny's Restaurants.

Miss St. John was counting her profits when she received a subpoena from the SEC to testify and bring all her papers. She called Korshak, and he arranged for her to be represented by Edward Bennett Williams, one of the nation's most expensive lawyers.

Korshak testified in the hearings that he suggested Coleman hire Nathan Voloshen, a friend of former U. S. House Speaker John McCormack, to handle the problem when the SEC suspended trading in the Parvin Dohrmann stock.

Korshak said he believed that lawyer Williams had told him that Voloshen "seemed to be a friend of Speaker McCormack and that he did see him around the congressional building." Williams said he knew Voloshen as a name only, and had never met the man. He said he did not suggest Voloshen to Korshak.

WILLIAMS FUMED when SEC lawyer Stanley Sporkin started to delve into details of how Williams was hired to represent Miss St. John.

"Did he (Korshak) say he would make the arrangements?" Sporkin asked.

"What do you mean by that?" Williams demanded.

"What did he (Korshak) do, call you back and tell you he had engaged Mr. Williams?" Sporkin went on.

Williams snapped that it was "an inane examination."

"It is just absurd," Williams said. "It is inane, inept, and incompetent. You ought to be ashamed of conducting yourself like this. You ought to be . . . trying police court cases."

CLARK MOLLENHOFF

Miss St. John then testified that Korshak said he would call Williams "and then Mr. Williams called me . . . He (Korshak) didn't say he would retain him for me."

Korshak and Miss St. John and nearly all the other defendants have agreed to give back essentially everything but the initial investment in the stock transactions. Under the federal court direction, Miss St. John will keep only $7,500 of the $115,000 profit she was initially counting.

KORSHAK, WHOSE ability to keep labor peace is phenomenal, will continue to serve as a labor consultant at most Las Vegas casinos. His income has ranged from $547,121 in 1965 to $1,326,144 in 1969.

As for Miss St. John, the record indicated she was merely a pretty girl who permitted business tycoons and lawyers to impress her by dealing her in on Parvin-Dohrmann stock.

Edward Bennett Williams was the one exception among the men who helped her. He said he billed Miss St. John for his legal services before the SEC.

Budget fight to be taken to people

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Putting together a budget the size of the state of California's is a massive undertaking, as much for the sheer technical aspects of the compilation as for the terribly difficult decisions it reflects.

The 1971-72 California budget is thicker by far than the federal budget. That means it contains greater detail and consequently more information than the federal budget. Once a citizen learns how to sift through the bewildering array of figures to find what he wants, he can learn a great deal about the state operation in which he has an interest.

BOB SCHMIDT

The budget contains considerably more than just raw data, however.

MORE THAN ANY other public act, a budget reveals a governor's basic philosophies about his responsibilities. The more difficult the decisions which need be made in the budget, the more is revealed about the man making those decisions.

The 1971-72 budget required far and away the most difficult decisions of Gov. Reagan's term in office, and it is, consequently the most revealing of his public acts by far.

It reveals, first of all, that he is consistent in his belief that economy is the prime responsibility of government. He has expressed that thought many times in his public remarks; now he has followed through with action.

Only so much of a citizen's income can be appropriated by government without that citizen's freedom being inhibited, he believes. Since it is not the intent of a good government to inhibit freedom, government's income—the amount it collects in taxes—is consequently limited to that amount below the percentage at which the inhibitions to freedom commence.

SINCE ITS INCOME is fixed, it must operate within that amount, he feels, just as families must budget within their income.

The 1971-72 budget reflects that philosophy. The state has problems, the governor acknowledges. Some of them are severe. But the resources to be used in the battle with those problems are limited and cannot be exceeded.

Translated, that means the state will not seek new resources via new or higher taxes. The battle, he feels, will just have to be fought with more assistance from the private sector and from people themselves.

The governor's legislative opposition believes that government should determine those problems which, if not solved, would have the most serious consequences on society, and accumulate whatever resources are needed to overcome those problems.

EVEN IF IT MEANS raising taxes or creating new ones. Even if it hurts, if the consequences of not solving the problem are worse than the immediate hurt.

Rarely have conflicting political philosophies been so exposed and so central to a major dispute. Both parties to the dispute, it appears, are going to take their case to the people.

When the smoke settles, California's leaders should have a good idea of just what kind of government their constituents want.

THE QUESTION is a fair one. Is education accurately measured by the current methods of academic bookkeeping: semesters of study, classes attended, grade-points earned? Do degrees have to be thought of in quantitative terms — 124 semester-hours equal a B.A.?

The question was raised in the report of the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education, "Less Time, More Options" (McGraw-Hill Book Co.). It is raised again in even more challenging terms by Dr. Glenn Dumke, chancellor of the 19-campus California State College system in a memo circulated to trustees and faculty.

WE FACE THREE necessities, says Dr. Dumke. First higher education has to serve more people — "thousands are knocking at our doors." Second, we have to maintain and improve the quality of education we offer, despite limited financial resources. Third, we have to regain the trust and confidence of the public by giving them better value for their investment in education.

Dr. Dumke's first suggestion is that we "challenge the lock-step, time-serving practice of offering a degree based on credits, hours, semesters, classes attended. I propose that we offer instead degrees based on academic achievement, carefully measured and evaluated by competent faculties."

Furthermore, students should be on their own, far more than they are now. With books, films, tapes, teaching machines and an adequate advisory staff available, the student should make education the product of his own initiative, rather than a matter of compulsory attendance at a prescribed number of courses.

The most far-reaching proposal in Dr. Dumke's memo is his call for the vast enlargement of extension services, now usually treated as the stepchild of higher education. In many systems, including our own in California, you cannot get a degree through extension. Extension professors, many of them part-time or moonlighting from other jobs, are usually paid at a lower rate than professors on campus and cannot earn academic rank or tenure.

Dr. Dumke would reverse all this. He would grant degrees through extension, make extension courses a regular part of the faculty work-load, and treat extension professors and adult and part-time students with the same consideration and respect now shown to professors and students on campus.

Such a plan as Dr. Dumke proposes would really break down the barriers between the academy and the world outside. It would be education for those who really want it and can use it.

Mess sergeant never heard end of it

STERLING BEMIS

THE PENTAGON has proposed semiprivate rooms with rugs and lamps for soldiers as part of a program to create an all-volunteer army.

This comes as something of a yawn to veterans of the Big War. They found themselves pampered with little luxuries at the training camps.

Consider, for example, the average Recreation Hall, fondly nicknamed "The Rec." There was at least one Rec. for every regiment. It was furnished with antique tables, couches and chairs, dating to the Philippine Insurrection period. Some of the lounges were overstuffed. In fact, you could see the stuffing. Carpets and drapes were of the Early Salvation Army Reject Period.

THERE WAS at least one ashtray for every four chairs. The tables were well supplied with magazines—Hygeia, Parents Magazine, Ford Times, Procter & Gamble's Christmas issue, Better Dentistry, Old Farmer's Almanac, Captain Midnight, Forbes, Yachting Times, Field and Stream, American Boy, Woman's Home Companion, Delineator, and Wallace's Farmer.

The bookcases also were crammed with popular stories like the Five Little Peppers and How They Grew, Girl of the Limberlost, Trail of the Lonesome Pine, Tutt and Mr. Tutt, Tom Swift and His Electric Bicycle, The Bobbsey Twins at Camp, The Best of Bobby Burns, Tenting Tonight on the Old Campground and Other Soldier Songs of the Spanish-American War, and Best Plays of 1921.

There was one desk, in case anybody wanted to write home.

Also singular was the pool table. It had the usual 16 balls, counting the cueball, which averaged out to one pool ball for every one hundred men. There was no two-ball. However, it didn't take long to learn that one of the two 15-balls was supposed to be a two-ball.

THE TENNIS TABLE was well stocked with pingpong balls and the fact that most of them were cracked made the game more sporting. Usually the net and paddles were locked up by the corporal in charge of the Rec. Hall, which gave the men a sense of security.

The radio was a fascinating antique, built by Atwater-Kent when Marconi was a boy. The most popular show was Fibber & Molly. This was because when Fibber opened his closet there was no telling what might fall out. When a soldier opened his locker he knew what would fall out—something heavy.

After a twenty-mile hike or a day on the obstacle course the men found the Rec. Hall a cheerful and cozy place to chat. Aside from Betty Grable, there were two main topics. First, the soldiers never seemed to weary of chitchat about army life. They liked to talk about the Captain and the First Sergeant, with occasional light remarks about the Mess Sergeant. Even after they had been in camp a month the men pretended they couldn't remember the real names of the officers and non-coms. It was a regimental joke to refer to Captain So-and-So and Sergeant So-and-So and other So-and-So's.

ALSO, THE fellows made a habit of going to the Rec. Hall to decide where to go. There was a lot of merriment in the banter of their dialogue. Here is a sample:

PRIVATE: Wanna see the movie tonight?

PFC: What is it?

PRIVATE: Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington.

PFC: Seen it a week ago. It's been here longer than Deeds was in Washington.

(Laughter).

Well, Sir, the jokes went on like that, sometimes as late as 7:30. By 8:15 it was customary to wake up your buddy so he could go to sleep in his own bunk.

THE POST EXCHANGE known in camp lingo as the PX, was something like the Rec. Hall only with beer. Most trainees were confined to quarters except on weekends, when they could indulge in gay camaraderie at the PX, where you could buy a Zippo lighter for a dollar—the same lighter civilians had to pay $1.15 for at Walgreen's.

Some PX's had pinball machines. It never got back to the Pentagon that these machines paid off in real nickels. It was possible to set up a screen of soldiers around a machine and with a Scout knife disconnect the TILT mechanism. This meant you could wiggle the pinballs around and score 20,000 points without automatically stopping the game. Some soldiers thought this was illegal but they were mainly ignorant rookies.

The meals in the messhall were very filling. In fact they were so filling some soldiers were satisfied to walk down the line and end up with an empty tray. The army bought the best possible provisions and it was remarkable the way mess sergeants could take the top grade of beef and make stew. This happened on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with an occasional Saturday thrown in. However, from all accounts, there was a splendid variety in Sunday dinner, principally because there was nobody in camp for Sunday dinner.

YOU'D THINK BEING in a warm kitchen all day when it was snowing outside would be a real treat. However, there were recruits who for one whim or another disliked KP duty, possibly, because they felt there was a certain monotony to washing 200 dishes, 200 knives, 200 forks, 200 spoons and 22 pots hardly bigger than tanks.

Frankly, I learned to enjoy KP. It was customary to tie a towel on the foot of your bunk so the CQ (charge of quarters) could wake you up at 3:30 a.m. I bribed our CQ to wake me up at 3:15 so I would be the first man in the messhall. I then volunteered to be fireman. With a little practice you could make 10 minutes of hauling kindling and coal sound like an hour and a half. Also you had numerous opportunities to stash away pieces of pie to be sneaked out after your tour of duty.

I once hid a piece of blueberry pie at the end of a bench under a lonesome looking mess-table. It turned out the mess sergeant liked to sit on that particular bench to fill out his requisitions. He did this in his white uniform.

When he stood up he was an example of the luxury of the army in the Big War.

L. A. C. SAYS

Do you know your school poll place?

By LARRY A. COLLINS, Sr.

HAVE YOU LOCATED the polling place for next Tuesday's school election? It will probably be in a school building so expense of the election will be held to a minimum. Location is shown on address sheet with your sample ballot. It is probable a small vote will be cast because too many eligible voters will fail to go to the polls. Those who fail to do so cannot class themselves as responsible citizens.

Our schools represent the largest single governmental expenditure in this and every other area. That is because they have the responsibility of teaching our children. They have done a good job of doing this for all those who are now adults or those who have graduated from high school. But the schools have exhausted their maximum taxing ability placed on them in 1956. If they are to continue on a high standard the people of the district must provide more money.

WE ARE ALL reluctant to increase our tax load for any subdivision of government. We feel we are already taxed too high. But few of us consider the fact that we have increased our own incomes quite rapidly in recent years. We have come to accept inflation as a way of life and the increases in cost of goods and services necessary to meet the high labor cost increases of the past several years.

If we are realistic about it we will admit that the cost of operating our schools have increased for the same reasons. It costs more to pay teachers. It costs more for caretakers who are also suffering from inflation. Repairs of school properties cost more. But the schools cannot increase their incomes to pay these increases unless the voters give them that authority next Tuesday.

There are going to be some changes in higher education to cut down the cost of college education. That is providing the University of California and the state colleges follow recommendations made the past week. If carried out the BA students can graduate in three to three and a half years rather than the present four years. It would permit thousands of more students to attend colleges with little increase in costs to the colleges.

THIS TREND WILL certainly be extended to the elementary and high school levels. It is a much more difficult problem for them. But administrators are working hard on programs to take care of more students without major increases in overall costs. They are now faced with larger classes than is considered efficient. They may find some retrenchment in courses and new facilities is essential. But for the present they must have the needed revenue to maintain the kind of standards parents expect for their children.

The Tuesday ballot calls for voters to approve or disapprove an increase in the maximum property tax that can be levied for local schools. The increase for next year is estimated to be about $23 on a $28,000 valued home. The maximum would be about $75 on such a home — which it is believed will not be reached for many years. It took 10 years to reach the maximum — now in force — voted in 1956.

If you are willing to assure the continued high standards now existing you will vote YES Tuesday. However you feel about the issue — you owe it to yourself and children to cast your vote. That is the duty of every citizen who is worthy of being classed as a good citizen. Be sure you go to the right polling place.

STUDENTS LEARN WITH THEIR EARS
City College's New Audio-Visual Room —Staff Photo

AT LBCC LIBRARY

Listening Gets Higher Priority

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Audio-visual techniques in education are hardly new these days. But every so often the marriage between teaching and technology takes another step forward, and education becomes richer for it.

At least they think so at Long Beach City College where the school library has been offering students an opportunity to learn with their ears as well as their eyes.

PEOPLE HAVE become so accustomed to thinking of libraries in terms of the printed word that it comes as something of a shock to learn that a set of earphones can be as handy an instrument for acquiring information as a book.

Yet the headset is slowly but surely coming into its own at City College.

Today, a student can ease himself into one of 49 semi-private booths at the college library and leisurely enjoy —or concentrate on — any one of 120 taped programs. The offerings range from a piece by Brahms (for a music class) to a speech by Malcolm X (for a Black Studies course).

IT TAKES but a few seconds to choose a program from a card file, sit down at a booth, place the headset, then punch the selection number on a small console in front of you. Depending on whether your taste runs to Malcolm X or Brahms, the rest is music to your ears.

It's all part of the college's audio-retrieval system, as it is called. The federal government put up half the money for the $52,000 system.

The programs are recorded on tapes stored in three compact banks tucked away in a corner of the library office.

The tapes contain lectures, many musical selections, a number of speeches and a dramatic offering or two, including a rendering of Othello.

IN THE PAST, the library's audio section was used mostly by music majors, who would check out records. And a new system any one of eight turnstiles. But the turnstile method was found to be inadequate — and awfully hard on the ecords. And a new system was sought.

The result, thanks in part to the efforts of former physics instructor Earl Enholm, is the present sophisticated tape playback, or audio retrieval, system.

If the students haven't exactly stormed the listening room since the system was installed about a year ago, it's probably because the audio concept is still a bit new and takes some getting used to.

AT ANY GIVEN time, there are about 10 to 15 students using the headsets, which is far below the audio room's capacity. Nonetheless, the system is gradually gaining favor, particularly as instructors incorporate listening assignments into their courses.

One instructor who has made extensive use of the equipment is Asian history teacher Robert Orr, who, along with head librarian John E. Geyer, has found that some students are more "ear-minded" than eye-oriented. But beyond that, Orr has found that taped lectures afford him more time for classroom discussion — something the students seem eager to have.

Deadline for Student Grant Applications

Disanvantaged high school students who are planning to apply for college opportunity grants were reminded that the deadline for postmarked applications is Feb. 15.

The California State Scholarship and Loan Commission said 1,000 new grants are to be awarded to students who generally, though not exclusively, are from minority low-income families. Application forms may be obtained from the students' respective high school offices, or the commission offices in Sacramento.

Council OKs Appointees

Seven city officials have been authorized by the City Council to accept appointments to various committees of the League of California Cities.

Councilmen also authorized the appointees to be reimbursed from city funds for "actual and necessary" expenses arising from committee functions.

The appointees are: Mayor Edwin W. Wade, human resources development and international municipal cooperation; Councilman Bert Bond, urban environmental quality; Councilman Russell Rubley, intergovernmental relations; Councilman Paul R. Deats and data processing chief John Hutchinson, automatic data processing; City Clerk Margaret L. Moore, election law and administration and city clerks; and Barney J. Walczak, city personnel director, municipal government and administration.

Gala Opening Set for Navy Club

The Navy's new, ultra-modern, $2.25-million enlisted men's Club Mariner will open at the Long Beach Naval Base at 3 p.m. Friday with help from beauty, brass and baseball celebrities.

Phyllis George, Miss America of 1970; Patti Long, Long Beach's Miss White Hat; Miss Nevada World, and two former Miss Californias will be present.

California Angels's flashy shortstop Jim Fregosi will represent baseball.

Yet-to-be designated enlisted men will serve as escorts for the beauties.

Cmdr. Don Sodrel, exchange officer, calls Club Mariner the "finest in the Navy."

Official music will be by the Cruiser-Destroyer Group Band, but as soon as the ribbon is cut rock, soul and western bands will swing into action.

Capt. Charles E. Stastny, naval station commander, said the club "will be the envy of every club manager in the world."

Base Commander Rear Adm. H.V. Bird said, "This facility is the result of a year-long expansion-renovation and an innovative new chief of naval operations."

Features of the 37,000-square foot building include two main lounges — one for first and second-class petty officers and one for junior enlisteds — plus three large party rooms.

There is a 150-person restaurant, sunken dance floor color TV lounge with fireplace and fully equipped entertainment stages.

Bar drinks are just 40 cents with the club specialities listed as the 14-ounce "harpoon" and "fathom."

Cmdr. Spdrel credits and enlisted advisory committee for many of the club's new ideas.

SPANNING 40 YEARS

Film Series Slated at CSLB

A series of 14 feature films spanning nearly 40 years of cinematic progress, both foreign and domestic, will be shown during the spring semester at California State College, Long Beach.

Sponsored by the Associated Students Film Commission, the films will be shown Fridays at one or two week intervals.

The series opens Feb. 12 with The Loved One, starring Rod Steiger. A chapter from the original Flash Gordon serial, starring Buster Crabbe, will be shown with each film in the series.

Highlight of the college's film season will be the eighth program, however.

That show will feature three films by director George Pal: When Worlds Collide, from 1951; The War of the Worlds, 1953; and The Time Machine, starring Rod Taylor, from 1960.

Pal is also scheduled to attend the program, according to student film commissioner Mike Hyatt. Pal may also bring props from some of the science fiction films, Hyatt added.

Other films to be shown include an Alfred Hitchcock thriller from 1935, the Thirty-Nine Steps; fiction works such as Son of Kong and Mighty Joe Young; and two contemporary horror films by Roman Polanski — Rosemary's Baby and Repulsion.

Several of the Friday night programs will feature more than one film, said Hyatt.

Tickets for individual shows or for the college's entire season of offerings can be obtained from the Associated Students cashier's office on the campus, Hyatt added.

YOU have a choice on Tuesday

You can vote for

☐ GOOD SCHOOLS and a good place in which to live and work or

☐ SECOND-RATE SCHOOLS and a second-rate community

WHEN YOU DECIDE what kind of schools you want, you decide, too, in what kind of community you wish to live. Boys and girls — your sons and daughters and your grandsons and granddaughters — benefit from good schools. But business and industry benefit even more. History proves conclusively that good schools, good business, high employment, and a high standard of living go hand in hand.

ONE SCHOOL DISTRICT AFTER ANOTHER is going down the drain in California (60 are already bankrupt), and the communities they serve are going down with them. Have you had an opportunity recently to check the unbelievable destruction that is taking place in communities just a few miles from our school district? We don't want it to happen here. And we can be certain it doesn't by our "Yes" vote on Tuesday.

WE HAVE GOOD SCHOOLS and we want to keep them good. Not one local public school has been closed one day because of student militancy. Not one local teacher has been on strike even one day. Our student dropout rate is less than half that in other American cities. Our high school graduates last June were awarded scholarships valued at $2,160,074. Our scores on standardized tests on the 3 R's are far ahead of those in other cities of our size. The Long Beach Unified School District is the only district in California to receive the coveted Pacemaker Award for "leading the way to better education for America's youth."

MOST OF OUR HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES continue their formal education, with over one-half going on to Long Beach City College. Here again, they have been served well. The records of those who enter a vocation from City College and those who transfer to four-year colleges and universities attest to the high standards of our City College. It is significant, too, that our school districts year after year have one of the lowest school tax rates (LOWER than more than 90% of all school districts in Los Angeles County and LOWER than all but one in the 15 largest cities of California). We can afford good schools.

JOIN THE MORE THAN 40,000 REGISTERED VOTERS in Lakewood, Avalon, Signal Hill, and Long Beach who have pledged their personal support of the school tax limit elections to be held on Tuesday.

Campers Grow Popular Among Thieves

By CHARLES CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

A new caper is rising rapidly on the thieves chart of popular crimes.

The Long Beach Police Department's auto theft detail said today camper purloining now rates among the top ten crimes in this area.

There are three reasons for the popularity, Det Sgts. David A. Bauer, James H. Dixon, Steve W. Housden, John H. Miller and William A. Jonkey said.

It takes only a few minutes to "hot wire" a pickup truck with a camper.

The work is easy, fast and lucrative.

And, furthermore, arrests and convictions are hard to come by.

The auto theft detail said campers cost a legitimate buyer from $1,000 to $3,000 and up.

The thieves sell them for $800 and more.

In a matter of a half-hour the camper can be transferred to another truck and in another few minutes the stolen truck is abandoned.

Usually, Det. Sgt. Dixon said, a thief will let it be known in a bar that he, due to unusual circumstances, has to get rid of his camper.

If anyone in the bar is interested the thief will find out what type of camper the buyer wants.

That is the exact type the thief happens to have.

A delivery time is set and the thief drives to a large industry's parking lot and locates the desired model, steals it, makes the delivery and pockets the money.

In 1970 approximately 50 campers were stolen in Long Beach, 452 in Los Angeles and about the same number in the unincorporated areas of Los Angeles County.

A well paying side business is the sale of valuable personal belongings stored in the trailer by the owner.

Radios, binoculars, stereo tape players, clothing, firearms and other valuables are also peddled by the thieves at a fraction of their cost, the auto theft detail said.

Making the work of the auto theft detail harder is the lack of a state registration law for campers.

A bill is pending in the Legislature to register all campers and to assign the campers which lack serial numbers such a number and to provide them with a license plate.

The plate and registration would cost five dollars and would be good for the life of the camper.

If the law, or a similar one is enacted, it would put a serious crimp in the thieves business, police say.

Det. Sgt. Dixon urged camper owners to place markings in the camper in places where thieves would be unlikely to find them and to keep a list of the serial numbers of all personal items kept in the truck.

2 Teens Snatch Woman's Purse

June G. Wyatt, 701 Linden Ave., who uses a cane to walk, was robbed of $56 by two teen-agers who rode up to her on a bicycle, jerked her purse from her arm and peddled off down an alley near Eighth Street and Pine Avenue, Long Beach police said Sunday.

MRS. JOSEPHINE MYERS
No Record of Birth?

WOMAN'S DILEMMA

Aid Depends on Proof of Past

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Josephine Myers is a woman in search of her past.

Not that she wants to relive it.

Her motive is more pragmatic than nostalgic: under a new state welfare department ruling she could lose her $172 monthly disability check if she can't prove where she was born.

Mrs. Myers, 850 Daisy Ave., thinks she is 56, and that her birth date is July 6, 1914. This she remembers from her childhood with a foster family in Los Angeles.

However, although she's lived in the Southland since her earliest recollections — except for two intervals in New Mexico — there is no record of her birth here.

SHE REMEMBERS her foster father threatening to take her "back to Tijuana where you came from . . ." But there are no clues in that border town in any registry or church.

Her problem arose Jan. 1 in a directive apparently designed to help tighten up on welfare payments. Letter No.155 states:

> "A person not legally entitled to remain permanently in the United States is not a resident of the state and thus is not eligible to receive aid."

Without proof of birth she can't get an alien card or establish U.S. citizenship.

In order to establish that she's entitled to remain here she must prove permanent residence through an immigration department procedure to "create a record of lawful entry."

She can do this with the help of baptismal record, family bible, social security card — none of which she has, although she knows her social security number.

THE "RECORD of lawful entry" can also be created after the immigration board evaluates such things as voter registration, employment records, rent receipts, and tax bills which show continuous residence since 1948 (or 1924, depending on which part of sec. 249 is applicable.) When completed, that procedure provides her the paper which entitles her to stay as long as she wishes, a paper which welfare officials say would be acceptable proof of long term residence.

The procedure costs $25 to instigate plus whatever costs are involved in obtaining statements and documents.

Meanwhile, welfare officials say, Mrs. Myers is entitled to a hearing on the matter, which may be three to five months hence. Her checks will continue in the interim.

SAYS Eugene Stevens, deputy director of the Long Beach office "We're not going to terminate anyone unless they tell us they are here illegally."

Clues to her past are meagre, Mrs. Myers admits. She lived with a foster family on 77th St. in Los Angeles until she was 14. Then she went to work as live-in baby sitter with another family a few blocks away, where she stayed until she went to New Mexico at 17. There she married, lived several years, bore a son in 1939, got divorced, then returned to Los Angeles. She returned to New Mexico, remarried, divorced, and returned to California in 1942, settled in Long Beach.

SINCE THAT date, she says, she worked as a presser for a dozen dry cleaners, belonged to cleaner's local 36, and has been a registered voter. A severe accident in 1966 left her unable to work, and she's been drawing disability aid ever since.

Today, partially croppled with arthritis and the after-effects of the accident, she looks to the future with mixed emotions.

"I'm confused by all this . . . At first I thought they would deport me . . . I'm glad that's not true. Now I'm trying to get all those statements and papers together, but its kind of hard to find people after being out of touch so long . . ."

IT OUTGROWED US

This shake roofed doll house is just too big. We don't have any children to fill the 3 big baths, there's no one to sit in front of the brick fireplace in the living room, or to tiptoe through the deep wall to wall carpets, or close the drapes. We can't use the completely finished garage for a rumpus room with just the two of us, or cook a big dinner in the stately kitchen with built in gas range & oven. There'll be no more football games in our large 66x128 pie-shaped yard. If you could use these features in a house, give us a call.

Don't Bury the Bruins—Rally Stuns USC

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

Last rites were conducted prematurely Saturday night for UCLA's defending national collegiate basketball champions.

With 9:35 remaining in their titanic with USC at the L.A. Sports Arena, the Trojans held a 59-50 lead and the partisan crowd was deliriously happy.

But the patient had been perilously close to death before and had survived.

UCLA revived again this time, throwing the Book-er at the Trojans down the stretch to achieve a 64-60 victory and probably move back into the No. 1 ranking in wire service polls.

More importantly, the Bruins remained the only unbeaten team in the Pacific-8 Conference and may have set sail for their fifth consecutive national title.

No one was more important in the struggle between giants than Bruin guard Kenny Booker, who has labored in obscurity for three years at UCLA.

He had three steals in the frantic final minutes to provide the lift the Bruins needed. In addition to contributing 14 points on seven field goals in 10 attempts, the former Poly High and Long Beach City College star also furnished the defensive glue that helped hold the Trojans to one point in the last 9 minutes and 35 seconds.

Sidney Wicks, much maligned for ball-hogging in several earlier games, also came through with a tremendous effort, scoring 24 points (9 of 11 from the field) and hauling down 14 rebounds.

When the Bruins went into a final stall with a 62-60 lead and 40 seconds remaining, the 6-8 Wicks dribbled the ball for 20 seconds, then sank two free throws when the frantic Trojans finally fouled him.

USC's inability to do anything correctly down the stretch mystified the crowd of 15,307, second largest audience for a college basketball game in the history of the arena.

The Trojans had survived a bone-rattling start by the Bruins, who led by nine twice at 16-7 and 20-11. USC came back on the hot shooting of Mo Layton to attain a 38-37 halftime lead, then nearly blew the Bruins out of the arena with an eight-point surge in the early minutes of the second half.

Presented with an opportunity to go into a slowdown with a 59-52 lead and 8:57 remaining, USC coach Bob Boyd signalled for a timeout.

"I thought he was going into his high-post slowdown," said Bruin coach John Wooden.

Instead, the Trojans elected to gun and their shot selection was poor.

Given an opening, the Bruins converted their chance to break through.

Reserve guard Terry Schofield hit a 20-footer and Booker was fouled by Trojan Chris Schrobilgen after a steal. He missed both shots, but UCLA center Steve Patterson rebounded the second to slice the USC lead to 59-56. Patterson got another tip with 6:21 left and Wicks converted a free throw at 5:53 to tie the score at 59-59.

Booker put UCLA in front to stay at 5:30 with a rebound on a missed shot after a steal. That was nine consecutive points for the Bruins.

USC guard Dana Pagett made a free throw with 5:19 remaining, USC's last gasp.

UCLA went to a slowdown with five minutes remaining to try to draw USC out of its zone and eventually the Trojans had to abandon that defense.

Henry Bibby's free throw and two pressure free throws by Wicks with 20 seconds left closed out the scoring.

The Bruins had smarted all week under criticism from all quarters, and obviously were ready for the Trojans, who had run up a 16-game winning streak, longest in the school's basketball history.

"Who's No. 1 now?" said Bruin forward Curtis Rowe as he emerged from a shower.

Wooden was more kind.

Momentum Backfires on Trojans

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

USC coach Bob Boyd turned to a writer and uttered the statement which more than anything typified the pulsating contest his Trojans had just dropped to UCLA.

"Basketball is a game of momentum."

For the Trojans the momentum began many months ago when Boyd began planning for the 1970-71 campaign. It reached its peak before 15,307 fanatics in the L.A. Sports Arena Saturday evening.

Thanks to a phenomenal shooting performance by senior guard Mo Layton, the Trojans rallied from a nine-point deficit to take a 38-37 halftime advantage, bolted to the front early in the second half and were clutching a comfortable, 59-52 lead with eight minutes, 57 seconds remaining.

Yes, only 8:57 to wipe off the clock until all the world could know who really was college basketball's No. 1 team. But then momentum turned its back on the Trojans.

What was Boyd's strategy at that point? Would he go into a stalling, delay-type offense to eat up all those minutes? USC was in trouble, despite the score — center Ron Riley on the bench with his fourth personal foul.

"At that point we were more concerned with containing Booker (Kenny), who was hitting from the perimeter of our zone," answered Boyd. "We also talked about taking only the high percentage shot.

"Most of all, our talk centered around boarding. We had them down by one rebound in the first half, but we didn't come close thereafter."

What about the stall?

"It's not our style to change momentum. We had things going our way at that time," replied the head coach. "UCLA had fouls to waste and they would have used them to their advantage against the stall, taking the ball away from us.

"We'd rather use the stall to hurt them."

So the Trojans came back onto the court and promptly surrendered 10 consecutive points and the lead and, ultimately, the victory.

No one was more surprised at Boyd's strategy that Bruin coach John Wooden.

"I expected a slowdown and told our players to be alert and attack it in the way in which they'd been told," Wooden said.

With Riley out of the lineup, Steve Patterson crashed the boards for easy rebounds and tips. Taking the blame for his mobility was Layton.

"My responsibility was to keep Patterson off the boards," confessed Mo. "I only kept him out about twice.

"If I'm there, there's no way he's going to get in there — I don't care how big he is, he's not getting through me. It was plain lackadaisical play on my part and I take full blame."

Little else surprised the little lefthander from New Jersey, not even his 23-point performance, which included nine successive field goals.

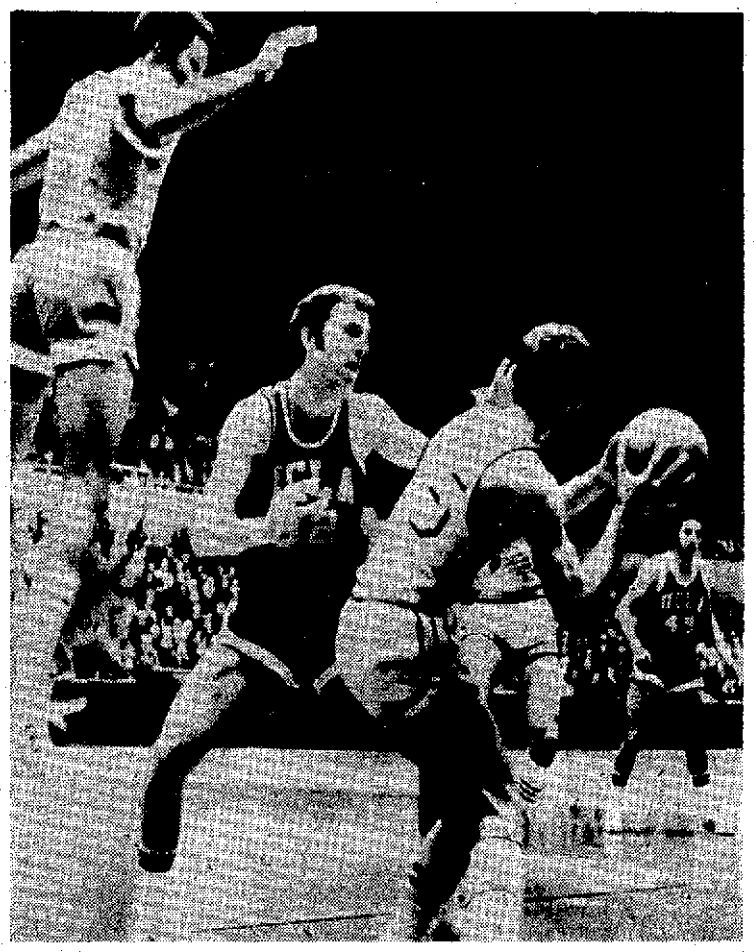

"When Ronnie got his fourth foul, we lost our offense. We never even got the ball down court.

"They made one free throw, miss the second, get the rebound and score. We just relaxed on the boards."

Mo wiped himself with a towel and his expression turned grim. "We had that game won. No way we should have lost it. They (the Bruins) know that, too."

Someone asked about the next titanic with the Westwooders, Mar. 6.

"It'll be different that night. There's no team going through this conference unbeaten."

NOWHERE TO GO

49ers Struggle to 9th Win in Row

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Cal State Long Beach short-circuited a threatening Texas-Arlington rally in the final 10 minutes Saturday night and rolled to its ninth consecutive victory, 81-65.

The win boosted Cal State's standard to 16-4. The 49ers return to Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. competition Friday and Saturday night, hosting San Jose State and Fresno State in the Long Beach Arena.

For 30 minutes Saturday it appeared as though the 49ers would overrun the Rebels as easily as they had while recording a 102-57 success earlier this season in Long Beach.

With a little more than 11 minutes remaining in the contest the 49ers had a 26-point lead and coach Jerry Tarkanian took most of his heavy artillery (Chuck Terry, George Trapp and Bob Lynn) out of the game.

Arlington, was far from dead, however, delighting a partisan crowd of 2,500 in Texas Hall by scoring its next four times down court to trim the advantage to 18 with more than nine minutes to play.

Tarkanian called timeout and sent his starters back in to restore order. It was nearly too late. Arlington already had the momentum.

"Have you ever seen eight points get on the board as fast as those," Tarkanian said. "They sure knocked a hole in our lead and then when I got our people back in the game we couldn't do anything right."

Before the 49ers could restore order, the Rebels had run off a 16-1 string and were within 11 with six minutes remaining.

Terry finally squelched the uprising, hitting a 14-foot baseline shot to re-establish a 13-point advantage and take some of the charge out of the Rebels.

"I never thought we were going to lose the game," Tarkanian indicated. "Even while they were on their streak we were getting lots of good shots and even tip-ins. We just couldn't get any of them to go down. I knew that couldn't last all night."

While the 49ers couldn't buy a basket, Arlington's Willie Spain, a pencil-thin guard, rarely missed. He shot over the 49ers' drawn in zone, hitting seven of his 10 shots from at least 20 feet to lead the Rebels in scoring with 15 points.

The only thing that allowed the Rebels to get that close was Cal State's inability to convert free throws. The 49ers were 7-of-15 in the first half and 15-of-25 for the game. Many of the misses were on the first shots of 1-and-1's.

Trapp continued his stellar play for the 49ers, leading all scorers with 24 points and all rebounders with 16. Terry had his most productive night as a 49er, tallying 23 points, 13 in the first half.

Kings 'Buzz' Montreal, 6-3

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Ralph Backstrom, facing Mike Byers are still all straightened out now.

Byers has the cast off his hand and Backstrom has the Montreal Canadiens out of his system.

They scored twice each Saturday night as the Kings cut the Canadiens down with three goals 47 seconds apart in the first period and rolled on to a 6-3 victory.

The keyed-up performances of Backstrom and the Kings' "buzzsaw" line allowed the 13,312 spectators to become only mildly distracted by the filtered reports of an amateur basketball contest of uncertain consequence.

Center Juha Widing and his rookie wingers, Byers and Bob Berry, contributed all of the goals that Backstrom didn't, including a pair on a new power play combination that features Backstrom on the point.

"I hadn't played the point in 12 years," said the 34-year-old center who came to the Kings six games ago.

The interim was spent playing for the Canadiens, and Backstrom had a few feelings about that, too.

Disenchanted with it all, he had retired this season until agreeing to return so that he might be traded to another environment.

It was not a bitter parting, and the nostalgia was still there Saturday when Backstrom lined up with the Kings for the national anthems.

"I couldn't look any of those guys in the face," Backstrom admitted. "But once the game started, (Marc) Tardif gave me a little shot and Fergie (John Ferguson) pushed my head into the glass and I was all right."

Backstrom had only one other flashback.

"One time I nearly skated to the Canadiens' bench," he grinned.

Backstrom's performance was a striking parallel to that of captain Bob Pulford, whose two goals led a 3-2 win over Toronto the first time he faced his 14-year Maple Leaf teammates at the Forum last Nov. 4.

Backstrom, whose wife and three children joined him Saturday, said he didn't seek out any of his old friends before the game.

"I didn't want to break my concentration," he said. "I hope they understand."

It was also a gratifying performance by Byers, whose game had been faboring and whose confidence was waning since breaking his left hand six weeks ago. It was no coincidence that his brightest game came with the cumbersome cast removed.

"The doctor cut it off with a hacksaw five minutes before the game," Byers said, displaying his taped paw. "I can flex my wrist now. It makes a lot of difference."

It was a gratifying night for Backstrom, who came to the Kings from the Canadiens two weeks ago after a 12-year career in Montreal that ended in a disenchanted "retirement" last fall.

The quick flurry of goals midway in the first period sent the Kings off to a 4-1 lead after what could have been a back breaking start.

The Kings had a manpower edge on Henri Richard's penalty when former King Leon Rochefort

ACK ACK THUNDERS HOME

Ack Ack Showed Critics

Heavily favored Ack Ack, who had never won a race at more than a mile, erased that image Saturday with a convincing victory in the $55,800 San Pasqual Handicap at Santa Anita.

Reaffirming his position as the winter book favorite for the $145,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 15, Ack Ack carried high weight of 129 pounds, including Bill Shoemaker.

He won by three-quarters of a length over Delaware Chief, with Figonero third in the field of older horses.

The time for the 1 1-16 mile feature was 1:41 2-5 over a fast track.

The 5-year-old Ack Ack, a winner at sprint distances, proved he could handle the added ground and the outcome was not as close as the margin would indicate.

Shoemaker had a tight hold for most of the journey and despite this the Kentucky horse at the half-mile had built a lead of six lenghs.

Ack Ack was bought recently by the Forked Lightning Ranch of E.E. Fogelson and his movie star wife Greer Garson, for something between $250,000 and $500,000, from the estate of the late Capt. Harry Guggenheim of New York.

Ack Ack, who spotted the field eight or more pounds, paid $3.80, $3 and $2.60. Delaware Chief, 118, piloted by Eddie Belmonte, paid $5.60 and $3.60, and Figonero, 121, with Alvaro Pineda up, paid $3.

Ack Ack won the Derby trial at Churchill Downs at one mile as a 3-year-old, and the same year took the one-mile Arlington Classic at Chicago.

But in three other efforts beyond a mile he never won.

The anticipated duel between Ack Ack and Jungle Savage, who had sprint victories in two previous races, failed to materialize. Jungle Savage, weighted at 120, finished fourth and was never a serious threat.

It was Ack Ack's second stakes victory of the meeting.

Slowdown Basketball: War Rages On

Rupp: 'Lack of Action Will Kill Us at Gate

NEW YORK (AP) — Adolph Rupp, Frank McGuire and John Wooden are opposed to it. Lefty Driesell is for it. Bill Raftery is neither hawk nor dove.

The war goes on about slowdown college basketball.

"When you take the action out of basketball, you take the action out of the gate," said Rupp, Kentucky's fabled coach.

"Any general trend to slow down will kill the game," said McGuire, the South Carolina leader who's been burned more than once this year.

"It doesn't make for good basketball, but it is within the rules," says Wooden, who has had overwhelmingly success at UCLA against every conceivable type of offense.

Driesell, on the other hand, has had remarkable fortune with the freeze-ball technique. Among his noted victims is McGuire's ranked powerhouse.

"I got the idea from North Carolina," said Maryland's Driesell. "North Carolina did such an excellent job with it, and I almost copied it directly. It wasn't original with me, but that's the way things are going."

North Carolina's slowdown yanked South Carolina out of its zone and the Tar Heels pulled off a 79-64 upset. Maryland coldshouldered South Carolina into submission, 31-30, and the Gamecocks lost another stall to Virginia, 50-49.

"You know what's going to happen when you see a pro game," said Driesell. "Someone is going to shoot before 24 seconds expires. There is no suspense. I think it takes something out of the game.

"The college game is more interesting from the spectator's standpoint and for the coach, because he's got to prepare his team for anything. We don't know what's going to happen."

McGuire: "The fans won't stand for it. They want action. Personally, I don't like to coach slowdown basketball and hope I never have to. It's a game of motion, and should be kept moving."

Raftery, the coach of Seton Hall, doesn't mind how they play — just so they come prepared for anything.

"It really doesn't matter to me one way or the other," said Raftery, among the young blood in college coaching ranks. "If a time clock is implemented, we'll play the game that way. Everyone could adjust. But it makes no difference to me."

Other coaches who advocate a ban against the slowdown include Jack Kraft of Villanova, Harry Litwack of Temple, Press Maravich of Louisiana State and Roy Rubin of Long Island University.

Kraft, a member of the NCAA rules committee, likes to watch the game unfold quickly but admitted that rulesmakers are stumped in efforts to legislate against stalls.

"They don't want to make deliberate attacks illegal," he said.

He added that colleges are opposed to a 30-second clock, similar to the 24-second job used in the pros, but said they were concerned about stalling.

"It isn't the best thing for the fans," said Kraft.

Litwack, a former member of the rules committee, said he didn't know what rule could be set up to prevent stalling. But, he said, the stall-ball technique is bad for the game.

"It's bad because we all know what financial trouble college athletics are having and that we have to depend on gate receipts," said Litwack. "It's always been my philosophy that when a guy plunks down $5 for a night's entertainment he'll get cheated if he doesn't get it.

"A stall may be exciting for the students of a stalling team, but not for the average fan."

"People don't want to watch horse-and-buggy basketball," scoffs Maravich, whose son, Pistol Pete, made run-and-gun offense a Southeast legend. "Slowdown is like watching grass grow."

Maravich wouldn't mind a time clock.

"If they did bring in the clock," he said, "then maybe they'd get rid of 10-second rule and five-second rule and abandon the zone defense.

"While we're on the subject, I'd also like to see three-point goals as in the American Basketball Assn. Those shots take more skill. Why, my grandmother could make lay-ups."

Rubin favors a clock, too. The 30-second type.

"A lot of coaches are afraid of it," he said. "But they really haven't thought about it. They could still keep the score low but you wouldn't have any halftime scores of 4-3 (Maryland led South Carolina by that score at the half)."

Tennessee's Ray Mears, Georgia's Ken Rosemond, Jim McDermott of Iona and Dick Phelps of Fordham like it nice 'n easy.

"This is something you resort to when you need an equalizer," said Mears, one of the nation's foremost proponents of disciplined basketball. "But we're going to run when we think it's the percentage thing to do."

"Like checkers or chess, I like to think of it as strategy," said Rosemond.

"I feel a coach should be allowed to do what is within the rules to win a game and if he wants to hold the ball, then he should," said McDermott.

"You win whichever way you can," said Phelps.

Driesell: 'Team Must Be Ready for Everything'

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Beginning of End for Santa Anita

"I give Santa Anita two more meetings after this one, maybe not even that, to run at Arcadia," sighed a clocker last December before the current winter thoroughbred extravaganza got underway. "Something's going to happen in January to prove me right."

Sure enough, something did happen. Santa Anita Park, given an assist by the Arcadia City Council, decided to declare 650 stalls and the important training track as surplus. When the heavy equipment finishes its destruction after this meeting, the southwest corner of the premises at Huntington Drive and Baldwin Avenue will be ready to be turned into a shopping center.

As mentioned here frequently, the Santa Anita property is extremely valuable and speculation has been rife that the historic track eventually would bow to economics. The eventuality has started.

The Los Angeles Turf Club wouldn't lose its race dates when the whole razing is completed: those dates simply would be shifted to the Hollywood Park track where the S'Anita people still would run their own meeting.

In a sense, Hollypark is returning the favor as the Goose Girl Track was forced to hold its meeting at Santa Anita some 20 years ago when the Inglewood plant's stands and general offices were burned to the ground.

THE HORSEMEN, NOT TO mention the horses, will suffer the very likely prospect that Santa Anita will be closed forever. At the present time 2,000 stalls are available at Arcadia and 400 horses have to be stabled at Hollywood Park to accommodate the overflow.

When phase one of Operation Teardown begins, 650 horses will have to scratch around for living quarters. And, eventually, stable space will have to be found for 2,000 horses.

Hollywood Park would be able to handle most of the animals, but not all of them by any means. As a result, those steeds not accommodated at Hollypark would have to be bedded down and trained at, say, Pomona's bullring, and condition centers as San Luis Rey Downs and Rancho California.

Some conceivably might be quartered at Del Mar, although this would seem unlikely since a morning drive from the San Diego County track to Inglewood hardly would be conducive to a superior racing effort in the afternoon.

THE CLOCKER SHUDDERED those seven weeks ago when he contemplated the prospect of having horses drilled at faraway tracks.

"The horsemen, trainers and horses will suffer," he snapped, "but so will us clockers. Can you imagine making any sense of clocking the morning workouts when they're being held over a variety of tracks?

"A horse's time at Pomona, for instance, would mean something different than the time at Hollywood Park. It's a problem today to clock and identify all the horses working at one major track. When the horses are training elsewhere, nobody would really know what's going on.

"Some unscrupulous trainers would get their horses on and off the training track before the clocker knew they'd been there. The value of workouts would be almost nil."

The California Division of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Assn. is not unaware of the impending doom.

"This action by Santa Anita and the city council signaled the beginning of the end for racing at Santa Anita," said president Charles Leavitt. "It is evident that the shopping center is the beginning of a complete phase-out of racing."

'Tis sad, but oh so true.

ATLANTA'S PAUL RICHARDS pooh-pooed Hank Aaron as a major league manager with these words: "I think his ambition may be a little higher than managing, probably in the front office." Betcha Paul didn't feel that way about field managers when he was a manager.

. . . If his pins are okay, Travis Williams could prove a sensation with the Rams. With Green Bay in 1967, Travis set an NFL record with four kickoff returns for touchdowns. His AVERAGE was 41 yards per runback! He and Alvin Haymond should be an exciting pair.

. . . Considered in several quarters as "bad boys," the Dodgers' Richie Allen and the Angels' Tony Conigliaro already have given every indication they'll fit in nicely with their new clubs. Allen has been one of the Dodgers' hardest workers during their thrice weekly practice sessions while Tony C. has informed the Angel front office thatt he can't wait for spring training to commence. Richie also had mentioned to other players that he is looking forward to working under Walt Alston even before he's spent one day under the latter's wing. Tony C. has a particular reason for welcoming his trade to a Southland team: He's dead serious about becoming an actor, I understand he has some talent, too.

. . . Pre-spring training prediction: The Dodgers and Angels to be in the World Series. Well, at least this will be the first time that BOTH teams appear capable of going that far.

SAN DIEGO (Special) — Jerry West and Gail Goodrich scored the key points down the stretch Saturday night as the Lakers whipped the San Diego Rockets, 115-108.

Nursing a one-point lead with 2½ minutes to go, Goodrich hit on a jumper and a lay-in, and then West made a lay-in and three free throws in the closing minutes to put the game out of reach.

San Diego's Elvin Hayes led all scorers with 33 points, one more than West. Goodrich had 23 and Happy Hairston of the Lakers netted 20.

The victory, coupled with San Francisco's loss to Milwaukee, gave the Lakers a four-game lead over the Warriors in the Pacific Division.

Eleven games over .500 for the first-time this season, the Lakers return to the Forum tonight to face the Warriors in a 7 o'clock game.

San Diego had beaten the Lakers twice on Jan. 1-2, but the Rockets have lost 16 out of 18 games since then, including a defeat in Los Angeles last week.

teams out there tonight," he said. "I don't think Bob Boyd has anything to be ashamed of."

Wooden admitted having trouble with the USC zone, which was put on, off and on again in the first half, then used almost exclusively in the final 20 minutes.

"We were lobbing some of our cross-court passes," he said. "Some of them were picked off."

Asked if he had given Booker orders to shoot more than normally, he said: "I gave him no specific instructions. He's supposed to shoot if he has an opening.

"It's a good thing he got hot or it might have been to bad for us."

Wooden said two Booker steals were "the turning point in the game."

Asked if references to weak guards on the UCLA team had upset him, Booker replied: "No, because I know I can play guard. This is my first season as a starting guard. I've always had confidence in my jumper."

Marquette Now 18-0; Neuman Pours In 46

Combined News Services

While USC and UCLA were staging their own civil war Saturday night to determine which is No. 1, the college team many observers consider the nation's best won its 30th game in a row.

Marquette, led by Gary Brell's 26 points, smothered undermanned DePaul, 84-55, in Chicago to run the Warriors' record this season to 18-0.

Marquette, ahead only 10-7 after five minutes, ran off seven points in a row, then saw the Blue Demons hit only two baskets in the next six minutes.

Pennsylvania, one of the country's three unbeaten teams prior to Saturday, took over undisputed place in the Ivy League by downing Columbia, 92-79.

Penn is now 17-0. Bob Morse scored 23 points and Dave Wohl 21 for the winners.

Kentucky spotted Mississippi 46 points by sophomore sensation Johnny Neumann but still trounced the Rebels, 121-86, in setting a scoring record for Lexington's Memorial Coliseum.

Six of the eighth-ranked Wildcats scored in double figures with Tom Payne tops with 24. Kent Hollenbeck added 20.

In other Southeastern Conference games, John Mengelt and Al Leapheart combined for 62 points as Auburn ripped Florida, 85-70. Four LSU players were over 20 points in a 107-78 romp over Alabama.

Austin Carr hit 15-of-23 shots from the field and wound up with 38 points in leading Notre Dame past visiting Creighton, 102-91.

Sid Catlett added plenty of muscle, grabbing 19 rebounds and scoring 21 points.

Clemson tried to slow down South Carolina before all-America John Roche pulled out a 47-44 decision in the final seconds.

Missouri rendered Cliff Meely largely ineffective and withstood a late bid by the Buffs to take over second place in the Big Eight, 81-76.

League-leading Kansas outscored Nebraska 12-1 at the outset of the second half to pave the way to an 81-67 victory.

Dave Robisch paced the winner with 23 points while teammate Roger Brown hit 19.

Senior guard Dan Fife sank two free throws on a one-and-one situation with 59 seconds to play to lift unbeaten Big Ten tower Michigan to a 82-81 win over Northwestern.

The Wolverines are now 6-0 in league play and 12-4 overall. Ohio State, Illinois and Purdue remained tied for second with 4-1 records by winning Saturday.

Big Jim McDaniel poured in 26 points to pace Ohio Valley Conference leading Western Kentucky past Middle Tennessee, 87-73.

Poo Welch scored a layup with eight seconds left to give Houston a three-point lead and offset a last-second basket to give the Cougars a 93-92 win over Seattle.

Knicks Foiled by Love

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bob Love scored 40 points, including 17 in the third period, as the Chicago Bulls defeated the New York Knicks, 109-102, Saturday night to close in on the vital second-place playoff birth in the Midwest Division of the NBA.

Chicago, now 1½ games behind Detroit, met its only resistance in the third period when New York took a brief four-point lead at 79-75 with two minutes to go in the period.

Love then scored two quick baskets to tie the game and Matt Guokas sank a foul shot with 33 seconds remaining to put the Bulls in front for good.

BUCKS ROMP

OAKLAND (AP) — Guard Jon McGlocklin connected on 10 of 11 field goals attempts in the first half to start Milwaukee on the way to an easy 111-85 victory over the San Francisco Warriors in an NBA game Saturday night.

The Bucks scored 11 points in a row at the end of the first quarter and the start of the second period to build up an 11-point lead and were never threatened thereafter.

Oscar Robertson scored 19 points for Milwaukee, including the 23,044th of his career to move into second place on the all-time list in pro basketball. He moved ahead of Elgin Baylor of the Lakers. Robertson now trails only Wilt Chamberlain, also of the Lakers.

76ERS WIN

Philadelphia parlayed the outside shooting of Hal Greer and Archie Clark and the inside work of Billy Cunningham to post a 118-109 NBA victory over Cincinnati Saturday night.

Royals coach Bob Cousy protested the game because he said Philadelphia's Jim Washington was taken out of the contest in the first quarter during an injury time out and then returned later. He said that violated an NBA rule.

HOT SCOT

Ken Buchanan readies for Friday night scuffle at Forum with Mando Ramos for world lightweight crown.

Buchanan 'Not Doon Up Toon...Defend Me Title'

"I'm just an ordinary sort o' person. For me to achieve what I ha' achieved in the last few months is a great victory for Scotland."—Ken Buchanan.

The town — er, toon is called Edinburrah, not Edinburgh as in Pittsburgh, and the inhabitants are not what they drink — scotch — but Scottish.

The young man from abroad is patient with the columnist who murders the king's kilted English because, after all, there in the modest cottage he shares with his bride and wee laddie on the outskirts near the Fourth Road Bridge, he is not even king in his own castle.

"It's a stupid thing altogether," says Ken Buchanan, who has come 6,000 miles to straighten out a technicality in the lightweight title scene against Mando Ramos at the L.A. Sports Arena Friday night.

Ramos lost the title last March to Panama's Ismael Laguna, who was defrocked by the World Boxing Council and the affiliated British Boxing Board of Control when he chose to defend against Buchanan rather than Mando last September.

So when Buchanan arrived home from his startling triumph in Puerto Rico, the reception was as barren as a moon landing. The World Boxing Assn.'s opinion doesn't count in Britain.

"They doon' recognize me as the champ," Buchanan complains. "What they're doon is deprivin' me o' me earnin's."

To Ken, it's just another injustice perpetrated against the oppressed Scots by the English.

"There's a thing between the Scots an' the English," he explains. "English people are always rubbin' it in — 'we done this and we done that.' I've done most o' me fightin' doon in England, but the way the Board o' Control is runnin' things doon there, I'm not gonna be fightin' in England very often."

SO IF BUCHANAN WINS THE OTHER half of the crown Friday night, he may just take it home to Edinburgh and bury it. There could hardly be a safer place on earth.

"I'm the only professional boxer in Edinburgh," he says. "In fact, they doon' hold professional shows in Scotland now."

It's an environment that appeals to Buchanan, who with a couple of successful defenses would be content to hack out a life of contentment building cabinets and furniture in his carpentry shop back home.

"Bein' the only professional in Edinburgh, I probably get as much publicity as Ramos does here. It's a small community and people will recognize you. But I doon' go oot o' me way.

"We take everything slow up there. Even people from London come up to Edinburgh and think it's very slow. We doon' ha' any of these drugs, doon' ha' too many hippies and we doon' ha' muggers. A woman can walk doon the street anytime she wants. I'm not gonna say everybody in Edinburgh's an angel, but it's a very quiet toon."

Buchanan's idea of a big night is "taking me wife out to a picture or a meal noo an' then. We enjoy that very much. I always make sure I get me rest."

So the title match presents a classic contrast in life styles, as well as fighting styles. Mando, the slugging swinger, would be ill at ease in Edinburgh, where he wouldn't even know where to go to get arrested. Buchanan, the quick and clever Scot, is visiting Los Angeles strictly for business and will not tolerate any of Ramos' shenanigans.

Ken is aware of Mando's reputation for postponing fights.

"You bloody bet I'm aware of it," he says. "I didn't come over here for a holiday. I come over here to defend me world title . . . and if he's noot ready to fight when he should, I'm goin' home."

IN THE MEANTIME, BUCHANAN is attempting to make himself as quietly comfortable as possible, despite the fawnings of the local Scottish community which seldom holds such a celebrity of its own in such proximity. When Buchanan landed at L.A. International a week ago, he was met by a bagpipe band.

"It was terrific," he says, "like home-sweet-home. I thought I was just steppin' off the plane ba' in Scotland."

This is Ken's second visit to the United States. After beating Laguna, he returned in December to thrash Donato Paduano, a regarded welterweight 10 pounds bigger, in a warmup to the Muhammad Ali-Oscar Bonavena bout at Madison Square Garden. His impressive boxing almost stole the show.

"I always like to gi' 'em me best," Ken says. "I've fought them all — boxers, sluggers. I'm noot boastin' or anything, but I've come through well. Me record proves it."

The only loss in Buchanan's 39 fights was to Spain's Miguel Velasquez, a controversial 15-round decision for the European lightweight title in Madrid a year ago.

"I only weighed 9 stone three-quarters," he says, "which is, uh, just three pounds over the featherweight limit. I was well underweight because, with his postponements, I had trained three times for the one fight. I left all me work in the gym."

BY APPEARANCES, BUCHANAN'S style has done him well. Except for a beautifully flattened nose, he could pass for a well-conditioned soccer player, which he also has been, or a slightly overgrown jockey.

"I'm noot badly marked," he agrees, "except for the nose, which didn' happen in boxing. It happened when I was 15. A boy was clowning around and hit me wi' his head."

Buchanan's unwillingness to trade punches has drawn criticism from many frustrated opponents.

"The guys who criticize me," Ken points out, "are the guys who come out of boxing wi' cauliflower ears, their eyebrows droopin' over their eyes and their noses stretchin' from one ear to the other. I doon' want to be like that.

"What's the sense o' bein' punched around? I'm still young and the way I box I've goot a lot o' years left. I suppose I'm a loot like Clay. I doon' like t' be hurt. You ha' to enjoy life, and I doon' think you can enjoy life as much once you been knocked aboot.

"You can never go out the same as you go in . . . but I'm goona ha' a darn good try."

CALLING HER SHOTS

Mary Ellen Dinneen, color girl on radio station which broadcasts Northwestern University basketball games, says she criticizes, analyzes and gossips during game. See story below.

BASKETBALL FANS AT NORTHWESTERN GET NEW 'SLANT'

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Not all the whistling at Northwestern University home basketball games are by the referees. Mary Ellen Dinneen gets a good share.

The leggy Miss with flowing blonde hair, athletic slimness and inquisitively pretty face, does the color commentary of the games over station WEAW-FM. Her personal call letters are 36-25-36 or WOW.

Mary Ellen, 22, graduated from Northwestern last June with a major in history and minor in Spanish and Italian and determination not to be caught in a desk-sitting job.

She finally became secretary for the radio station's president Ed Wheeler after he promised her a shot at playing play-by-play basketball sportscaster Pete Bordwell.

"I never had faced a have a basketball background," said the 5-foot-7 Mary Ellen in a soft voice. "I started playing basketball in the fifth grade back in Washington, D.C., and I played on girl teams in high school and at Northwestern.

"I get excited watching the games and that excitement carries over in my radio comments, I guess.

"At first I described what the cheerleaders are wearing and such feminine stuff as that. I wasn't being aggressive enough. But now I criticize some and tell about what I know of the game and try to analyze a little.

"The hardest thing I had to learn was to have something come out of my mouth when I opened it."

Since going on the air, mike before, but I did Mary Ellen said she has received two letters.

"One was from a man who said I had no business commenting on basketball and that my place was in a boudoir. The other was from a student at the University of Illinois, Chicago and it was more of a love letter.

"I don't go out with the players, but I date a lot. But when I think of marriage I just go pfoof. I'm too restless to settle down. I want to do a lot of traveling. When I'm 26 or 27 I'll start thinking of marriage and maybe by the time I'm 30 I'll do it.

"My mother didn't get married until she was 29 and I have some cousins at that age now who keep reminding me there are a lot of fish in the sea."

"But I think being a sports writer for a big newspaper really would be exciting," she added.

She digs ballet and the theater, likes golf, swimming and tennis and is tied closely to her Washington family with its athletic tradition.

"My dad is a lawyer with the government," she said. "My mother has won trophies as a duck pin champion. My brother, Bill, is a senior at Dartmouth and a star hammer-thrower intent on making the Olympics.

"And my grandfather, who is now dead, pitched in the World Series for Boston and later was a major league umpire. I'm sure you've heard of Big Bill Dinneen."

Drag Champ Dies in Fiery Crackup

By ALLEN WOLFE

POMONA — Tragedy marred the opening day of the 11th Winernationals drag racing championships Saturday at L.A. County Fairgrounds with the fiery death of a prominent dragster.

Pete Robinson, former NHRA national champion from Atlanta, Ga., was the victim of a spectacular accident that left him with massive internal injuries and a fractured skull.

The 37-year-old clung to life for six hours before dying at Pomona Valley Hospital.

The mishap, witnessed by a majority of the 28,200 spectators, occurred when Robinson was making a top fuel qualifying pass in his 426-cubic-inch Ford slingshot rail.

After passing the electric timing traps at the end of his quarter-mile run, Robinson's car appeared to lurch to the right, sending it hurtling into a protective guard rail at over 230 mph.

Upon contact, the car disintegrated, sending huge pieces of metal and rubber flying over a 200-foot radius. The bulk of the chassis separated between the engine and firewall in a hail of smoke and fire.

The rollbar cage containing Robinson bounded across both lanes of the track and vaulted over the left-side protective barrier, coming to rest more than 400 feet from the point of impact on the spectator side.

It took several minutes to remove Robinson from the twisted wreckage and repair crews spent better part of 20 minutes cleaning up the course.

"The rollbar cage was intact and the shoulder harness and restraining gear held," reported NHRA official Bob Russo, who was on the scene. "But he (Robinson) was still unconscious when they put him in the ambulance.

"Pete never pulled his parachute, so he must have taken a tremendous jolt."

As fate would have it, Robinson clocked a 6.775 elapsed time and a top speed of 199.55 MPH during the tragic run. It would have qualified him fourth quickest in the 32-car eliminator field for today's finals.

Robinson, a graduate of Georgia Tech with a degree in engineering, earned his nickname of "Sneaky Pete" in 1961 when as a virtual unknown he defeated a stellar field of veterans to win the NHRA national championship at Indianapolis Raceway Park.

Norm Wilcox of Redondo Beach led the top fuel qualifiers with a 6.702 blast only 10 minutes before trial runs ended at 5:50 p.m. because of darkness. Slowest qualifier was Bill Dunlap of Capitola, Calif., with a 7.039 run.

Jake Johnson of Arlington, Tex., led the funny car parade at 6.945 elapsed time — the lone funny car jockey to break the elusive seven-second barrier.

An overflow crowd of 55,000 is expected for today's eliminator finals which commence at 11 a.m. Gates began opening as early as 2 a.m. for fans with campers and those wishing the best vantage points to view the $270,000 event — one of the richest in drag racing history.

Pole Goes to Foyt

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — A.J. Foyt, three-time Indianapolis 500 champion, pushed his red-and-white 1971 Mercury to a speed of 182.744 miles per hour Saturday to earn the pole position for the Daytona 500.

Foyt, who won the Firecracker 400 over the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway in 1964 and 1965, edged defending Nascar Grand National Champion Bobby Isaac for the No. 1 starting spot for the $200,000 race Feb. 14.

Isaac, of Catawba, N.C., posted a speed of 180.050 MPH in his 1971 Dodge. Foyt and Isaac were the only drivers to top the 180-MPH mark.

A total of 30 cars battled for the two qualifying positions.

3:59.4 EFFORT FOR VON RUDEN

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Tom Von Ruden of the Pacific Coast Club ran the first sub four minute indoor mile in three years Saturday night, capturing the feature in the Fort Worth Coaches Indoor Games in 3:59.4.

It was Von Ruden's first sub four-minute mile indoors. He was a member of the 1968 U.S. Olympic team and finished ninth in the 1,500 run.

The last sub four-minute mile was run by Jim Ryun in New York February 9, 1968, a 3:57.5 effort.

Von Ruden didn't take the lead until two laps remained. He passed Jim Crawford, a Richardson, Tex., school teacher, who finished second in 4:01.4.

Von Ruden, running with just three hours of sleep after competing Friday in Toronto, credited the fast pace of Crawford for the excellent time.

"He really made the pace get going," Von Ruden said. "I didn't have anything to do but go after him."

Von Ruden won the 1,000 meter run in 2:08.2 Friday night.

"Sometimes being tired will relax you," he said. "That's what happened tonight."

In other events, Jeff Greene of Oklahoma took the 60-yard high hurdles in 7.4; Marvin Mills of Texas A&M nipped brother Curtis in the 60-yard dash in 6.2, and Larry Rose of Oklahoma State grabbed the 1000 yard run in 2:09.5.

Fast Run by Pearce

SEATTLE (UPI) — Kerry Pearce of Australia and local favorite Doris Brown tied indoor records Saturday night at the Seattle Invitational indoor track meet.

Pearce actually was timed a tenth of a second faster than his old record in the two-mile run, at 8:27.1 but it will go nto the books as 8:27.2 because ndoor tmes over 3,000 meters are kept only n fifths of a second.

Pearce holds the record along with George Young of Arizona. The Australian runs for the University of Texas at El Paso.

Mrs. Brown, running for the Falcon Track Club, tied the indoor record in the 880 with a time of 2:07.3. She now shares the mark with Madeline Manning of the United States, who first set the record in 1969.

BIG COMEBACK FOR McELROY

BALTIMORE (AP) — Brian McElroy, sitting out a year of ineligibility at Villanova after transferring from Kansas, won the Calvert Mile Saturday night in the 25th All-Eastern Invitational indoor track meet.

McElroy took the lead at the start of the 11th and, final lap on the Civic Center boards, overtaking Bob Wheeler of Luke who had set the early pace.

McElroy, representing New York A.C., was timed in 4:08.1. Sam Blair of the Pacific Coast Club was second and Wheeler dropped back to third.

Eamonn O'Keefe, an Irish runner competing for the University of Florida, won his second race in two nights as he took the 880-yard run in 1:50.4.

Ed Roberts of Sports International took the 440 for the second straight year, being timed in 50 seconds flat.

Two Pitt runners took feature events, with Smitty Brown winning the 600 in 1:11.6 and Jerry Richey the two-mile in 9:01.2.

Cheryl Toussant of the Atoms Track Club in Brooklyn, N.Y., set a meet record of 2:12.5 in the women's 880, scratching Abby Hoffman's eight-year mark by 1.2 seconds.

Perkins Top Boxer

SYLVANIA, Ohio (UPI) — Eddie Perkins, a globe-touring oldtimer, was voted "Boxer of the Year" Saturday by the World Boxing Assn.

Wise's 41 Helps Stars Snap Slide

Willie Wise drilled in 41 points Saturday night to pace the Utah Stars to a 127-122 American Basketball Assn. decision over the Virginia Squires.

The Stars placed six men in double figures to break a four game losing streak.

Rick Barry of the New York Nets put on a 48-point performance, but his team fell to the Indiana Pacers, 110-109 in overtime.

Billy Keller and Roger Brown accounted for five points in the last 30 seconds to give the Pacers the edge.

Joe Caldwell of the Carolina Cougars scored 29 points to lead the Cougars to a 139-132 victory over the Kentucky Colonels.

Denver choked off a late Pittsburgh rally in the closing seconds to record a 115-114 win.

Palmer, Shaw, Weaver Share Tee Lead

HONOLULU (UPI) — Arnold Palmer, Tom Shaw and DeWitt Weaver deadlocked at 12-under-par 204 Saturday to share the lead after the third round of the $200,000 Hawaiian Open golf tournament.

The colorful Shaw, the halfway leader, Palmer and Weaver stayed neck and neck for four hours in sweltering heat to keep a shade ahead of several other golfers in the race for the $40,000 first prize.

Weaver included two spectacular eagles, got on 35-foot putts, in his round of 34-34—68. Palmer hit every green but one and missed a number of birdie opportunities in his round of 68, also carding two 34s. Shaw shot 34-35—69.

Afterwards Shaw cracked, "I had a bad day today. I didn't make any 50-footers." He was referring to his second round which featured a series of spectacular long putts.

Hot on the heels of the front-running trio were defending champion Bruce Crampton, PGA champ Dave Stockton, Miller Barber and Bill Garrett, all at 206. Then came Lee Trevino, whose 66 was one of the best rounds of the day, and Jack Montgomery, both at 207.

Billy Casper, Jack Nicklaus and leading money winner George Archer were far out of contention. Casper had 213, Nicklaus 214 and Archer 216.

Temperature at the sprawling 7,122-yard Waialae Country Club reached the high 80s and breezes blew softly in off the ocean on a day in which scoring was better than it had been in earlier rounds.

Arnie Misses 7 Putts of 15 Feet or Shorter

Weaver held the lead during most of the round, thanks to his eagle on holes 1 and 13. His wife Sheri followed him around the course.

"I missed the cut here the last two times," Weaver said. "This time I brought my wife along and she is bringing me luck."

Palmer, desperately hungry for his 56th tour victory to insure his spot as the game's premier attraction, was at or near the top all day.

But the all-time leading money-winner was still frustrated with less than spectacular putting.

"I made one putt all day," Palmer said. "I was close to the hole on almost all of them, but I just couldn't make a putt."

He missed seven times from 15 feet or less, twice from four feet.

"He was knocking the flag down all day," said Shaw, Palmer's playing partner. "I'd have made all of them," he laughed.

DAVE LEWIS

Golf Wrong Game for Series Hero

PHOENIX — You could hear the anguished cry "gosh, darnit," ringing out over the Goodyear Golf and Country Club as Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles began play in the American Airlines Astrojet golf tournament for pro baseball and football players.

After missing another of many, many shots during a long afternoon, Johnny Bench of the Cincinnati Reds commented, "too bad you can't play this game with your glove."

Johnny, of course, was referring to Robinson's fantastic World Series when he virtually beat the Reds single-handed with his tremendous fielding.

"Well, I did get my share of hits, if you recall," Brooks laughed as he slipped the needle to Bench, "but I'm sure having trouble getting 'wood' on this golf ball."

The night before, the two of them attended the Phoenix Press Box Assn.'s annual awards dinner in honor of Brooks' Oriole teammate, pitcher Jim Palmer, who was chosen the area's athlete of the year.

It's the only dinner Brooks has attended since the Series that he hasn't received the top award. He started with winning "most valuable player" in the Series, an honor that won him a new car, while his latest haul a week ago was the $10,000, diamond-studded Hickok belt symbolic of the pro athlete of the year for 1970.

WHEN BENCH WAS CALLED UPON to speak at the dinner, he turned to Robinson and remarked, "Pete Rose and I have an auto dealership and if we'd known before the Series that Brooks wanted one so badly, we'd have gladly given him one.

"Incidentally," he went on, "I'll let you in on a secret. The car he won is equipped with an oversized glove department."

George Audrie of the Dallas Cowboys, who won the Astrojet last year with Ron Santo of the Cubs, was playing in the group behind Robinson and walked up to the tee just as Brooks "fanned" another one.

"You sure can't take your frustration out on a golf ball like you can a football opponent," he said. "Back on the second hole, I gave the ball a forearm an an elbow, but it didn't do any good."

Yogi Berra was having his problems. too. "Look at my caddy, he's exhausted. But I warned them to get me one in good condition because I cover quite a bit of territory."

LOOKING BACK ON THE WORLD SERIES, Robinson says, "it was one of those things that happen to an athlete once in a lifetime. A major league ballplayer usually can expect to make outstanding plays from time to time, but in the Series they all seemed to come at once."

"Mr. Golden Glove" handled 23 fielding chances in the Series, nine off the bats of such powerful righthanders as Bench, Tony Perez and Lee May. Two of his chances were converted into rally-killing double plays, and he saved at least four runs at critical moments with the greatest exhibition of fielding ever seen in one World Series.

Brooks reveals how he happened to be in the right place at the right time. "I played two feet closer to the foul line this time than I did the year before against the Mets because I figured fellows like Bench, Perez and May would pull the ball better against our southpaw pitchers.

They say they only pay off on hitting in baseball, but Robby got an $8,500 windfall off his fielding when he was given 975 shares of common stock in A-T-O, Ins., a division of Rawlings Sporting Goods because it happens that he has used and endorsed Rawlings Gloves throughout his 11-year major league career. The 975 is derived from his fielding average.

THE BAT BROOKS USED IN THE Series already is in the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, while his glove will be sent along in a couple of months. "It's hard to break in a new glove, so I'm taking my old one to spring training and trade off while breaking in a new one. Then I'll send it along to Cooperstown," Brooksie explained.

The bat and glove together will signify the complete destruction of the Reds in the Series. Brooks hit a home run to win the first game; drove in the tying run and scoring the winning run in the second; drove in two runs with a double in the third; went four-for-four in game No. 4, and got a single that gave him 9-for-21 and a .421 average. His nine hits tied the Series record for five games.

But it was his fielding which proved so sensational. "I'm fortunate that I have good hands and good reflexes," Brooks says, in revealing a most interesting little-known fact about himself. "Although I throw and bat righthanded, I'm actually left handed. I eat with my left hand and write with it. A lot of people look at me kind of funny when I sign an autograph. They think I'm kidding around. It's funny, but I can't throw left handed and I never tried to bat left handed."

THE MOST IMPORTANT LETTER THE Orioles ever received was dated Feb. 13, 1955; addressed to then general manager Paul Richards and led to the signing of Robinson.

Lindsay Deal, who had played in the minor leagues with Richards, wrote a personal letter of recommendation. Brooks had been bird-dogged by scouts from seven major league teams while in high school in Little Rock, but the Oriole scouts were conspicuous by their absence.

Richards immediately dispatched his chief scout to Little Rock and he supported Deal's testimony . . . and the rest is history.

Ironically, Deal, who was responsible for discovering Robinson, played only four games in the major leagues with the old Brooklyn Dodgers, and failed to get a hit.

Marti's 67 Earns Lead at Ontario

Veteran Fred Marti rolled in a 30-foot putt on the final hole Saturday for a four-under-par 67 and a two-stroke lead entering the final round today of the $25,000 United Air Lines-Ontario Open golf tournament.

Marti has a three-round score of 204, 10 strokes under par over the Ontario National course.

Second-round leader John Jacobs, younger brother of touring pro Tommy Jacobs, overshot the 18th green and settled for a two-over-par 73 and a 206 total.

Mike Morley and Doug Olson are 208, Gene Torres and Larry Laoretti at 209 and five golfers tied at 210.

Marti's 67 was the low round of the day, matched by Rod Curl and Jim Gilbert. Marti's round included six birdies along with a double bogey six on the front nine.

Jimmy Clark fired the tournament's first hole-in-one, sinking six-iron shot on the fly at the 165-yard No. 13. It was his sixth ace, fifth in tournament play.

The United Air Lines-Ontario Open is a satellite event, running concurrently with the Hawaiian Open.

Aussie Takes Caracas Tee Lead With 66

CARACAS (UPI) — Australia's David Graham shot a four-under par 66 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the 10th Caracas Open golf tournament.

Graham's sparkling round gives him a 54-hole total of 203, which is two strokes better than veteran PGA performer Tommy Bolt and Canada's Wilf Hoeniuk. Bolt, a former U.S. Open champion, had a 67 Saturday.

Tied for fourth place, five strokes off the pace, are Chick Evans, Steve Lyles and Manuel De La Torre of the United States. Evans and De La Torre each shot a 67 Saturday while Lyles had a 69.

Dow Finsterwald of the U.S., the first round leader, slumped to a 75 and fell into a tie for seventh place with Roberto De Vicenzo of Argentina at 209.

Horlen Fires 71, Shoots Into Lead in Astrojet Golf

By DAVE LEWIS
Staff Writer

PHOENIX — Joel Horlen, veteran righthanded pitching star for the Chicago White Sox, and quarterback Craig Morton of the Dallas Cowboys, surged into the lead after 36 holes in the American Airlines Astrojet golf tournament Saturday at the Goodyear Golf and Country Club.

Horlen, one of the finest golfers in the pro sports world outside of pro golf itself, spearheaded his team into first place on the strength of a brilliant one-under-par 71, lowest gross score of the tournament so far.

The 33-year-old pitcher's sub-par round, despite three bogeys, let to a best-ball score of 63 and a 36-hole total of 128. Horlen has ambitions to try the PGA tour when he retires from baseball.

Morton, who plays to a 16 handicap, posted a gross 91, but helped four strokes, accounting for two of them when he got a natural bridie on No. 12, a stroke hole, for a net eagle.

Morton, playing in his first Astrojet, says he is eager to finish high and "win some money for a kids' home in Dallas. The Cowboys gave the children a Christmas Party and I was really moved when I saw youngsters there who had been tortured by parents or left on a doorstep."

The Rams, Dodgers and Angels moved into strong contention and are in a good position to win today and split the $10,000 first prize.

Willie Davis of the Dodgers and Merlin Olsen of the Rams are tied for second at 129 with two other twosomes — first-day leaders Willie Mays (Giants) and Bruce Gossett (49ers), Jim Palmer (Orioles) and Willie Richardson (Miami Dolphins), and Joe DiMaggio and Otto Graham.

One stroke back and only two off the pace at 130 are Tony Conigliaro (Angels) and Deacon Jones (Rams), who had a best-ball of 63, equalling the day's low score also posted by the Horlen-Morton tandem and Jerry Koosman (Mets) and Jan Stenerud (Kansas City Chiefs). The latter team has a 133 total.

Don Clendenon (Mets) and Joe Kapp (Boston Patriots) are at 132, while Mickey Mantle and Don Maynard are among four teams tied at 132.

Davis and Olsen battled their way into the thick of it despite all kinds of trouble.

First of all, someone gave the Ram tackle, whose right leg is still encased in a 30-pound cast following knee surgery, the wrong starting time and he barely made it to the first tee before being disqualified.

"I was a basket case for the first eight holes, but Willie kept us in there by shaving four strokes off par," Olsen said. "Finally on the ninth hole, I was able to pick up a stroke when I had a tap-in for a par and a net birdie.

"But then I went back into my coma until the last hole," Merlin said.

"Yeah," said Davis, "but he sure made up for it there. He hit a 2-iron off the tee, then knocked a 4-iron six feet from the hole and made the putt for a natural birdie and an eagle two."

How is it playing with the cast? Olsen was asked. "If it wasn't for the Gipper out there, I couldn't have made it," he replied.

Davis won the 1969 Astrojet at LaCosta teamed with Jerry Kramer.

"I gave Willie fair warning before the first round," Olsen pointed out. "I told him that 'if you want to win this tournament again, you're in real trouble.'"

Hinson Honored

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — Larry Hinson, who won over $100,000 on the pro golf tour last year after overcoming a polio attack that withered his left arm, Saturday was selected the 18th winner of the Ben Hogan Trophy.

The 26-year-old Hinson, who broke the damaged arm three times while fighting for a career in sports, was cited by the Golf Writers Assn. of America for the trophy established after Ben Hogan made a spectacular comeback from nearly fatal auto accident injuries.

Hinson, a Douglas, Ga., resident, was striken by polio as a youngster but still managed to play high school football and on the 1967 NCAA college division football champions at East Tennessee State.

He won only $3,968 during his first year on the pro tour, 1968, but led the PGA in top-five finishes last year with his most spectacular bid, a 72nd hole eagle to tie Jack Nicklaus for second in the Westchester classic.

Trade Angers Red Berenson

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Red Berenson reacted bitterly to his trade to the Detroit Red Wings Saturday and claimed that general manager Scotty Bowman of the St. Louis Blues made the trade because of Berenson's work with the National Hockey League Players Assn.

Berenson, the captain and scoring leader of the Blues, was traded with Tim Ecclestone to Detroit in exchange for center Garry Unger and right wing Wayne Connelly.

Berenson was re-elected president of the players association at the time of the all-star game in Boston, and Ecclestone was recently selected by the St. Louis players to be the team's own representative in the association.

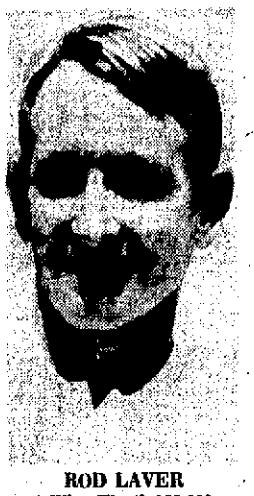

Bowman denied that Berenson's and Ecclestone's activities with the association was a factor in the trade.

"We made the trade for two reasons," Bowman said "First, we want to build our club around youth, and secondly, we really wanted Unger."

"I felt Red's activities with the association were quite extensive," Bowman said. "But we talked about it earlier in the week, and he assured me it was only a figurehead job and it was not the reason he was not having as good a season as last year. A lot of times a player in this situation is devalued to another team, but I assured Ned Harkness (Detroit general manager) this was not the case, and that the association did not take much of Red's time."

Berenson, nevertheless, called his work with the players association "the major reason" for the trade.

"Scotty's very much against the association," Berenson said. "I don't think I would have been traded if I were not involved in the association."

ROD LAVER
9 Wins Worth $90,000

Laver Wins Easy $10,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Amazing Rod Laver swept his ninth consecutive match in the $210,000 Tennis Champions Classic Saturday by eliminating head-shaking Tom Okker of Holland, 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

The victory for Laver, the 32-year-old Australian southpaw now living in Corona Del Mar, Calif., brought his total winnings to $90,000 in the series of $10,000 - winner - take - all matches that began on Jan. 2.

A sweep of the entire series would bring Laver $170,000 — and if Okker's bewilderment is any criteria, Laver may very well be putting that figure in his bank account.

"I never played a better player and never saw anything like Laver," Okker said after shaking his head in disbelief throughout the match. "He was everywhere and did whatever he wanted to do. I couldn't believe the shots he was making."

With his backhand under almost unbelievable control, the redhaired Australian broke through Okker's serve in the second game of the first set and toyed with him the rest of way.

Laver's victory now brings him against Dennis Ralston on Feb. 17 at which time Laver will go for $100,000.

In the qualifying match, 34-year-old Roy Emerson came from behind to defeat Roger Taylor of England, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 7-5.

The last set went to sudden death and Emerson swept the first seven points. By his victory Emerson will meet the winner of the Laver-Ralston match for $10,000 in New Haven, Conn., on Feb. 19 in the last of the $10,000 series.

Ashe, Nastase to Play for Title

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Hometown favorite Arthur Ashe and Ilie Nastase of Romania advanced Saturday to the finals of the Fidelity Invitational tennis tournament.

Ashe disposed of Clark Graebner of New York, 7-6, 6-2, and Nastase upset top-seeded Australian John Newcombe, 6-2, 4-6, 7-6.

The championship match will be played today.

Billie Jean, Jones Gain Net Finals

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (UPI) -- Billie Jean King and Ann Jones won semifinal honors Saturday in the Virginia Slims invitational tennis tournament, setting the stage for a rematch of the 1969 Wimbledon finals in Sunday's finals.

Billie Jean, three-time Wimbledon champion, disposed of Francoise Durr, 6-3, 6-2, while Mrs. Jones of England downed Kerry Melville of Australia, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

The Jones-Melville semifinals proved to be the "one that got away" for Miss Melville. She led four games to two in the final set before Mrs. Jones rallied to put away the victory.

In doubles semifinals in the Chattanooga event, fifth slot on the $100,000 circuit, Mrs. King teamed with Rosemary Casals to down Judy Dalton and Peaches Bartkowicz, 7-5, 7-5.

The King-Casals duo is regarded as the top doubles combination in the world.

The other scheduled semifinals doubles match was not played and Jones and Durr moved into the finals after Miss Melville and Karen Krantzcke withdrew because of a stomach injury aggravated in Miss Melville's singles match.

Jones and Durr will play King and Casals in today's finals.

Air Force Flies High

Touring Air Force Academy from Colorado Springs edged Cal State Fullerton and host Cal State Long Beach Saturday to win a triangular gymnastic meet involving three of the nation's top teams.

Air Force edged CSF 150.50-149.85 with the 49ers third at 136.10. Fullerton's Glen Heckenliable won two events, side horse and parallel bars, and Air Force's Al Hoit was all-around titlist.

Floor ex—Solano (AF), Side horse—Heckenliable (CSF), Rings—Tracey (AF), Long horse—Mims (CSF), Parallel bars—Heckenliable (CSF), Horizontal bars—Nardecchia (AF), All-Arounds—Hoit (AF).
Final scores: Air Force 150.50, CS Fullerton 149.85, Cal State Long Beach 136.10.

'Golden Jet' Hits 26th Hat Trick, Catches 'Rocket'

Combined News Services

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS — Chicago's Bobby Hull tied Maurice (Rocket) Richard's National Hockey League career hat trick record with three goals Saturday night in the Black Hawks' 6-2 victory at Minnesota.

It was Hull's 26th career hat trick, equaling a mark, Richard set with Montreal in the 1940's, 1950's and 1960's.

Hull's three goals also moved him to within one of equaling Richard's total of 544, second on the all-time NHL goal scoring list. Detroit's Gordie Howe, with 773, is the all-time high scorer.

The Chicago ace got his first goal and 31st of the season when he beat the North Stars' Gilles Gilbert with a 45-foot slap shot at 9:44 of the second period. That erased a 1-0 North Star lead provided by Bill Goldsworthy's 13th goal at 8:57 of the first period.

Balon banged in a goal in both the first and second periods and Bill Fairbairn added a pair.

Rod Gilbert, with his 21st of the season, scored what proved to be the winning marker at 7:08 of the third period. It gave New York a 5-3 edge.

BOSTON — National Hockey League scoring leader Phil Esposito had a goal and two assists to go over the 100-point mark for the second time in three years Saturday night while leading the Boston Bruins to a 4-3 win over the Buffalo Sabres.

Esposito netted his 46th goal and added a pair of assists for a 101 point total as the Bruins built a four goal lead but narrowly held off a third period comeback by the Sabres.

Defenseman Don Awrey, John Bucyk and Don Marcotte scored the other Boston goals as the Bruins ran their unbeaten streak to eight games and home ice winning string to 19 games, three short of their own NHL record.

TORONTO — Center Jim Harrison scored two breakaway goals, one with his team short-handed, as the Toronto Maple Leafs marred goalie Bruce Gamble's return to the Maple Leaf Garden by defeating the Philadelphia Flyers, 4-2, Saturday night.

Gamble, who was traded to the Flyers along with Mike Walton for Bernie Parent last week, was superb in the first period, handling 10 shots flawlessly as Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead on rookie center Ferde Bernier's 19th goal of the year.

Gamble's magic vanished in the second period as Dave Keon, Harrison and Garry Monahan beat him giving the Leafs a 3-1 lead.

VANCOUVER — Dave Balon fired in his 31st and 32nd goals of the season to lead the New York Rangers to a 5-4 National Hockey League victory over Vancouver Saturday night.

Prep Scores 3 Wins, Nabs Yacht Lead

Bob Burns, a 17-year-old Santa Monica High student representing the California Yacht Club, won three consecutive races Saturday off Long Beach Harbor to take the first day lead in the Southern California finals for the Long Beach Yacht Club-sponsored Congressional Cup series March 18-20.

Burns defeated Dennis Conner of San Diego Y.C., Chuck Kober of Newport Harbor Y.C. (a Long Beach resident who also is a member of LBYC) and Henry Schofield of Alamitos Bay Y.C.

Conner had two wins, Schofield one and Kober none in the light air-hampered competition.

The four regional sailoff winners meet today in another round-robin aboard Cal 40 sloops. The two skippers with the most wins join eight previously selected yachtsmen from all over North America in the Congressional Cup series.

Collins, Ellis Win Golf Sweepstakes

Mel Collins shot a 72-11—61 Saturday to win the weekly Virginia Country Club class A sweepstakes. Ty Ellis was Class B low net winner.

Sportsman's Club Installs Officers

This must be the year of father-son succession. Just a week or so ago the Southern California Tuna Club installed Dr. Robert McCoy as president. His father had been president years before that.

BILL COLEMAN JR.
Takes Over Gavel

The Long Beach Sportsman's Club on Saturday night installed Bill Coleman Jr. as president. His father served in the same capacity in 1951. Bill Jr. didn't become interested in club work until about five years ago; then he put all his youthful vigor into it. From today on for a year he will be wielding the gavel over one of the most active clubs in the city.

Bill Coleman Jr. and his wife, Joen, reside at 4210 Levelside Ave., Lakewood and have three sons, Bob, 14, Steve, 12, and Scott, 4.

Bill Jr. went to Jordan High School, Long Beach City College and later to Harbor Junior College in San Pedro. He and his father operate Truck and Brake Specialties at 231 W. Pacific Coast Hwy., Long Beach, and both are tremendously interested in the outdoors, particularly fresh-water fishing. They have a small stern-drive cruiser at Lake Mead.

Taking office with Bill were Bob Wright, vice president; Bob Neher, treasurer; Bill Hamilton, secretary, and Rusty Thornton, sergeant-at-arms. Those and the following will constitute the board of directors: John Greenwood, Ken Richmond, Bill Willborn and Herb Nau.

THE SPORTSMAN'S CLUB FOUNDED in 1937, thus begins its 34th year. It occupies a valuable piece of property at 3623 Santa Fe Ave., has a lounge, main club and dining room, a pool and card room, casting pool, outdoor patio area and a modern kitchen.

There is little distinction between ocean and fresh water fishing and hunting, even though the club originally was formed mostly for ocean fishermen. It did, especially in the beginning, have a large group of capable workers who could do almost anything in the building trades industry. For that reason, they were able to build a beautiful clubhouse with their own hands.

The club meets every Monday night, with the first Monday of the month reserved mostly for business, the others for fun and comradeship, and visitors are welcome.

The membership list is held at 125, but one of Bill's jobs will be to raise the roster from about 90 to that 125 number this year. There are four big events of the year that attract visitors from other clubs. The Ducks Unlimited dinner is No. 1 on the list. The club prides itself on having raised more money than any other Southern California group for DU.

Its annual dinner for the benefit of the Ocean Fish Protective Assn. is another big event, and the annual Stampede and the annual Luau draw much interest from the wives and sweethearts.

THERE WAS A SHORT-LIVED BURST of fishing activity in the surf at Bolsa Chico Beach (that's what most of us still call Tin Can Beach) last weekend. Joe Creek, of Joe's Bait and Tackle in Sunset Beach, weighed in numerous corbina Sunday, with Bob and Gary Breacher, Huntington Beach, catching several that weighed 4 pounds, 3-9, 3-8, 3-4, 3-2 and some 2-pounders, plus a few barred perch in the 2-pound class.

Since that time, however, the surf has been too clean, if one can imagine that, and the perch and corbina aren't looking at anything that has a hook in it.

The San Gabriel River channel, however, continued to yield good catches of bonito. Also, schools of that gamey fish were flashing around the barges off Belmont Pier and Seal Beach.

An item was carried in this column the other day about Pacific Sportfishing Landing's plan to use Harbor Carriers' docks under a temporary plan for one year, with a tram carrying fishermen from the present Pacific ticket office to the boats.

The plan had been discussed at Pacific, but Eddie McEwen, general manager, said that insurance rates were so high for such an operation that the landing could not afford it. He said, however, that Pacific plans to get its patrons' tackle and gear to the boats on a truck. Also, the truck would be used in transporting fish back to the Pacific entrance.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS — Richard Clift, Carson, is leading the fishermen at Vail Lake in the February Derby with a five-pound bass, but some other anglers have been having remarkable success at the Riverside County privately operated lake on crappie and bluegill weighing up to 1½ pounds. Once again, it was a plastic worm, black, not purple this time, that led to the bass' downfall. Clift also got a 4½-pounder on the same worm.

Thirty-five persons in 13 states and Canada are charged with conspiring to hunt and kill 150 rare desert bighorn sheep, with Gary Swanson, a Yucaipa taxidermist and self-appointed "conservationist" heading the list. The federal government charges that Swanson was contacted by out-of-state hunters and that he arranged hunting trips for them so they could kill and have mounted the bighorn heads for their homes and offices.

How does this grab you? The charges, filed by the U.S. District Attorney's office, are just misdemeanors. Imagine that! Swanson is charged with having received as much as $3,000 per animal. I'm wondering what kind of a slap on the wrist Swanson and the others will get for being "naughty boys."

Fassnacht Hero as 49er Mermen Win 29th in Row

ARLINGTON, Tex. — Just as the football team went to Leon Burns when it needed the big play, the Cal State Long Beach swim team went to Hans Fassnacht Saturday afternoon.

The West German Olympian responded, too, providing the impetus for a 78-35 victory over host Texas-Arlington, the 49ers' 29th consecutice dual meet success.

"I feel Hans is the key to our success," coach Dom Gambril declared before sending his troops into the water for what, on paper, appeared to be their most difficult test of the season.

"I'm going to have Hans swim a leg in the medley relay and then come right back in the 1,000-yard freestyle. If he does as well as we hope, we'll be ahead, 15-1, after two events and it will be difficult for them to recover."

Gambril handed that assignment to Fassnacht and after 20 minutes of splashing around the Rebel pool, he gave the 49er coach what he wanted.

Fassnacht swam the butterfly leg of the medley relay in 52.3, joining backstroker Mitch Ivey (59.2), breaststroker Jose Fiolo (59.2) and freestyler Herman Harvill (47.4) in setting a pool record while winning in 3:33.

Fassnacht then established another pool record while winning the 1,000 in 9:52.3. Julio Arango (10:17.4) finished second and the 49ers were on their way.

Two events later, after bonus victories by Graham White (1:46.6) in the 200 free and Mike Durringer (school record 21.6) in the 50 free, Gambril had his anchor out.

The 49ers, needing 57 points to win, led 25-9 after Durringer's triumph and Gambril had no intention of embarrassing his hosts.

Gambril began pulling entries from the last 10 events and although the 49ers won them all, Arlington collected second and third place in all remaining events except the 200 breaststroke and 500 freestyle.

Four 49ers won two individual events. Fassnacht came back to win the 200 butterfly 1:54.4; Harvill returned for 48.8 success in the 100 free, Andre de-Ridder took both diving events and White later picked up a 4:44.2 win in the 500 free-style.

Gunnar Larsson nearly had a double, taking the individual medley in 1:56.4 before losing a judge's decision to White in the 500 free-style.

Ivey, Cal State NCAA champion, won the backstroke and a team of Durringer, Arango, Larsson and Harvill won the freestyle relay.

Medley relay — Cal State LB (Ivey 54.1, Fiolo 59.2, Fassnacht 52.3, Harvill 47.4) 3:33.0 (ties pool record).
1,000 freestyle — Fassnacht (LB) 9:52.3 (pool record), Arango (LB) 10:17.4, Krels (TA) 10:21.2.
200 freestyle — White (LB) 1:46.6, Tucker (TA) 1:47.4, Barry (TA) 1:48.2.
50 freestyle — Durringer (LB) 21.6 (school record), Helms (TA) 22.5, Walther (TA) 22.9.
Individual medley — Larsson (LB) 1:56.4, Hons (TA) 2:03.5, Weaver (TA) 2:03.9.
1-meter diving — DeRidder (LB) 249.90, Winters (TA) 239.75, Williams (TA) 184.05.
200 butterfly — Fassnacht (LB) 1:54.4, Iverson (TA) 2:02.1, Tucker (TA) 2:04.4.
100 freestyle — Harvill (LB) 48.8, Helms (TA) 49.4, Walther (TA) 50.2.
200 backstroke — Ivey (LB) 1:58.0, Benedict (TA) 2:00.1, Hoge (TA) 2:06.2.
200 breaststroke — Beltz (LB) 2:11.5, (pool record), Fiolo (LB) 2:13.5, Ball (TA) 2:13.4.
500 freestyle — White (LB) 4:42 (pool record), Larsson (LB) 4:44.2, Krels (TA) 5:00.9.
1-meter diving — DeRidder (LB) 262.64, Winters (TA) 256.10, Ledbetter (TA) 197.60.
Freestyle relay — Cal State L.B. (Durringer 49.7, Arango 49.3, Larsson 47.2, Harvill 48.4) 3:13.6.
Final score: Cal State L.B. 78, Texas-Arlington 35.

UCLA Aquas Trim Stanford

STANFORD (UPI) — UCLA came from behind to clinch the 400-yard freestyle relay Saturday, completing a sweep of all six freestyle relay events and capturing a 59-54 swimming victory over Stanford.

Steve Genter and Dave O'Malley were double winners for UCLA. Genter took the 500 and 1,000 freestyle while O'Malley won the 100 and 200 freestyle. Both also were members of the Bruins' victorious freestyle relay team.

Junior Football

The Long Beach Football-for-Youth program has openings for coaches for the 9-13-age bracket. Interested persons should call Mickey Shriver (425-5579) after 6 p.m.

Fullerton Girl Hurls Discus 162

Monette Driscoll threw the discus 162 feet, 3 inches — fourth best all-time women's throw — at an all-comers track and field meet Saturday at Cal State Long Beach.

The 19-year-old Fullerton Jr. College student missed the world record for 19-year-olds by less than 10 feet. The only women to throw the discus farther are Olga Connally, Earline Brown and Carol Frost.

George Fren of the Pacific Coast Club surpassed the all-time American best for the 35-pound weight toss with a heave of 72-3½. Harold Connally, who had the former best, was second in the competition at 70 feet.

Ed Kohler, competing unnattached, won the shot-put with a throw of 58-6.

Stanford Has Easy Time, So Does Bancroft

Richard Davis, Doug Stokke and Joel Comiskey spearheaded a balanced attack Saturday that led Stanford Jr. High to an easy 46-33 victory over Bancroft in the All-City Ninth grade basketball championship finals at Millikan High.

Davis had 13 points to share high-point honors with Bancroft's Dennis Heaton. Stokke added 11 and Comiskey 10 for the winners.

Steve Parker's 19-point effort enabled Bancroft to trim Stephens 37-31 in the Eighth grade finals. Jerry Nealy scored 12 in a losing cause.

Soccer Match Today

The Long Beach Soccer Club travels today to Costa Mesa to meet the Coast Rangers in Pacific Soccer League action. Play begins at 2:30 p.m. at Mariner Park. The LBSC reserves meet the Ranger reserves at 12:30.

Naval Base Eyes Tourney Title

Long Beach Naval Base lays its 8-0 mark on the line Monday as 11th District Basketball Tournament play opens in the Naval Station's Stark Gym.

The USS Bainbridge joins the base team as Long Beach representatives plus five San Diego quintets in the double elimination play.

Miramar Naval Air Station is a heavy favorite to win it all and represent the district in the regional in Bremerton, Wash.

Coach Ray Gritton's base team features a hard-running game and two stellar performers in Marine Barracks' Wes Yarborough and Amphibious Squadron 7's Gator Green.

Bainbridge's tall five snapped back from an 80-58 loss to the base to come back and whip Pt. Mugu NAS, 71-55, and gain its tourney berth in northern area play.

Gritton, on Jerry Tarkanian's staff at Cal State Long Beach, has molded a smooth machine and could pull off an upset and win the Bremerton trip.

The public is welcome to attend.

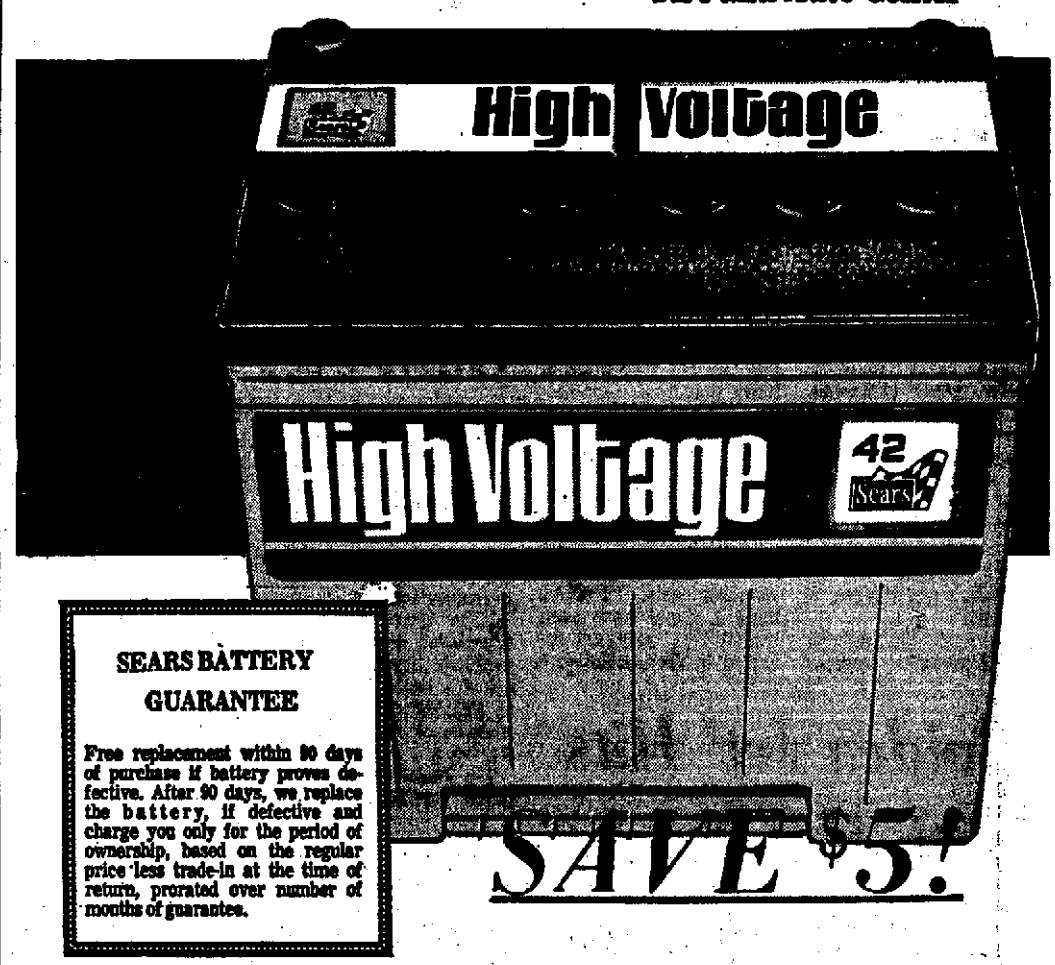

MONDAY'S GAMES

11 a.m., Naval Base vs. North Island NAS; 1 p.m., USS Tripoli vs. Naval Training Center; 6, Bainbridge vs. San Diego Naval Station; 8, North Island-Naval Base loser vs. Tripoli-Training Center loser.

TUESDAY SCHEDULE

11 a.m., Miramar NAS vs. Bainbridge-SD Naval Station winner; 1 p.m., Naval Base-North Island winner vs. Tripoli-Training Center winner; 6, Loser 11 a.m. vs. winner 8 p.m. Monday; 8, Loser 4 p.m. Monday vs. 1 p.m. loser.

U.S. Girl Gets Speed Skate Win

Combined News Services

HELSINKI, Finland — Narrowly missing a world record, 15-year-old Anne Henning of Northbrook, Ill., led a strong U.S. contingent by winning the 500-meter race Saturday at the Women's World Speedskating Championships.

Miss Henning flashed around the course in 44.6 seconds — just 200th of a second slower than the world record for a lowland course held by Ludmilo Titova of the Soviet Union. Miss Titova was second in 45.8.

Three Russians took the first three places in the over-all standings after the opening two events of the world championships, led by Nina Chatkevich the European champion who won the 1,500 meters in 2:23.2 and tied for fourth place in the 500 meters, to lead with 94.533 points.

Miss Titova, who was ninth in the 1,500 meters in addition to finishing second to Miss Henning in the 500, was second over-all with 95.500 points and Tatiana Averina, third in the 500 meters and sixth in the 1,500, was third over-all at 95.633.

Miss Henning finished only 22nd in the 1,500 meters, 10.7 seconds slower than Miss Chatkevich, to take fourth place over-all with 95.900 points. She was followed by Lisbeth Berg of Norway, who had 95.967 points, and Diane Holum, also of Northbrook, at 96.833 points.

Miss Chatkevich beat Stein Kaiser of Holland by 1.7 seconds in the 1,500 meters, and Miss Holum was third in six-tenths of a second behind in third place.

Miss Holum, besides finishing third in the 1,500 meters, was tied for 15th in the 500. Another American, Leah Poulos, was eighth in the 500 meters and 25th in the 1,500 to place 18th over-all with 99.933 points.

Atje Keulen-Deelstra of Holland, the defending world champion, was seventh in the 500 meters but was forced to withdraw when she broke a skate in the 1,500 meters.

HAMAR, Norway — Gary Lyman of the United States came in third Saturday in a 500-meter speedskating event in an international meet.

Ivor Ericsen of Norway won the event in a Norwegian record time of 39.5 seconds and countryman Arne Herjuaune was second in 40.1. Lyman was third in 41.3 seconds.

Lyman's brother, Greg, finished 10th in 41.5 seconds.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. — Craig Shanholzer of Jackson, Wyo., skied to a first place finish Saturday in the first of two downhill races this weekend in the Mt. Werner Classic.

The race is the sixth event in the Canadian-American Ski Trophy series.

Shanholzer skied down the 8,300-foot course, which has a 2,150 foot vertical drop, in a time of 1:36.85. Rod Taylor of Hartford, Conn., finished second with a time of 1:37.72.

Sisters Carolyne and Cheryl Oughton of Calgary, Alta., took first and second places in the women's downhill.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Jim Sladky and Judy Schwomeyer of Wilmington, Del., led a 1-2-3 U.S. sweep of the dance competition Saturday at the North American Figure Skating Championships.

Second were Harvey and Ann Millier of Drexel, Pa., followed by John Johns and Mary Campbell of Lansing, Mich.

The Canadian couples following in order were Barry Soper and Louise Lind of Vancouver; Dave Sutton of Guelph, Ont., and Mary Church of Toronto, and Jim Holden and Brenda Sandys of Toronto.

Butazolidin 'Hypos' Page, Scores Sixth S'Anita Win

Page, a six-year-old veteran which gained a new lease on life when treated with butazolidin, raced to his sixth successive victory Saturday at Santa Anita to set a record for the track.

Page won the six-furlong sixth race in 1:08 1-5 to equal his own track record set Jan. 22.

The son of Old Pueblo started off on the opening day of the meeting with a win and has remained undefeated in six starts during which he advanced from a $6,250 claiming price tag to the $40,000 for which he ran Saturday.

During that time, he was claimed twice, but not Saturday.

Butazolidin was legalized for treatment of thoroughbreds in California at the start of the current Santa Anita meeting.

Page had been slowed by infirmities during his earlier racing career although as a two-year-old he was considered of stakes caliber.

Claimed by his present owner, W. R. Johnson, for $12,500 on Jan. 9, went postward the odds-on choice and returned $3.40. Dizzy Babe edged out Pop Artist for third, with Nasrullah Spy a struggling fourth in the field of eight sprinters.

The chestnut speedster pushed his personal earnings for this meeting to $24,750. In addition to shattering Round Table's standard, he also tied the record for most victories in a season set by Holly Tree and tied by Dandini. It was also his 11th career win at this track, leaving him two shy of the all-time mark held by My Chief.

Fleet's Rule			5.80

Start good from gate, won driving. Mutuel pool—$233,274.

MISSILE B. broke alertly then slipped back off the early pace, rallied in the middle of the track when settled into the upper stretch, got the lead and narrowly lasted over MR EGON GEE. The latter had no early speed, moved nearer on the rail around the turn, went to the outside in the drive and closed strongly to just miss. FLEET'S RULE set the pace to the stretch, let up briefly from between horses at the furlong pole, responded to hard urging again but was not good enough.

SCRATCHED—Murph N Gene, Gold Policy, Cedar Court, Shooting Lesson.

2272—SECOND RACE. 7 furlongs. 4 year olds & up. Purse $5500. Top claiming price $10,000.

Start good from gate, won handily. Mutuel pool—$353,583. Daily double pool—$362,656.

CONROY KID broke in stride to force the early pace, drew off to a commanding lead into the stretch and won in hand. BIG M' SHUBA was sent to the lead soon after the start, could not match strides with the winner, and hung in the final quarter.

PEACE MESSAGE moved nearer on the far turn and went evenly in the drive.

Scratched—Miss Timbarlane, En Route, Wild Ace, Wingo Lea.

Daily Double, 3-missile B. & 6-Conroy Kid, Paid $151.40.

MISTY MONDAY was unhurried at the start, found his best stride on the far turn, rallied along the outside to get the lead from CHIEF PIAWATHA in the stretch and won gamely. MARKET MINSTREL raced on his own early, responded in the drive but was not good enough. CHIEF PIAWATHA broke smoothly to take a clear early lead, saved ground and resisted the winner as best he could before giving way.

No scratches.

ACK ACK stumbled at the start, recovered quickly to sprint to a long early lead, raced in hand to the stretch, responded to urging in the drive and held DELAWARE CHIEF safe in the final strides. The latter broke alertly, was under light urging early to be closest the winner while saving ground along the rail, rallied in the final furlong to move up on the winner but could make little headway in the last sixteenth. FIGONERO took a position on the outside, raced within easy striking distance and had an insufficient late bid. JUNGLE SAVAGE saved ground and lacked a clear path from along the rail in the final furlong. PLEASANT HARBOUR checked while pocketed along the rail early and fired. The others were outrun.

Student Breaks Mark

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Scott Bringhurst, 22-year-old University of Utah student from Salt Lake City, attempting the distance for the first time, Saturday won the fifth Las Vegas Marathon in the record time of 2 hours, 20 minutes and 15 seconds.

True North Rolls in Rich Seminole

Combined News Services

MIAMI — C.V. Whitney's True North streaked past longshot Native Royalty in the stretch Saturday to capture a two-length victory in the $85,700 Seminole Handicap at Hialeah Park.

The five-year-old son of Northern Dancer was a cozy fourth at the top of the stretch, but jockey Robert Woodhouse rallied him to make it a two-horse fight.

Native Royalty, a 25-1 shot ridden by Angel Cordero, ran out of steam as True North sprinted to the wire before a crowd of 23,588.

True North paid $10.80, $5.20, and $4.20. Native Royalty returned $15.40 to place and $6.80 to show, and Twogundan saved show to pay $6.20.

PHILADELPHIA — Chompion, who was purchased for stud service for $107,000 and was kept at the races in an attempt to retrieve some of that price, rewarded his owners, Saturday by winning the $56,200 Quaker Handicap at Liberty Bell Race Track.

Chompion went off as the favorite in the 1⅛ miles test which was timed in 1:54.1 over a muddy track and returned $4.00, $2.80 and $2.20 to his backers in the crowd of 24,988, which established an all-time attendance record for Liberty Bell.

PIMLICO, Md. — At Arms Length wore down the leaders with a rush in midstretch at Pimlico Saturday to easily win the $28,100 Flirtation Stakes for 3-year-old fillies.

Ridden by Ronnie Barnes, the filly won by 1½ lengths over Sew To Bed. Movette, who shared top weight of 119 pounds with the winner, finished third, a half-length farther back.

The victory was the third in a row for At Arms Length.

The winner paid $8.20, $4.80 and $2.60. Sew To Bed paid $5.80 and $3.40. Movette, the 2-1 favorite with the crowd of 16,734, was $2.80 to show.

Brethren Sets An Example

By GARY ELLIS

"Something you don't have to talk about here is the American way of life. At Brethren everyone sets an example."—Phil Houseman, Brethren High athletic director.

Phil Houseman may sound like a class B script writer in Hollywood when he talks about the little school in Paramount, but there is something extraordinary going on.

Houseman coached the six-man football team to the CIF title, and his basketball team has suffered only one loss — a double overtime defeat to Corona. The Warriors have knocked off much bigger 4-A, 3-A and 2-A squads to garner a 22-1 record through Friday.

The Warriors have only 110 boys from which to draw their athletic squads.

"A recent survey showed that 75 per cent of the boys enrolled here participate in sports," Houseman said. The entire enrollment consists of 255 students.

Extraordinary happenings could best describe Brethren. Their basketball and football coach, Houseman, has coached for four years and he will turn only 24 in April. He began his coaching career while attending Cerritos College.

His basketball team consists of Ed Gregg (25.3 avg.), a 6-11 center; Dan Swagerty (16.5 avg. and former starting center), 6-5 forward; Doug Swagerty (10.3), 6-1 guard who leads the team in assists; freshman guard Les Pearsey (10.3) 6-2; Ed Rourke (9.0), and Neal Lyon (8.0) son of Millikan High basketball coach Howie.

The Warriors are the top ranked single A school in the CIF, averaging 90.3 points per game while holding opponents to 48.7. But victories are not the most important thing at Brethren.

"Everyone becomes involved," said Houseman. "The gym (very nice even by big school standards) was the combined effort of everyone. One father donated wood for the floor and a Cal State Los Angeles student showed us how to lay it. Players, their families and parents and alumni came out to help put it down.

"Parents put up and painted the walls and one of the cheerleaders' fathers painted the lines on the court. The student body donated the scoreboards.

"Students clean the floor. One parent donated sweatsuits to the team. Everyone is willing to give."

The Brethren Church is the official sponsor of the school but religion is not a necessity in attending school. Why would a boy that can do everything physically want to attend Brethren High?

"There are two reasons," stated Houseman. "First, we have a strong religious background which builds more than just knowledge. Secondly, Brethren has a strong academic schedule. Classes are small — one Spanish class has only seven students. Learning is made easier."

The school philosophy does not end in the classroom. "No one is ever cut from the team," said Houseman. "If we have too many players we just hire more assistant coaches."

In three years Brethren has compiled a 59-12 basketball record and has proved, at least to Brethren families, faculty and students, that grades and athletics go together.

"I've never had any conduct problems. Our players are dedicated and close knit. We go places together and work together.

"They asked about their GPA's (the Swagerty's have 4.0) and when they discovered the school's average SAT and ACT scores they remarked: 'your players must be hungry.'" picked off a poor pass and set up Pete Mahovlich for a 1-0 Montreal lead.

"They are."

KINGS ROMP, 6-3—

Byers got that one back a minute later when goalie Phil Myre let his 40-foot shot trickle through his legs, then the Kings got a big break when the Candadiens took overlapping penalties to Jean Beliveau and Terry Harper.

Beliveau managed to return before any damage was done, but the Canadiens were still a man down when Berry stepped onto the ice to take a pass from Matt Ravlich, cut around all-star defenseman J. C. Tremblay and back in front of the net to beat Myre in close.

The Berry-Widing-Byers line remained on the ice for the next two goals as well.

Thirty-nine seconds later Widing converted Paul Curtis' deflected pass, and eight seconds after that Byers gunned another one past Myre from 40 feet.

Myre was replaced by Rogatien Vachon in the second period, when the teams swapped goals by Marc Tardif for Montreal and Backstrom on a late-period power play — a calm and cool execution from 25 feet — to keep the Kings' margin at three.

After John Ferguson brought the Canadiens back to 5-3, Backstrom finished them off on a picture perfect effort breaking in from the right side.

LBCC Baseballers Title Threat Again

By DAVE DANIEL
Staff Writer

Don't look now, but baseball season is just a stolen base away for Long Beach City College.

And the Vikings appear to the same distance away from annexing their fourth Metropolitan Conference championship in a row.

Coach Joe Hicks, whose team opens the campaign Saturday, sees "a typical Viking team," and that usually means good.

"We have good pitching. We'll play tough defense and probably win by one run," Hicks smiled, scanning his roster.

"We don't have any power hitters, but we do have a lot of line drive hitters and we don't have a weak stop in the lineup," Hicks continued.

"All eight starters are about equal, which is good, but it's also bad, if you know what I mean. I think I'd rather have it this way, though, than to have some weak spots.

"We have great speed this year," Hicks added. "That's probably our best team strength. We have 10 guys that are 7-flat or faster in the 60-yard dash, and that's pretty good.

"We'll be able to keep the pressure on the opposition because of our balance and speed. Our defense will be tough."

Dave Saig, "our stopper last year," according to Hicks, is back to head a solid pitching corps. "All of our pitchers are also good hitters, but we have only one lefthander on the staff," Hicks said.

The lone southpaw is freshman Tom Lederer from CIF champion Lakewood, where he pitched the final game in relief.

Jim Lemon, who'll start in the outfield when he's not scheduled to pitch, returns from last year's team and another top frosh prospect is Eddie Anderson, brother of Viking basketballer Gary, from Poly.

"Dave Frost is working out twice a week during basketball season," Hicks added, "and I expect him to move into a starting spot. He's definitely a major league pitching prospect."

Other pitchers on the roster are Mike Heinen from Lakewood, Bill Schwar from Millikan, Larry Randell from Jordan and Dan Warner, who played on the Viking JV team in 1968.

Sophomore Tony Piraino inherits the No. 1 catching chores, where Hicks says play "is good, but we have no experienced depth." Backing up Piraino will be Larry Martinez and Paul Lightfoot.

Bill Baker, who started last season at second base, and Rand Rasmussen, who returns for a second year's starting assignment at third, anchor a strong infield as the only two lettermen. Baker has been switched to shortstop.

Bob Buskirk is the No. 1 first baseman, but basketballer Dan Peters will be a candidate when the cage season is over. Freshman Phil Pence from Millikan takes over at second.

The outfield finds Steve Derian and Mark Rasmussen being platooned in left. "Both are good ballplayers and the team will benefit from their being platooned," Hicks feels. Derian hits left and Rasmussen, no relation to third baseman Rand, hits right.

Dave Spencer, who pitched last season, will start in center with Lemon in right when he's not pitching, when either Mark Rasmussen or Martinez will take over.

"A month ago, I thought we would be overpowering," Hicks said. "But we've lost a few players that I thought we would have. We're in a state of organized confusion by having everyone switch positions.

"We still have a little re-organization to do because we're not set yet. We'll know when league opens about what changes will have to be made."

Hicks has predicted that his team will finish either first, second or third every year except once. It's no different this year, he says, "but we just don't know about the Metro yet."

NORSE NOTES: The Vikings open the season against the Alumni at LBCC in a special game Saturday at 11 a.m. when the junior varsity team plays the 1969 state championship team in a contest that precedes the varsity vs. all other alumni at 2 p.m. . . . Every starter on the 1969 team except Jay Morrison, who's recovering from a broken jaw, will play . . . Preceding the 11 a.m. game, a new scoreboard will be unveiled, which Hicks has dedicated to the 1969 team . . . The schedule finds the Vikings trekking to Yuma, Ariz., for a two-game set instead of the annual Marine Corps Recruit Depot, which has discontinued baseball . . . Also, the Vikings will host two tournaments this year, one for LBCC's first major leaguer, Jack Salveson, who pitched for the New York Giants, and the second Vera Stephens Memorial during easter vacation, which LBCC won last year . . . Bob Myers returns for his second year as Hicks' assistant . . . "He's one of the brightest spots on the team," Hicks beams of the former Millikan head coach . . . His main duties are scouting and being in charge of the defense . . . Rand Rasmussen was the No. 1 mid-winter draft choice of the St. Louis Cardinals . . . The Vikings lost the services of Chuck Ross, a freshman from Wilson, who turned pro in October with Boston. Ross set a price upon graduation last year, according to Hicks, and it wasn't met until he negotiated three different times. "He actually doubled his bonus by attending LBCC and not even playing," Hicks said. . . . "No other coaches on any level, either high school or four-year college, has to contend with the pro scouts like a JC coach," Hicks said. "I'm never unhappy when a player signs a contract properly, which Ross did," Hicks said.

MASTROIANNI
In New Film

New Film on Punic War Hero

By BRENDA W. ROTZOLL

ROME (UPI) — The problems Vietnam veterans face in returning to civilian life are the same ones faced in 201 B.C. by the general whose victories made Rome the center of western civilization. So says one of Italy's most respected actors.

That makes the story of Punic War hero Scipio Africanus a modern one, Marcello Mastroianni believes, in explaining why he abandoned his usual image to star in his first costume picture.

"THE PEOPLE aren't different. The political problems are the same," Mastroianni said. "When the war is over, the people tell the soldier, 'go away.'"

"The man with the sword is useful in the horrible times, the times of war. But when the battles are over, he is feared for the same reasons that made him a hero before.

"He doesn't have the mentality, the preparation for dealing with the country as it is now."

Scipio Africanus went to Carthage and defeated Hannibal, hero of the famous march over the Alps with elephants. Scipo's series of victories in North Africa eliminated Carthage as a major power and thus set the tone of civilization for centuries to come.

BUT ONCE Rome had conferred the honorary surname of "Africanus Major" on him, it wanted nothing to do with Scipio. He went into retirement plagued by the Italian peninsula's first civil service scandal.

His brother, called Scipio Asiaticus, was accused of misappropriating the spoils of war from a minor campaign in the Middle East. The scandal rubbed off on the elder Scipio, who died so bitter that he refused to let his bones be buried in Rome.

"Scipio Africanus" concentrates on the post-war years of the general's life. Many scenes may look familiar to tourists since exteriors were shot in Roman ruins at Pompeii and at Hadrian's villa outside Rome.

Using the ruins was a cost-cutting method, said the 46-year-old Mastroianni in an interview. But, he added, using his brother, Ruggero, 41, to play Scipio Asiaticus was as much an "in" joke by director Luigi Magni as a means of getting a look-alike. Ruggero normally is a film editor.

LIKE MOST Mastroianni pictures, "Scipio Africanus" does not have a large budget.

"It doesn't surprise us that Italians make a movie for $500,000," Mastroianni said. "The others are the ones who spend $15 million."

He said underground moviemakers in the United States should remember how much they owe to Italy.

"The underground was invented here in 1945," he said. "We had serious problems then and America did not. The underground was born from the necessity of surviving a difficult period. The cinema was the most interesting mode of expression Italy had after the war."

Marlo Thomas Loves Her Privacy

HOLLYWOOD — Marlo Thomas has put up a battle for privacy in this town where most people who want privacy have three press agents to prove it and appears to have won because her address is sort of a secret and comparatively few reporters get inside her quiet English-style, well-guarded home.

"We don't let any press in," Marlo said on a recent evening. I'd sworn not to disclose her address or any information about her home, except that I was allowed to mention that one of her bodyguards is a 10-pound Lhasa Apso pup given her by Ted Bethel, her co-star on "That Girl," and that the dog's name is Max.

"I was going to invent a fancy name but I thought 'Why be chic?' He looks a little like Max so he's Max."

Marlo had set out some caviar but she herself was nibbling peanut butter and celery and sipping some Japanese peppermint tea which, on the "That Girl" set, was always characterized as "Marlo's upper," meaning an upper pill not to be confused with a downer pill . . . an afternoon pick-me-up and energizer.

HAVING FINISHED 5 years of "That Girl," and run out of ideas for further episodes, they ended it — "but I'm sure I'll come back some time to do another series . . . although I hope it isn't for 5 years . . ."

Marlo didn't say the usual thing — that a lot of life would have passed her by in another five years of concentration on a new series — but when I asked her, "Are you going to get married?" she looked at me rather sternly.

It seemed a fair question, since her parents, Danny and Rose Marie Thomas had just celebrated their 35th anniversary.

"You know I'm not going to answer that kind of question. I guard my privacy," Marlo replied.

"Well, do you believe in marriage now? A lot of people don't."

Marlo mused over this one. "There are so many people who are unhappy. I think everyone should do what makes them happy.

"JUDGMENT-PASSING is old-fashioned," she said. "We used to pass judgment so easily. People were ostracized, children's lives were ruined, because marriage didn't work. It's all antiquated now."

Winding up her TV series was an emotional thing. There were people in the crew who'd be going on to other jobs, she hoped.

"It's hard to say 'I love you' to 300 people but I did. I never saw my family as much as I saw those people . . . 14 hours a day, 10 months a year, 50 months all together."

Marlo will probably be doing movies. She's a buff.

"I used to see two a day, now sometimes I see three," she says. "If it's a quick trip from one theater to another one, I'll say 'I'll drive!' I don't mind missing dinner."

Hollywood has the star system even though it doesn't admit it, and Elliott Gould is one of the stars. She puts him in a class with a lot of male scoundrels (on film) that women like even though they're cheating on their wives in the picture.

"You always feel he's a confused little boy who needs the right woman to straighten him out . . . " she said.

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP . . . Robert Mitchum, who's mentioned for an Oscar (for "Ryan's Dtr."), shrugs, "I don't know why anyone would want to vote for a boob like me — I look like a Bulgarian wrestler at an Irish wake" . . . The baby pictured on Leslie Uggams' record "Love Is a Good Foundation" isn't hers — it's the son of Dionne Warwick, who produced the disk . . . American-Int'l, whose "Wuthering Heights" is due soon, is talking to Rod Steiger about "Henry VIII" . . . Young Julie Budd returns from her Las Vegas stint with a precious souvenir — an autographed photo of Cary Grant, who came backstage to meet her.

Composer-arranger Jimmy Wisner collaborated with a NYC cop, Jennings Burch, to write a song, "Gypsy Girl"; Sasha Distel will record it . . . Burt Bacharach will play a concert in Philadelphia Feb. 7, proceeds to endow a Bert Bacharach (his dad) Lecture Series in Communications at the Phila. College of Textiles & Sciences.

Jerry Vale will sing the national anthem at the Baseball Writers dinner; asked what he'd do if he forgot the lyrics, Jerry said, "The usual — I'll fake 'em" . . . Bonnie Enten, who was a beautiful nude in "Oh Calcutta!" goes the same clothesless route in the film "Pigeons" . . . Harry Goz of "Two by Two" plans to produce "Ape Over Broadway," a musical spoof of "King Kong."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: A British TV crew toured the vast Houston Astrodome and Astroworld amusement park, and their guide asked proudly "Got anything this big in England? "Nearly," said a cameraman "—we call it London."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: People who do a good day's work don't have much competition.

'REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Many a woman doesn't know what she wants, and won't give her husband any peace till she gets it."

EARL'S PEARLS: "In Hollywood," writes Mark Russell, "some actors carry cards in their wallets that say 'I am a celebrity. In case of accident, call a reporter.'"

Joan Rivers admits she's not much of a drinker: "The other night I had one glass of wine — and then spent an hour looking up a phone number in the dictionary." THAT'S EARL, BROTHER.

PARKER RECEIVES BIG PAY BOOST

Wes Parker, the Dodgers' most valuable player in 1970, signed his 1971 contract Saturday, a pact calling for roughly double the $37,500 he earned last season.

Parker and pitchers Joe Moeller and Jerry Stephenson all returned signed contracts to vice president Al Campanis, bringing to 22 the number of Dodgers who've signed in for 1971.

Parker enjoyed his finest season in 1970, batting .319 and becoming the first Dodger since 1962 to drive in more than 100 runs. He batted in 111, also led the National League with 47 doubles and was the only player in the N.L. to play in every game (161).

He also won his fourth Golden Glove award and was selected Dodger of the Year by The Independent, Press-Telegram.

Moeller and Stephenson, both 27, will be bidding for a spot in the Dodgers' starting rotation. Moeller was 7-9 in 1970 and Stephenson, who saw limited duty with the Dodgers, posted an 18-5 record with Spokane in the Pacific Coast League.

Rockets Play Today

Nearing the end of a successful winter baseball season, the Long Beach Rockets host the Dodger minor leaguers in an exhibition game at Blair Field today at 1:30 p.m.

Having won the American Winter League crown, Jack Graham's Rockets were to engage the Pasadena Redbirds, winners of the National League, but they were forced to drop out due to the loss of collegiate players — 90 per cent of their team.

Performing for the Dodgers will be a group of youngsters, most of whom played at Medford, Ore., last season.

The Rockets will field an all-pro infield of first baseman Tony Muser (Louisville), second baseman Ed Crosby (St. Louis Cards), shortstop Bobby Grich (Baltimore), and third baseman Bud Pritchard (property of the Cubs).

Jeff Burroughs, Gene Dusan and Fred Kendall, all well-known professional players, also will be in the lineup. Chuck Ross, Mike Coble, Mark Keller and Scott Marchael will pitch.

Truckers Sign 3 Top Players

The V.B. Morgan Truckers, champions of the Pacific Coast Softball League, have signed three top players who competed for other PCSL teams last season.

Outfielder Hal Martinez, the league's MVP and top batter (.409), and All-Star infielder Manny Ortega (.376) join the Truckers from Oxnard, while pitcher John Henderson comes over from Burbank.

The Truckers open their season in early April.

Washington to Speak

All-pro end Gene Washington of the San Francisco 49ers will be guest speaker at the annual Sports Night dinner at Temple Sinai next Sunday.

A native of Long Beach, Washington was captain of the football and basketball teams at Poly High and then star quarterback and later all-America flanker at Stanford University.

He has played in both pro bowls in his two seasons with the 49ers.

The program, sponsored by the Temple Sinai men's club, will include several boxing exhibitions arranged by Dave Rosen, Sports Night chairman. Hank Hollingworth of the Independent, Press-Telegram, will be master of ceremonies.

The dinner and program, open to the public, will be in the temple social hall, Seventh St. and Molino Ave. at 6:30 p.m.

New Orchestra Boss Likes Podium Palship

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pierre Boulez, new music director of the New York Philharmonic, intends getting even closer to the customers than his predecessor, Leonard Bernstein, did.

Bernstein made pals of them with warm-hearted commentaries from the podium. Boulez hopes to advance this palship with face-to-face encounters between the musicians and the people who pay to hear them play.

It will be a stepping-up of the trend Bernstein launched some years ago — more togetherness among listeners and symphonic conductors and players and direct involvement of the listeners both with the music and the performers.

Boulez's first season as artistic boss of one of the country's best-known orchestras begins next September. His reputation as an advocate and composer of avant-garde music, and for making disparaging remarks about some of the older music, scares many patrons whose tastes barely have advanced into the 20th Century.

This smallish Frenchman with a far-receded hairline and a persuasive let-us-all-be-friends manner reassured them in revealing his plans. He said he'll bust no music icons — the masterpieces of the past will be played as frequently as ever, in the way masterpieces of painting are on permanent display in museums.

FEATURED IN MUSICAL

Rosslynn Tepper, left, as Eulalie Shinn, Dinise Monntooth as Grace Shinn and Robert McCaman as Mayor Shinn are featured in "The Music Man" by the Long Beach Civic Light Opera. The show will be held in Jordan Auditorium, 6500 Atlantic Ave., on weekends through Feb. 21.

ONLY A FEW CONSIDERED 374 Films Eligible for Oscar Award

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI(— Not since 1958 — when "Gigi" won the Oscar — have there been as many feature films eligible for Academy Award consideration.

Exactly 374 pictures qualify for 1970 as opposed to 334 for 1969.

Quality, it appears, gave ground to quantity with a flood of Japanese and Scandinavian pictures, some pornos and old fashioned horror flicks..

Gore oozed from such as "Beat of Blood," "Blood Demon," "Bloody Mama," "Curse of the Blood-Ghouls," "Mad Doctor of Blood Island," "Taste the Blood of Dracula" and the unforgettable "The Vampire-Beast Craves Blood."

One may vouchsafe that none will win a nomination of any kind.

IT WAS A banner year for dirty old men with Pornography; Copenhagen 1970," "Pornography in Denmark; A New Approach," "Sexual Freedom in Denmark" and "Sexual Practices in Sweden."

Again it is a good bet the pornos are out of the running.

Nor is there a groundswell of support for "The Vampire Lovers," "Scream and Scream Again," "Monster Zero," "Kill Them All and Come Back Alone," "Horror House," "Frankenstein Must Be Destroyed."

Each year at Academy Award nomination time members are called upon to select only five pictures for Oscar consideration.

At first the task seems overwhelming, culling the top flight films from the down-and-outers. Naturally, members cannot see every picture which might be construed as unfair to, say, "Santa Claus Has Blue Eyes" starring Jean-Pierre Leaud and Gerard "immerman.

The winning process is generally accomplished through word of mouth on hot pictures.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

MONDAY, FEB. 8

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A great deal of your activity this year will be organizing, preparing for future ventures. Most of what you do may be classed as public service by many. There is no exact precedent for this year's conditions, nor any guidebook for your personal progress. Today's natives can generally tell a tall tale with real humor. Many of them are writers.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You know something few others know. Now is the time to use it. Farewey pieces, even unexplored nearby areas, offer potentially profitable facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are unlikely to be satisfied with the work of anybody under your responsibility. Conservative handling of funds results in moderate returns.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Career and business promise swift improvement with rational, perceptive initiative on your part. Quite a lot of talk is stirring around you, much of it helpful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Disagreements on career matters can be settled if you keep your personal feelings and prejudices within reasonable bounds. Putting on a calm surface.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Assuming too much only gets you into an embarrassing situation. Have a full day's schedule set early. The evening is sociable, with romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Common sense may not match the rule book today, and you can gain much from a minor adjustment. Add to your savings. Your mate has a nice surprise for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business and pleasure seldom mix so agreeably as today. Use your contacts and resources without making any fuss. Home life is better if you let matters take their course.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let your intuition guide you. There are possible visits from people you seldom see, or who dwell in very distant places. Try for a new feature in entertainment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your spirits rise with news of progress among your own set. It's an excellent time for big purchases. Seek additional earnings if you feel the need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seek advice and cooperation. When you've made the most of an active day, rest a while, then share an evening with friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be up bright and early. Don't be surprised to get a monetary proposal today. Think carefully what you would be getting into.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Presenting a smooth surface is very helpful to your career progress. You still have to develop reasonably good work on a regular basis. Somebody nearby cares.

GOVERNOR CAN'T AID SKIRT WAR

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus says he's powerless to do anything about women's fashions.

The governor was asked in a letter from a 10-year-old Boise girl to help bring back maxiskirts.

Holly Schutz, daughter of Ron and Joyce Winkles of Boise, said the maxiskirt "would be a relief to us girls. Our friends say it's not so cold, and we like the style of it," she wrote.

But the governor, who swept to victory in a hard-fought election last November, said:

"Constantly I am finding new things that I can't do as governor. I've known all along, however, that I have no influence on fashions.

"As a husband and the father of three daughters, I realize that no man has the slightest chance of doing anything about them. Winning an election is a snap compared to your request."

San Francisco will throw you a curve.

Expect the unexpected when you come to San Francisco. A street with ten turns in one quarter mile. A chocolate factory that's honeycombed with shops. A cannery that sells clothes. Classical violins on the street corner. Cable cars full of flowers. And, what surprises a lot of people, how inexpensive the city can be. Pay us your own surprise visit, soon.

Robert and Betty Wylder are extremists who smile when people call them fanatics.

Their cause?

"Saving our environment," says Dr. Wylder who wants to move the world ahead by turning back the clock.

"Halting runaway population growth," says Mrs. Wylder who likes people so much she wishes there were fewer of them.

Most fanatics are activists and the Wylders are no exception. They don't just talk about pollution, they've changed their way of life to combat it.

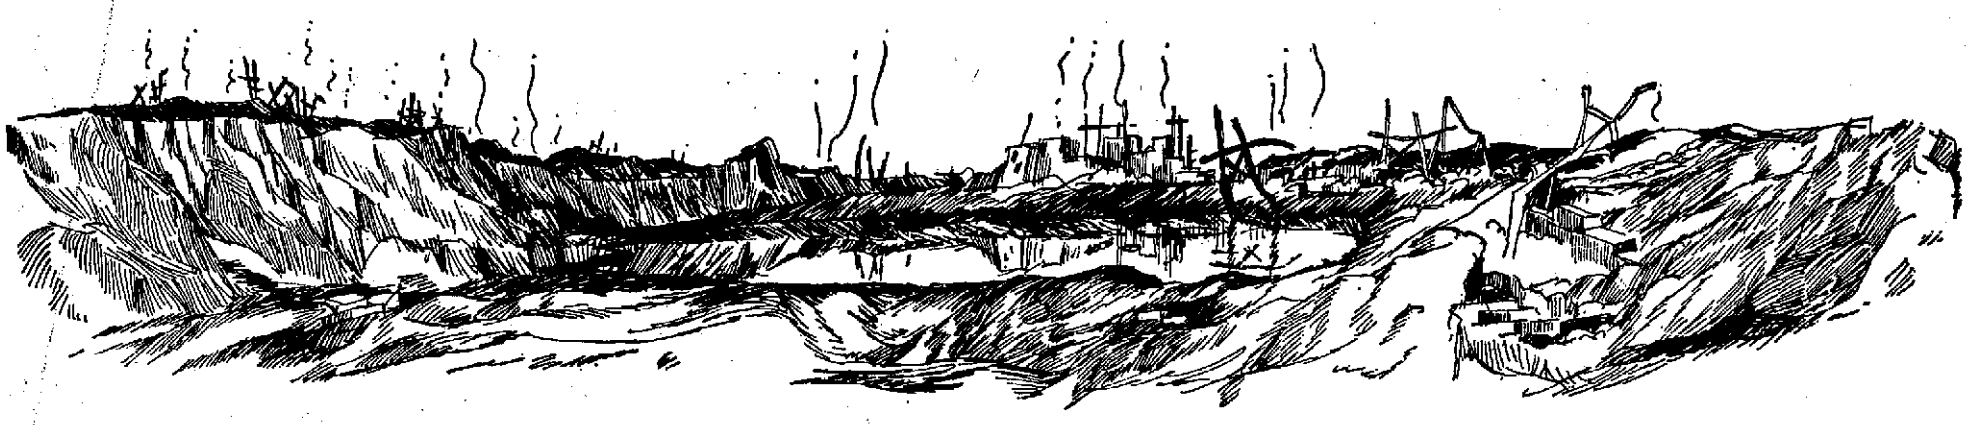

The Cal State Long Beach professor no longer drives a car, but rides a bicycle, to his English classes. On campus, he has been instrumental in starting an organic garden and a recycling center for reclamation of the community's used newspapers, bottles and cans.

Mrs. Wylder is program chairman for Long Beach's Zero Population Growth chapter and heads the environment committee of Long Beach Council of PTA—offices which bring her as many as three speaking engagements a week.

"Granted, we have three daughters, but they were born before over-population was a very real threat," said Mrs. Wylder, her pixielike features assuming a serious frown.

"Scientists say the earth can support between six and eight billion people. Population

Bobbie keeps watchful eye on America's astronauts

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

"Eagle has landed."

With these words in July, 1969, man touched down on the surface of the moon fulfilling a pledge made by the late President John F. Kennedy.

This pledge committed the United States to a mass space exploration program and lunar landing within 10 years.

Before that decade was up, the goal was not only reached, but surpassed.

Instead of reading about space exploits in Buck Rogers comic books, Americans and the people of the world watched awe-struck on television as Cmdr. Neil Armstrong of Apollo 11 became the first man to walk on the moon.

No one viewed the landing with more satisfaction than a petite lady engineer from North American Rockwell's Space Division.

BOBBIE JOHNSON joined North American 24 years ago upon graduation from the University of Illinois, and was in on the planning stages of the Apollo moon program from its inception.

During a lull in her watch over the current moon flight at the Downey plant, she recalled those early days.

"That first year, just the idea of leaving the earth and going to the moon, let alone landing on it, was far out."

Mrs. Johnson, whose husband, Bob, also is an engineer with North American in Los Angeles, is manager of the systems engineering for Apollo missions. She is one of few women to hold such a high position in the space program. Of the 45 engineers under her direction, 2 are women.

Their job involves spelling out systems' requirements to the respective Apollo misson as defined by NASA. Specifically, her department handles the system performance requirements.

"We worry about trajectory analysis, flight performance manuevering of the space craft, thrust levels and propellent. We also worry about all the consummables on the space ship—all the things you use, including the oxygen for breathing and oxygen and hydrogen to run fuel cells, which provide the power."

Comparing it to the operation of an automobile, Mrs. Johnson said, "It's like making sure there's enough gas for the number of miles left on the trip, enough oil, water in the radiator and that the battery is charged."

DURING AN APOLLO flight, Mrs. Johnson and her staff are on call 24 hours a day to the support room, where there are squawk boxes to Mission Control in Houston and to the astronauts.

In the support room, the engineers work out the "what ifs." "We prepare continuously for changing contingencies and try to have a ready solution for the unexpected."

During the abortive flight of Apollo 13 last year, Mrs. Johnson was in the support room constantly for five days, averaging about one hour's sleep a day.

The Downey team confers with experts in Houston to pool their knowledge and come up with a solution for problems.

Apollo 14 has quite a few changes which came about after the 13 failure. "We added an extra oxygen tank, changed the design and internal configuration of all oxygen tanks. We put a battery in the service module to provide enough backup power in case the fuel cells fail.

"We try to be in the support room during all major events involving a flight, which is why we lose sleep. These events sometimes come in the middle of the night."

Every chair in the room is occupied during takeoffs, landings and other important maneuvers, so activity is increasing as Apollo 14 speeds back to earth for its scheduled Tuesday afternoon splashdown in the South Pacific near Samoa.

SPACE TRAVEL remains a challenge to Mrs. Johnson despite her 10-year involvement.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Auction's where action was

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

THERE WERE LOAVES of bread, jugs of wine and if Thou were not there, Thou missed an outstanding event.

I'm speaking of the Long Beach Art Association's Wine Festival to aid scholars.

Held in the association's gallery at the Villa Riviera, the party featured wine tasting, a fine juried art show and a silent auction which turned out to be pretty noisy when auctioneer, Mason Kight, took the gavel.

Jan Kight was chairman of the show and she was everywhere — washing dishes in the kitchen, taking money at the door and slicing French bread all at once. Her equally busy helpers included Eleanore Smith, association president, (Judge Charlie was helping with the tasting), Louise Fluch, Walt and Barbara Havekorst and Joe and India Nangano.

Among artists exhibiting paintings were Betty Ann Kirkpatrick, Marion Bruce, Sandra Beebe, Shirley Boyington and Jean Hartt. Shirley and Jean also donated paintings for the auction.

Two paintings by Dorothy Wells invited some spirited bidding.

Deciding between the sauterne and the chablis were Chuck and Judy Crockett, Ken and Jean Frost, Jim and Boots Lockington, Doug and Lois Bailey, Mike and Judy McNulty and Dr. Ralph and Jan Simonian. Partial to the beaujolais were Gene Kirkpatrick, Jim and Lesley Murray, Dr. Charles and Jackie Oliver, Jeanne Looman, Tony and Phyllis Litzinger and Ted and Marge Miller.

Other sippers included Clarence and Lee Hunt, Bill and Elaine Winston, Rollie and Diane Coltrane (redhead Diana on Cloud Nine over her new orange Datsun sports car), and Lee and Shirley Caldwell.

There were many door prizes but my biggest disappointment was NOT winning one of the five donated by artist Sue Brown.

She offered to paint water color portraits of the lucky winners, Barbara Havekorst, Jean Frost, Mary McMullen, Dan Anderson and Judge Charlie Smith.

SYMPHONY JUNIORS of Long Beach hijacked a crowd to the Caribbean and everyone was delighted.

The Airporter Inn Hotel in Anaheim was the scene of a Caribbean Casino Night. Straw baskets of fruit and wine created by Margaret Kinzer, centered the dining tables. Dice, cards and chips centered the gaming tables.

Unfortunately, the gambling was just for fun and the proceeds went to help defray the expense of bringing the Los Angeles Philharmonic to Long Beach each season.

The chips, like the tables, were rented for the evening and Florence Dodge, Symphony Junior president, made sure none of us carried them away. To take the sting out of winning NOTHING, the door prizes, obtained by Cecillia Kinnsch and Anne Kerns, were numerous and fabulous.

My Larry won the centerpiece and we parlayed that into two box seats to the Dodgers. We made a trade with Ed and Patti Twining who originally won them but already have season tickets.

Carrying coals to Newcastle, the big door prize was a trip to Where Else? — Las Vegas. Walter and Verna Fry were the lucky winners.

The invitation said "attire — colorful" so I wore a wild flowered pant outfit and Larry an absolutely awful shirt. We went with Harry and Joyce Christensen and they came to pick us up — Harry in a conservative suit and tie and Joyce in a pale yellow pantsuit. We stared at each other for a while and couldn't agree on who should change clothes so off we went to the Sewaks for cocktails.

Wanda greeted us in a floor length print, Dr. John was tending bar in a vivid blue see-thru shirt modestly covered with a Mexican vest. June Harris looked like she just stepped off the Swiss Miss label, in a "Rich Peasant" outfit, with one gold earring. Husband, Jack, wore the other. Patti Twining was in a maxi Mexican wedding dress. Burt Marter in suit and tie and Norma in a red boucle pantsuit. Dr. Maurice Wan in a suit and tie and Marilyn in an elegant beaded pants ensemble. And so it was do your own thing in the costume department.

Charlie Boorkman (his Ruth is auxiliary president) was just off a plane from Chicago so he added an eyepatch and came as a well-dressed pirate.

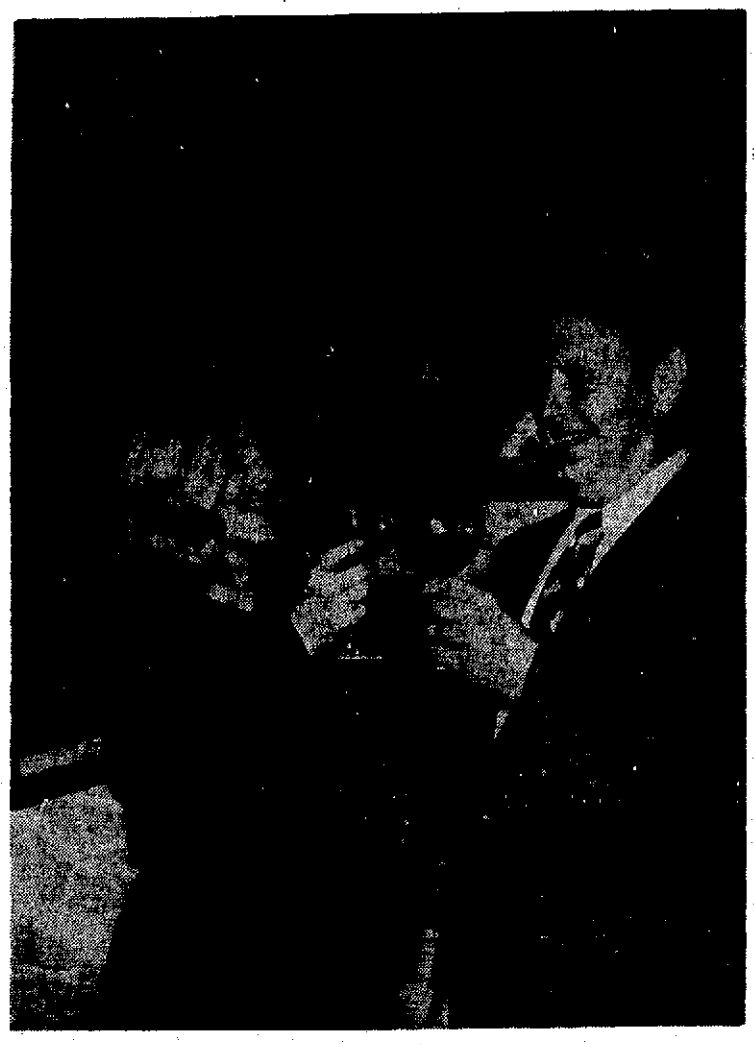

Florence and Stephen Dodge co-hosted a pre-party party with Larry and Maureen Stone. Among their guests were John and Martha Folson, Ray and Margaret McPherson, Les Fiedler with Mary Lou Dunn, Ray and Lu Peterson, Morris and Georgene Hayter. From Cypress, Councilman Henry and Shirley Roberts; Ron and Jean Hubb came from Palos Verdes.

Others hosting pre-parties were George and Pat Lawrence, Bill and Jeanette Whitledge and Kerry and Elke Belcher. Elke was general chairman of the casino night. Others on her committee were Janet Kettenhofen and Nancy Baird.

We got acquainted with dealers Michael Choppin, Bob Houssels and Charles Lourtie. High rollers included Dr. Don and Ruth Willardson, Ron and Barbara Aiken, Faith Porter, Barbara Lourtie and Don Kinnsch.

"IT SEEMED like old times" when a group of former Poly High gals got together to bid farewell to Ruthan Andrade who, with husband, Herb, and family, is moving to the Sacramento area.

Enjoying luncheon and conversation at the Velvet Turtle were Joan Fleischmann, Katie Martin, Liz Minor, Babs Kenelpp, Diane Coltrane (she put a lot of miles on that new sports car this week didn't she?) and Molly Turley. Molly taking time out from planning a camping trip — destination Mazatlan—with husband, John.

TOASTING THE SUCCESS of Long Beach Art Association's wine taste and art show for scholarships are Jan Kight, show chairman, and her husband, Mason, who served as auctioneer.

THE PAINT was barely dry when Joe and Mary Lee Perkins invited friends to come and see their newly redecorated home.

Among those admiring the new decor were Ray and Joann Prochaska, Gene and Joan McCleur, Councilman Wane and Joan Sharp, Louis and Nola Irvin, Charles and Ethel Brown, Jim and Thora Lamhofer and Joe and Bev Kennedy.

The younger generation was represented by Joe's daughter, Linda Cavalier, with husband, Jim and Mary Lee's son, Delett Paul, with his Marilyn.

Others were Lou and Marcella Kilman, Bill and Hope Gerrie and Charlie and Johanne Kendall.

PTA takes time from SOS work to celebrate 74th birthday

Lighting a PTA birthday cake for 250 guests are Mmes. Stanley Solomon (left), council president; L. H. Johnson and Thomas Somiskey, Founder's Day Chairman. Fun and games—and no speeches—keyed the "Hearts and Flowers" fling as school principals and parents got acquainted over lunch in Veterans Park Clubhouse. Recipients of national honorary service awards were Mrs. Johnson, 1966-68 council president; and Harry Frishman of the Long Beach Unified School District. Piano stylings by Irene Alpert furthered the light-hearted mood as PTAers relaxed from Save Our Schools work prior to Tuesday's special tax override election.

Wedding vows spoken in solemn ceremonies

Lofgren-Fuselier

A first home in Long Beach has been selected by newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Loffgren (Fran Fuselier), who were married Saturday at University Lutheran Church.

Matron of honor for the daughter of Mrs. Ida M. Fuselier and Elder Alton Fuselier, both of Long Beach, was Mrs. Peggy Tullius. Tom Butler served as best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Loffgren of Long Beach.

The new Mrs. Loffgren graduated from Wilson High School and attended Long Beach City College where she affiliated with Theta. She also skated with "Holiday on Ice" for five years.

Her husband is an alumnus of Milliken High School and was graduated cum laude from California State College at Long Beach.

They will honeymoon in Eureka.

Frank-Moreau

A first home in Tacoma, Wash., where the bridegroom is stationed at Fort Lewis with the U.S. Army, awaits newly wed, Mr. and Mrs. Steven D. Frank (Cynthia M. Moreau).

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Moreau of Lakewood exchanged nuptial vows with the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Penas of La Puente in a Saturday noon ceremony at St. Pancratius Catholic Church.

Susan L. Moreau served as her sister's maid of honor, while Patrick Carney performed best man duties.

The couple is honeymooning in Las Vegas.

The bride is a graduate of St. Joseph High School, Lakewood, and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband was graduated from Bellflower High and attended Cerritos College. He just returned from a tour of duty in Vietnam.

Shawver-Hansen

Lakewood High School graduates, Susan Carole Hansen and David Lee Shawver, exchanged nuptial vows in a Saturday afternoon ceremony at West Lakewood Baptist Church.

The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. Hansen of Lakewood. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon L. Shawver, also of Lakewood.

Mrs. Sandi Moonier was matron of honor and Ken Hamilton performed best man duties.

The newlyweds will make a first home in Long Beach while both complete studies at Long Beach City College. He is a member of the U.S. Naval Reserve.

Doherty-Barry

MRS. DANIEL DOHERTY

St. Cornelius Catholic Church was setting for the marriage Saturday evening of Novelle Diane Barry to Lt. (j.g.) Daniel B. Doherty (USN).

Mrs. Michael J. Donnelly served as matron of honor for the daugher of Mrs. George J. Barry of Long Beach and the late Mr. Barry. Best man for the son of Mrs. J. G. O'Neal of Marble City, Okla., and Col. D. E. Doherty (USN, ret.) of Arlington, Va., was Michael J. Donnelly.

The new Mrs. Doherty attended California State College at Long Beach where she affiliated with Zeta Tau Alpha sorority and was a member of Spurs. She was a Zeta Beta Tau princess and little sister and was named to the Dean's list.

She was graduated from UC, Berkeley, where she was a member of the Honor Student's Society and was elected an AFROTC princess.

Her husband was graduated from Columbia University in New York. He was a member of the varsity tennis team and in the NROTC program.

They will honeymoon in Mexico City and reside in San Diego.

Parker-Keeler

Lakewood High School graduates Judith M. Keeler and Philip R. Parker recited wedding vows Saturday at St. Cornelius Catholic Church.

The daughter of Mrs. George Parker of Huntington Beach and the late Mr. Parker was preceded to the altar by Nancy Keeler, maid of honor. Best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Manford O. Keeler of Lakewood was Paul Cauchon.

They will honeymoon in the San Bernardino Mountains and make a first home in Long Beach.

Baie-McGinnis

Lynne Dee McGinnis and Charles Raymond Baie were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at North Long Beach Brethren Church.

Among those witnessing the ceremony were their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McGinnis of Long Beach and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Baie of Anaheim.

Mrs. R. J. Miller served as matron of honor and Joseph Saurez was best man.

A graduate of Jordan High School, the new Mrs. Baie attended Long Beach City College. Her husband graduated from La Serna High School in Whittier and attended Rio Hondo College.

They will honeymoon at Mammouth and make a first home in Whittier.

Creighton-Vance

Honeymooning in San Francisco following their marriage Saturday at Our Savior's Lutheran Church in Long Beach are newly wed Ens. and Mrs. Richard A. Creighton (USN).

Donna Kazanjian served as maid of honor for the former Carol A. Vance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace A. Vance of Rossmoor. James K. Creighton served as his brother's best man.

Both are graduates of Wilson High School. The new Mrs. Creighton graduated from California State College at Long Beach. Her husband, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Creighton of Rossmoor, graduated from the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

They will make a first home in Pacific Grove.

Maronta-Walsh

Honeymooning in Northern California following their marriage Friday evening at the Unity Church of Santa Ana are newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Michael Maronta (Colleen Walsh).

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Baker of Santa Ana was attended by Mrs. Robert Traina, matron of honor, and Sande Hodges, maid of honor. Best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Maronta of Long Beach was William Kalina.

The new Mrs. Maronta is a senior at California State College at Long Beach where she is a past president of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Her husband was graduated from CSLB. He was a member of Sigma Phi Delta fraternity and is a past president of the engineering student body.

They will make a first home in Long Beach.

Warrecker-Ritchie

The Glad Tidings Assembly of God Church in Long Beach was setting for the marriage Saturday evening of Janece Ann Ritchie and Gary Lee Warrecker.

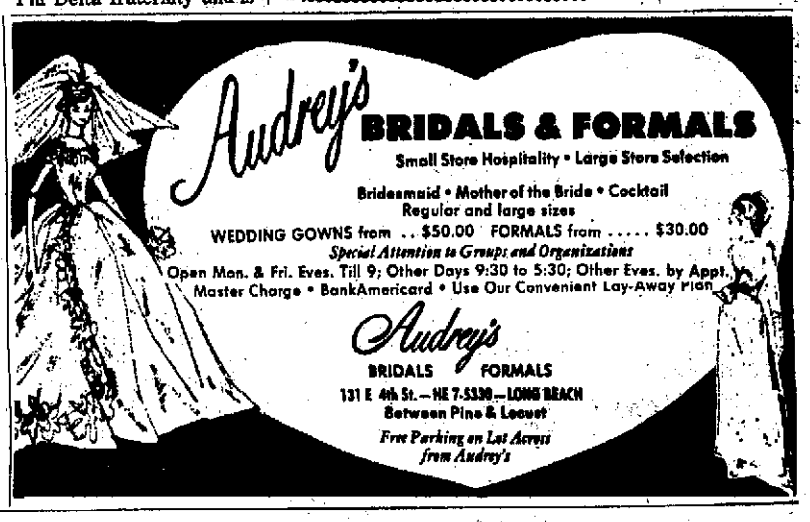

The couple, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ritchie and Mr. and Mrs. Earle Warrecker, all of Long Beach, were attended by Mrs. Robert Harris, matron of honor, and Ronald Warrecker, best man.

The new Mrs. Warrecker graduated from Brethren High School and Long Beach City College. Her husband is a Polytechnic High School graduate.

They will honeymoon in Palm Springs and reside in Long Beach.

APOLLO engineer Bobbie Johnson surveys flight plans for latest moon mission.

Woman engineer guides path of Apollo astronauts mission, there'll be some major differences as instruments are placed in the lunar module to record more scientific data about the moon's surface, sub-surface and environment.

"With each flight we extend our capabilities a little more and we're always re-defining those capabilities. After Apollo 13, we probably learned more about our systems being able to operate in an unplanned environment. That gave us even more confidence."

Replying to critics of the space program who think it's costing too much and that funds should be diverted to solving earth-bound problems, a pensive Mrs. Johnson noted:

"The space program is a vital part of the major objectives of the country. Besides, all the money is spent on earth, not in space."

She believes there's benefit to other areas from space experiments, particularly in medical research and new manufacturing materials.

"Any kind of research is always a benefit. It's never in a static situation. We have some experiments on this mission to be performed in the command module on the trans-earth orbit trip back from the moon. They're unique in that you have a zero-gravity status.

"One relates to vaccines, another has to do with metals and another concerns the bio-chemical substance DNA," she explained.

In her opinion, space exploration will have more and more influence on the earth, especially the environment. She sees the possblty of solutons to ecologcal problems coming from such exploring.

"Space can provide us with some understanding of environmental problems we're worrying about now on earth. There's really no end to what could be applied.

"Just the technique and learning which resulted from the management of such a tremendous program is kind of a sociological breakthrough. It has helped the country realize we can really undertake anything and be successful."

WHILE THE PRE-1960 generations view space travel as exciting, and perhaps unbelievable the post-60 era finds it a matter-of-fact circumstance.

To illustrate, Mrs. Johnson recounted a comment from her 12-year-old son, Eric, when a space flight changed family plans.

"So, you're going to the moon again. That upsets the whole weekend."

Eric gets a status report on the current moon flight each morning before going to school. "He's grown up with space and knows more about the program than most adults."

Mrs. Johnson poohs-poohs any idea of competition with the Russians to be first in space..

"Our program was not geared in any way as a race. We took our development program step-by-step. Each flight was to verify something that had to do with our system's confidence and ability of crews to function.

"If there had been a race, there would have been many, many elements left out and risk to mission and crew safety would have been higher."

J.D. Beelers honored at reception

Students to vie in festival

Three distinguished musicians will judge the Southern California Junior Bach Festival Saturday at California State College, Long Beach.

Natalie Limonick, John Wright and Susan Stockhammer also judged the Garden Grove festival Feb. 6 and will jury the Lakewood group Feb. 21 at CSLB.

The Music Teachers' Association of Long Beach will present 55 students of piano, strings and voice in competition Saturday. Contestants, ranging from 6 to 22 years of age, represent 15 studios. Performances will take place from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

On Feb. 28, winners of the Garden Grove, Lakewood and Long Beach festivals will take part in the Regional Bach Festival at 1:30 p.m. in Presbyterian Community Church, Lakewood. The public is invited to this concert and to the prior competitions. For further information, call Lura Soderstrom, 2175 Oregon Ave., who is chairman of the Long Beach festival.

MISS LIMONICK is assistant director of the UCLA Opera Workshop and a member of faculty of the Music Academy of the West at Santa Barbara. Last year she was invited to coach at the Bayreuth Festival.

Wright, pianist, harpsichordist and conductor, is working on his master's degree at USC. Music director of the Manhattan Community Church, he has had extensive experience in the presentation and performance of Bach cantatas, oratorios and concerti.

Susan Stockhammer, flutist, earned her doctor of musical arts degree at USC, where she studed with Malcolm Hamilton, Alice Ehlers and Rosalyn Tureck. She has performed with many symphonies and this spring will join the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra under direction of Neville Marriner. She is on the faculties of California State College, Fullerton, and USC.

Four concerts

Claudio Abbado — chief conductor of La Scala, Milan, and recently appointed permanent conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic — will direct the Los Angeles Philharmonic in four concerts at The Music Center Pavilion Thursday through next Sunday. His soloist is the young Brazilian pianist, Nelson Freire.

Designer style show aids hospital

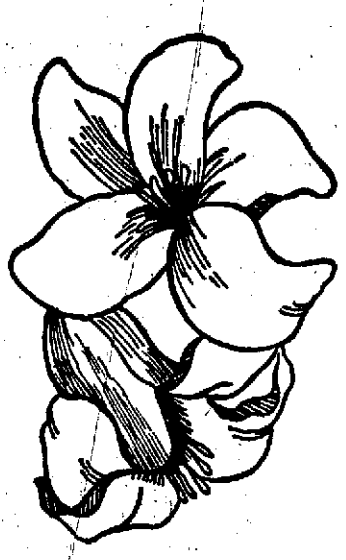

"Aloha-Okou-Kokua-Keiki" or "Have a Heart and Help a Child" reads the gaily colored invitations to a Designer Show on Saturday.

Sponsor of the fund-raising event is Auxiliary to Children's Memorial Hospital. Site for show, which features latest creations by Sydney North, will be Rochelle's new Convention Center, 3333 Lakewood Blvd.

A social hour at 11 a.m. precedes the noon luncheon.

The interior of the Convention facility will resemble a tropical isle as an Hawaiian motif is recreated in decorations by Mrs. Rexton Fluke and Mrs. John Lower.

Mrs. O. R. Ullery is chairman of the event, assisted by Mrs. Robert Westmyer. Mrs. Will Winston Sr., 103 Ravenna Drive, Apt. 114, has tickets at $7.50 each.

Others helping with arrangements are Mmes. Howard Coy, Herbert Vail, Albert Carrey, B. B. McCoy, Richard Glassner, Kenneth Bond and John Roggeveen.

The dress firm of Sydney North consists of two men — North Evans and Sydney Cohen — and they understand women.

THEIR DESIGNS translate this understanding into clothes that are feminine, yet fit into the liberated life of today's woman.

Evans creates the styles and Cohen follows them through from design room to customer.

Sydney North was the first firm to use polyester knits for cocktail dresses, and has incorporated it into a group of evening pantsuits in the latest collection.

"My way of designing," explains North, "is a more personalized approach toward pleasing the women who want to be distinctive."

Through their various travels around the country, the two men see first hand how the ultimate goal of their creating — the customer — looks and how she reacts personally to their styles.

Honeymooners go near and far

Fucito-Jones

A first home in Long Beach, where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Navy, has been chosen by newly wed Mr. and Mrs. David Fucito (Cheryl Jones).

The couple was married Saturday at Grace United Methodist Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jones of Long Beach was attended by June Howard, maid of honor. Best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Fucito of Glen Cove, N.Y., was the bride's brother, Daryl Jones.

A Lakewood High School graduate, the new Mrs. Fucito attended Long Beach City College. Her husband attended the University of New York.

The couple will honeymoon in Northern California.

Brockman-Myers

Kathleen Vallery Myers and Thomas John Brockman were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at Los Altos United Methodist Church.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam N. Myers of Cerritos graduated from Lakewood High School and attended Cerritos College. She is a member of the Western Surfing Association, Women's Division.

Her husband, son of Mrs. Fred Thomas Brockman of Long Beach and the late Mr. Brockman, graduated from Millikan High School and attended Long Beach City College. He is also a member of the Western Surfing Association.

They will honeymoon at Cardiff-by-the-Sea and make a first home in Cerritos.

Jewett-Smith

Honeymooning in Santa Barbara following their marriage Saturday at the Cameo Wedding Chapel are newly wed Mr. and Mrs. Michael Jewett (Janice Smith).

Luanne Smith served as maid of honor and James Ball was best man.

Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jay J. Smith of Lakewood and Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Jewett of Lancaster. The new Mrs. Jewett graduated from Lakewood High School. Her husband, a Wilson High School graduate, attended Long Beach City College.

They will make a first home in Lakewood.

Stanley-Goold

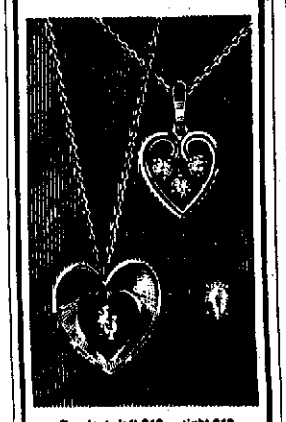

A first home in Honolulu awaits Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Stanley who repeated wedding vows Saturday evening in a traditional Hawaiian ceremony at Mr. B's French Restaurant on Waikiki Beach.

The bride is the former Kathleen Goold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Howard Goold of Delmar, N.Y. Her husband's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley of Long Beach.

The newlyweds will take a delayed summer honeymoon trip to the mainland, visiting Long Beach and New York.

A graduate of Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio, the bride earned her masters degree from Syracuse University. She has been a Vista volunteer in Hawaii. The bridegroom, an alumnus of Poly High School, attended California State College, Long Beach, received his bachelor's degree from San Francisco State College, and his masters degree from the University of Hawaii.

Pollution solution is up to you and you

— projections say we'll have seven billion by the year 2000. The fact that we will have mass famines within four years NO MATTER WHAT WE DO should make any young couple consider having no more than two children."

Interjected her husband: "More important than our individual contributions is the indirect one I can make by informing my students of the problem. I guess that's why they call me an eco-nut," he smiled.

Dr. Wylder says he had been marginally aware of environmental issues since he was an undergraduate, but he became alarmed after hearing experts speak during Earth Day on the CSLB campus last April. Within a week he had laid groundwork for co-authoring the first college English composition text devoted entirely to saving the ecology.

A paperbound edition of the text, "There Is No Away," is being published this month by Glencoe Press for national distribution to college bookstores.

"The format is divided into sections on air and water pollution, solid waste disposal, over-population, pesticide build-up and conservation of wilderness areas. Hopefully, it will inform students how to communicate by writing about these problems."

Commented Mrs. Wylder:

"Actual work on the book started in May and for the next six weeks I was Bob's reading assistant. It entailed selecting the most pertinent material from mountains of periodicals, magazines, books and newspapers.

"Sometimes I'd become so depressed, I'd escape by taking a nap. But I refuse to be a pessimist. I realized the place to begin fighting was in our home."

ELECTRICAL APPLIANCES were the first targets to fall under her fire.

"The more electricity we use, the more we pollute," she explained. "All power plants burn, fossil fuels that send nitrogen oxide into the air — a deadly combination when it mixes with hydro carbons in smoggy air.

"I'm not willing to sell my future for the convenience of an electric blanket, tooth brush, can opener, knife or dishwasher. Yes, I still use the washer and dryer — but just once a week," she admitted.

The militant conservationist paused to assemble talks before school and civic groups.

"Each person in the U.S. creates five pounds of refuse daily — 50 per cent of it is paper — roughly 20 millions tons annually. We're depleting our forests to produce paper, but its fiber is practically indestructible and can be recycled over and over into pulp.

"For every ton of paper that is reclaimed, 17 trees remain standing — and it's trees that produce oxygen. Leaving paper on trees seems a much better idea than burning it and adding further pollution to the air."

Mrs. Wylder says she uses a mesh shopping bag for incidental marketing. When buying large quantities, she takes a much-used cardboard box to the grocer's.

"I tell clerks not to triple-wrap items — and each time I turn down a paper bag, I announce loudly and clearly that the fewer bags used means the more trees we save.

"OBVIOUSLY, some paper products are indispensible — but we can do without those pretty colors. Paper dissolves, but the dye stays on to pollute the soil and water.

"We've gone back to cloth napkins. I use wax paper instead of plastic or aluminum foil which uses up a vital metal. Styrofoam is the worst offender — it simply doesn't decay and it will be in our garbage dumps indefinitely."

Tilting her head at a saucy angle, Mrs. Wylder chortled over her solution to the styrofoam problem.

"I ask youngsters in my Sunday School class at the Unitarian Church to collect used styrofoam cups and plates. We're breaking them into little pieces to fill bean bag chairs — which seems more practical than littering the land forever."

The ecology-conscious pair has imparted its concern to fellow Unitarians who take used magazines and paper boxes to the church grounds or dispatch to the CSLB recycling center.

"We're trying to start a similar project in our neighborhood," Wylder said. "One house will serve as a deposit station for paper, another for bottles and another for aluminum cans and wire hangers."

Mrs. Wylder's eyes twinkled mischievously as she offered her answer to another problem — junk mail.

"Gather a week's accumulation and return it to the sender with postage due — or mail it to your legislator with an accompanying letter demanding an end to such waste."

Other commodities the Wylders have boycotted are aerosol and plastic containers.

"You'd be surprised how fast manufacturers would change their packaging habits if enough people stopped buying containers that will not decompose."

ANOTHER POINT emphasized by the concerned couple is that every wash day brings us closer to doomsday — and it wouldn't have to be so if consumers demanded phosphate-free detergents.

"Phosphate may remove stains, but it also promotes growth of algae that removes oxygen from water," Mrs. Wylder explained.

"Detergents are responsible for 40 to 70 per cent of phosphates that enter our sewage treatment systems. Sears now sells a phosphate-free detergent and Shaklee distributes another.

"Most enzyme pre-soaks are two-thirds phosphate, many packaged water softeners have an 85 per cent phosphate content.

"My clothes may not be shiny white, but my conscience is," she beamed. "I use bio-degradable soaps such as Ivory, Lux and Duz and pre-soak garments in Arm & Hammer soda to remove heavy stains.

"You'd be surprised how gratifying it is to slow down, take a few pains and give a personalized touch to washing or cooking or gardening — like grandma used to.

"Every bit of greenery creates oxygen and by gardening organically — without chemicals — we're doing our part to stop the wholesale poisoning of our land and ocean by insecticides. It's the chlorinated hydrocarbons in pesticides that decompose slowly, but accumulate rapidly that are poisoning our planet.

"Putting it in even more elementary terms, the poisons in insecticides wash off our crops, run into our underground water tables and eventually foul the ocean.

"We've discovered that strong-smelling kitchen herbs are great as insect repellents. And fresh basil, coriander, mint and rosemary are a fantastic addition in the kitchen."

The Wylders have installed a compost heap in a far corner of their extensive herb garden for depositing coffee grounds, fruit peels, tree clippings to allow for refuse to return to nature naturally.

STRIKING a professorial stance, Dr. Wylder commented:

"I'm proud to say I have no motorcycle, no outboard motor nor power lawn mower — all of which are insults to the ear.

"Noise is one form of pollution most people overlook. City people begin to lose their hearing at age 30 — it used to be 70.

Studies prove that human hearing is damaged by prolonged exposure to more than 85 decibel sounds. A power mower rates over 100 decibels, construction equipment is 110, jet take-over is 120 and sirens hit 130.

"As for the family automobile, we're not so fanatic that we've given it up entirely. We are in the habit of forming car pools with friends. Our car is one of the smallest models on the market, which allows for burning less gas. And we buy only unleaded gas.

"Curtailing our driving is no sacrifice — I don't think anyone has gone for a drive just for the fun of it in years."

Summing up their new philosophy of living, the dedicated pair comes off with an urgency that is contagious.

"We must realize RIGHT NOW what we have done and are doing to destroy our world.

"We have a debt to pay to our environment and we can start by becoming astute consumers, by not allowing planned obsolescene, by re-claiming, not wasting, every object we use."

Savory herb garden boon to ecology

. . . Robert and Betty Wylder find pungent herbs make for a natural insect repellent as well as a welcome addition to cooking. The home gardeners have come to accept a few insects and insect holes in their plants in lieu of using chemical pesticides.

Here's what you can do:

- Use phosphate-free detergents
- Buy unleaded gas
- Cut down on driving by organizing car pools
- Separate used newspapers, bottles and cans for reclamation
- Organize neighborhood pick-up stations for dispatching refuse to recycling centers
- Boycott aerosol and non-degradable plastic containers
- Limit use of electrical appliances
- Avoid chemical pesticides
- Promote tree-planting projects

Double ceremony for sisters

Joyce Diane Reynolds exchanged wedding vows with Larry C. Hardin and her sister, Linda Lee Reynolds, exchanged vows with Leonard Nels Okerstrom Saturday afternoon at the Knott Avenue Christian Church of Anaheim.

Among those attending the ceremony were their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reynolds of Anaheim, Mrs. Elnora Hardin of Lakewood and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Nels Okerstrom of Buena Park, parents of the respective bridegrooms.

The new Mrs. Hardin was attended by her sister, Mary Ann Reynolds. Richard C. Hearons served as best man.

The couple will honeymoon in San Francisco and make a first home in Garden Grove.

Mrs. Okerstrom was attended by Mrs. Laurence Boroskin, matron of honor. Laurence Boroskin was best man.

They will take a honeymoon trip to San Diego and reside in San Francisco where the bridegroom is stationed with the U.S. Air Force.

Both Misses Reynolds graduated from Western High School and Cypress College. Hardin is a Lakewood High School graduate and attended Long Beach City College. Okerstrom was graduated from Kennedy High School.

You can help

Each week the I, P-T Women's Section brings readers a list of volunteer opportunities. Those wishing further information may contact the Community Volunteer Office, an agency of the United Way, at 426-7171, 10 a.m.-3 p.m., Monday through Friday.

MAKING CONTACT: An 18-year-old retarded youth needs outside social contact.

SPIRITUAL SOUNDS: An elderly retired minister in the western part of Long Beach would appreciate the loan of a record player and religious records or someone to drop by occasionally and play theirs for him.

CRAFTY? Then your skills could be used as an aide at a local county hospital which needs volunteers to help out during craft sessions three times a week, 1-3 p.m.

SHAPING UP: A 17-year-old blind boy in North Long Beach needs a tutor in high school geometry.

ON BORROWED TIME: A convalescent home is in need of paper back books for its library. Call CVO for delivery.

SUPERVISORS: A children's psychiatric clinic needs adults to supervise small children in the reception room.

CORRESPONDING: Ten quadriplegics in a Long Beach convalescent hospital need help with writing letters. One, an 18-year-old, also would appreciate having someone tutor him.

Distinguished British actor Emlyn Williams will impersonate Charles Dickens in his performances Saturday and next Sunday at 8:30 p.m. in UCLA's Royce Hall.

Secretary earns PLS standing

Lee Boyer of Long Beach has joined the ranks of 251 other legal secretaries nationwide who have earned the title, Professional Legal Secretary.

The two-day PLS examination is given twice a year by National Association of Legal Secretaries.

The exam, prepared by a committee of educators, practicing attorneys and experienced legal secretaries, covers six areas: written communication skill and knowledge; human relations; secretarial procedures and office management; secretarial accounting; legal terminology, techniques and procedures, and legal secretarial skills.

Miss Boyer is secretary to Kenneth J. Golden and James E. Neal, attorneys practicing in Westminster.

CHEF OF WEEK

He flips over Swedish cakes

By MILDRED E. FLANARY

That our coast is well guarded, there's little doubt. The slogan of today's Chef of the Week, Rear Adm. J. W. Williams, was "Join the Coast Guard and cover everything in-the-air and on-the-ground, including the water front." He's done just that.

As Commander, Eleventh Coast Guard District of Long Beach, Williams follows in the footsteps of "Chef" Rear Adm. Charles Tighe.

He left the wide open spaces of Texas (Farmersville), with two years at the University of Texas, Austin, to his credit, and entered the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., in 1934.

By 1938, Williams had graduated from the Academy with a B.S. degree and a commission as ensign. He was elevated to the rank of rear admiral in May, 1967.

His first assignment was on board the Coast Guard cutter Saranac, based at Galveston, Tex. Next stop, cutter Duane, Bering Sea Patrol, Greenland and Iceland, and the North Atlantic Weather Patrol from time of its inception in September 1939.

WORLD WAR II found him right in the middle of the icy waters, in various capacities. He assisted in the establishment of American Air Bases and Air Radio Aids in Greenland and in the elimination of Nazi weather stations in northeast Greenland.

He was the first Coast Guardsman to board the North Star and assume its custody for the Coast Guard from the Bureau of Fisheries. He established bases, caught fish, fought fires and trained athletes.

In fact, he was in charge of outfitting and initial training of a large number of college athletic coaches who entered the Coast Guard at that time.

As for Williams' flight training, it covered Naval Air Stations in both Michigan and Florida. He served as deputy commander of search and rescue, and piloted aircraft on anti-submarine missions in North Atlantic as operations officer at Coast Guard Air Station, Elizabeth City, N.C.

From then on, his jumps were numerous, and always upward. In September, 1951, after completing another year of training in aeronautical engineering administration on a master's degree level, he served three years as executive officer of the Coast Guard Aircraft Repair and Supply Base, Elizabeth City, N.C.

Headquartered in Washington, D.C., Williams served as assistant chief Aeronautical Engineering Division, Coast Guard Headquarters. He had command posts with rank of captain, in Miami and San Francisco.

The year 1966 found him in New York, as deputy commander, Eastern Area. Then came the "piece de resistance" of his Coast Guard career. By nomination of the President, on Dec. 16, 1966, and confirmation of the Senate on March 23, 1967, he was advanced to rank as permanent Rear Admiral as of May, 1967. He was then assigned as deputy assistant secretary for administration, Office of the Secretary of Transportation, in Washington, D.C.

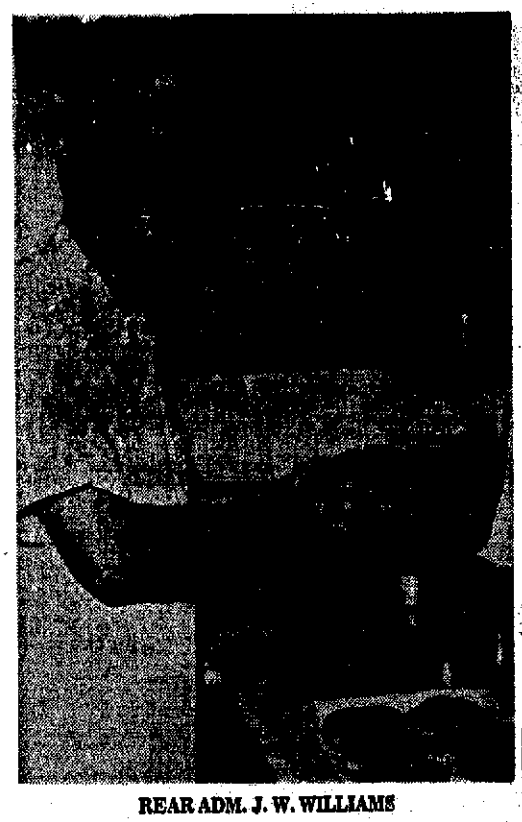

IN JANUARY, 1970, Williams was assigned inspector general of the Coast Guard, and in July was assigned to his present location in Long Beach.

Rear Adm. Williams' World War II campaign service medals and ribbons include the American Defense; American Area; European-African-Middle Eastern Area, and the World War II Victory. He also has the Korean Service Medal, the Expert Riflemen Medal, the Secretary of Treasury Commendation for Achievement Award and the Legion of Merit awarded by the Secretary of Transportation in January, 1970.

He holds memberships in the American Helicopter Society, American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, U.S. Naval Institute and the Elks Club. He served for two years on the board of directors of the Elizabeth City Rotary Club, and served on the board of directors of the Pasquotank Wildlife Club in 1964. His hobbies are swimming, golfing, boating, hunting and fishing.

Our "Chef" and his wife, Rosamond, better known as "Sandy," have a daughter, Penny, of whom they can well be proud. A graduate of Duke University, Durham, N.C., she is presently a first year law student at University of Texas at Austin.

As for his cooking . . . when there are Swedish pancakes flipping through the air . . . it's a one-man project. He guards them as he does our waterfront! thoroughly.

REAR ADM. J. W. WILLIAMS

SWEDISH PANCAKES

1 cup sifted flour
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons melted butter or vegetable oil

Beat eggs briskly. Add milk while beating. Add flour, sugar and salt while beating slowly. Finally add melted butter or vegetable oil and mix briskly and Let set for at least two hours; let set overnight is even better. Electric skillet or burner set for 375 degrees perfect for baking. About 3 tablespoons batter; 4 cakes per skillet is perfect; cakes about 4" in diameter.

CONCERT PIANIST Joanna Hodges winces in mock horror as Sidney Stafford, director of chamber music series, plays Long Beach Museum of Art's piano. The museum is seeking public contributions for a fund to replace the instrument.

POOR OLD PIANO
--It can't carry a tune any more

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

It has happened to other greats of the musical world — the moment when the quality of performance begins to slip, then slides all the way to the bottom of the steep hill of success. There were Caruso, Flagstad, Galli-Curci, Schumann-Heink — and all the others who took desperate measures, only to admit, at last, that decline had come.

So has it come to an old and faithful performer at Long Beach Museum of Art. This week, Jason Wong, museum director, sent this letter to patrons:

"If you love music, lend us your ear. After 20 years of concerts and recitals, our grand piano is fast losing its ability to carry a tune.

"Very seriously, the professionals who have played here for many years are now reluctant to face our keyboard. A painter cannot create with a hairless brush, nor a sculptor with a dull chisel, so we sympathize with our performing musicians.

"We are initiating a Grand Piano Fund to raise $2,800. This will purchase a newly rebuilt Steinway with our own grand as a trade-in. Can you help us with a contribution? Your gift, large or small is tax deductible when made payable to the Long Beach Museum of Art. Be sure to write 'Piano Fund' on your check, and thank you for sharing our concern."

SIDNEY STAFFORD, pianist and musical director of the museum's Chamber Music Concerts, adds that sumemr recitals and special musical events are offered free to the public throughout the year. It will be difficult, he says, to continue attracting top artists if the piano isn't replaced.

He recalls that two years ago Joanna Hodges, noted concert pianist and a resident of Long Beach, was to play a concert. When she tried out the museum's venerable grand she promptly refused to play it.

Her solution? She moved in her own piano for the concert.

Brothers Bolet to perform

When pianist Jorge Bolet performed with the Long Beach Symphony in February, 1970, he was received with such overwhelming enthusiasm that the Symphony Association board of directors promptly asked him to return this year.

The Cuban-American virtuoso will be soloist when his brother, Alberto Bolet, again conducts the orchestra next Sunday at 7 p.m. in Millikan High School Auditorium.

The program will open with three Bach chorales arranged by Eugene Ormandy. Jorge Bolet will be soloist for Brahms' "Concerto No. 2 in B Major" and Rachmaninoff's "Concerto No. 2" for piano and orchestra.

THE PUBLIC is invited to hear Daniel Cariaga, music critic for the Independent, Press-Telegram, preview the concert Wednesday at the Long Beach Yacht Club. Long Beach Symphony Guild, sponsor of the preview, has arranged a social hour at 11:30 a.m. and luncheon at noon. Reservations, at $4 each, can be made at the Symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

Alberto and Jorge Bolet have performed together in virtually all major music cities of the world and in hundreds of lesser cities. Critics repeatedly have noted the remarkable rapport that exists between the musicians and the music when the brothers appear together. Alberto Bolet is permanent conductor of the Long Beach Symphony.

Downey Pops

Louis Palange will conduct Downey Symphony Orchestra in a Pops Concert Saturday. The free program will begin at 8 p.m. in Downey Theater, Second Street and Brookshire Avenue, Downey.

Three artists make complex statements

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Three powerful statements about Black America by Black Americans, "Three Graphic Artists," are on exhibit at Los Angles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd., through March 7.

This direct articulation, totally in the frame of reference of Blackness, was long-coming, having been preceded by several decades in literature. But, when could Black Americans have become anything so far removed from earning daily bread before?

One of the two younger artists, David Hammons, 27, reflected this state of affairs in a quotation in the exhibit's catalogue. He found Charles White teaching at Otis Art Institute: "I never knew there were 'black' painters, or artists, or anything until I found out about him — which was maybe three years ago."

WHITE IS, of course, well-established. He attended Chicago Art Institute one year, then was associated with WPA projects. His first one-man show in New York in 1947 launched him on the national scene. Three themes, "J'Accuse" (Zola's theme, "I accuse," about racial discrimination in the Dreyfus case in 1898), "I Have a Dream" and the "Wanted Poster Series" are predominant among White's 18 works in the show.

"The "Wanted" series, sepia oil drawings, have montages of the faces of past ancestry, lost in mists behind a main figure, as well as snatches of words taken from bills of sale of chattel property.

Both Hammons and Timothy Washington are more experimental in their media. Hammons makes "body prints," inking himself and his clothing to make impressions on poster board which is then finished with skillful silk-screening.

WASHINGTON'S works are scratched with a fine needle through black-sprayed aluminum plates. Washington's control is exquisite so that crystal-clear forms zoom from the sooty blackness.

"Message" art is "out" just now, except in instances in which there is information to communicate. These complex messages are stated in terms of art, not literature. Whatever one's view of "Black" today may be, these works stand out as art in meeting the requirement of reflecting man in his time.

Latecomers will not be seated until there is a suitable break in the performance.

Afro-Americans show art

An exhibit of 20 works by 19 Afro-American artists, all Southern Californians, will be on exhibit in Compton through March 3. The art is displayed in Security Pacific National Banks at 1902 W. Rosecrans Blvd. and 201 E. Compton Blvd. It is valued at more than $25,000, according to Claude Booker, president of the Black Arts Council, co-sponsor of the show.

The 20 pieces of art were selected from hundreds submitted. Jurors were Charles White, artist and professor; Mrs. Evangeline J. Montgomery, special consultant on Afro-American art to the Oakland Art Museum; and Leon O. Banks, M.D., a collector and critic.

During the next 15 months, the art will be displayed in Security Pacific Banks throughout Los Angeles County.

Only two of the artists are women, Dr. Samella Lewis and Bettye Saar. Youngest artist is Richard Wyatt Jr., 14. Herman Bailey, now instructor of art at the University of Maryland, once was the state artist of the nation of Ghana.

Other artists represented are Dan Concholar, Timothy Washington, David Hammons, Bernie Casey, Nathaniel Bustion, Alonzo Davis, Kenneth Kemp, Leon Leonard Sr., Artis Mack, Bill Maxwell, John Outterbridge, Bill Pajaud, John Riddle, Charles D. Rodgers and Andrew Whitfield Jr.

CALIFORNIA State College, Dominguez Hills, opens an exhibit by four Chicano artists today in the college library. The work of Charles Almaraz, Leonard Castellanos, Robert Gomez and Jim Gutierrez will hang through March 12.

On Feb. 15, Gomez and Castellanos will speak informally about the exhibit at 7 p.m. in the library.

AT THE WESTSIDE Neighborhood Center, 1372 W. Willow St., Ivy Pitzer and Ann Skroch have exhibits of oils which will continue into March. The public is invited to a reception Feb. 20 from 1 to 5 p.m.

A Westside Art Club is under consideration; for further information, call Mrs. Skroch, 2950 Baltic Ave.

DR. STEPHEN S. KAYSER will lecture on "The Story of Jewish Art" Thursday at 8 p.m. in Temple Sinai Auditorium, Seventh Street and Molino Avenue.

IN HIS Cannery Gallery, 417 31st St., Newport Beach, Harold Ronson is showing art by Roger Kuntz, Nan Tandy, Paul Lauritz, Corinne West, Ralph Scarlett and Diana Janus. Hours are noon to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays.

'Play It Again'

Red Buttons, movie star, will open as the star of the stage comedy, "Play It Again, Sam," Monday at the Huntington Hartford Theater, Hollywood. The Woody Allen comedy about a movie critic in search of a girl also features Deborah Deeble, William Bogert, Peter De Maio and Connie Day.

Adrift on a sea of third grade drama

By ERMA BOMBECK

The professional theater calls it improvisation.

The third grade teachers call it ad-libbing.

The parents call it Excedrin Headache No. 16.

You unleash a kid with an imagination and anything can happen. As I sat in a third grade chair waiting for the curtain to rise on the homespun production of "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker," all I could think of was a story from Dick Van Dyke's new book, "Faith, Hope and Hilarity."

A first-grade class was to improvise its own dialogue for the Nativity scene. A little girl picked up an imaginary phone on the manger wall and said, "Hello, Elizabeth? This is Mary. I just had to call and tell you the good news. I'm expecting a Savior."

Elizabeth's voice was full of joy as she said, "that's wonderful, Mary. Me too!"

MY SON had assured me he had a "neat part." I hoped he wouldn't feel compelled to pad it like the Innkeeper in another improvised version of the Christmas play who was asked if there were lodgings for Mary and Joseph. "No," he said, slamming the door. Then, opening it just a crack he yelled out, "But you can come in for a cocktail if you like."

It was curtain time for "The Life of Eddie Rickenbacker." The stage revealed a raft with four boys bobbing around in it. One boy spoke, "It sure is a rotten day."

"I'll drink to that," said my son hoisting his boy scout canteen.

"Oh, no you don't," said one of his companions. "You've drunk all the water already."

"Look!" said another boy. "It's Joe. He let his arm hang overboard and a shark ate it." Unceremoniously, they dumped Joe overboard without so much as batting an eye.

"Gee, Eddie," said one of the survivors. "What are we going to do?"

"Something will turn up," said Eddie. "Look, is that a ship?"

AS ONE OF THE boys stood up in the raft, he lost his balance and fell overboard. "What did I tell you?" said Eddie, "Now there are only two of us to share the water. Come to think of it, you don't look so good."

"It's the water," gasped my son, "I guess I made a hog of myself." He slumped and was gone.

Eddie rolled my son over the side of the raft with the classic sentiment, "I'd keep you here, George, but you'd smell."

I hate to admit it, but all I could feel was relief.

CULTURE COMES TO SYDNEY AS CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES IN OPERA HOUSE

An Aussie sounds off

By FRANK ANDERSON
Staff Writer

SYDNEY, Australia—Reginald Millbanks rested his size 12 feet on the bar rail and ticked off his blessings.

"I've got a house that's half paid for, a missus, five nippers, a seven-year-old Holden sedan and a mother-in-law who lives in Adelaide and only visits us twice a year."

Reg, who's 52 years old and had been a Digger with the Royal Australian Army in a 5-year combat tour that stretched from the Middle East to New Guinea, was on holiday from one of his two jobs — crane operator for a Sydney construction company. The other job — bartender at a go-go house in Kings Cross — was still some 10 hours away. But aching arches or not, the holiday excursion to Manly amusement park had to be seen to.

"The old lady and the kids are waiting over at the pier. When the boat comes in, Freddie, me youngest, will come racing across the street to get me underway. Never gives his old dad a rest, does he."

AND SO SAYING, Reg Millbanks started on his second pint of Resch's ale—"the workingman's friend."

"Where you from, mate?" he asked me, fresh off a Pan Am flight from Los Angeles.

"Long Beach, Calif.," said I.

"Ah," said Reg, "I know it well. Me second cousin, once removed, married a sailor from California, and they spent their honeymoon at Disneyland. Imagine, him a sailor spending his honeymoon in an amusement park submarine. You'd think they'd go to Hollywood to look up Tom Mix and Billie Dove—which is what I'd do given 'alf the chance at California."

"Tom Mix and Billie Dove have passed on," I said.

"Sorry to hear that," said Reg. "Just shows you the last time I went to the pictures."

Millbanks may not qualify as the movies' top ticket-buyer, but he'll do as a typical Australian. In fact he's pretty typical of any workingman to be found in a Pine Street pub on a national holiday.

HE GROUSED about taxes, the high cost of living and the declining morals of the young.

"Imagine those college kids buying that dirty book. What's this world coming to!"

He referred to an enterprising university student at Queensland who had made a killing bootlegging copies of Philip Roth's banned book, "Portnoy's Complaint."

Reg interrupted his sermon about the morals of youth to laugh at a barmate's dirty joke and throw in one of his own for good measure.

The second pint took on a mate — "the last one before the boat whistle," said Reg, wiping the suds from his guardsman's mustache. Setting the stein firmly on the polished bar top, he climbed down and made his way to the dart board.

"Let's throw a round for a wager," Reg said. "You go first."

"I soon found that the first shall be last when an American newsman dares an Australian at darts. Thirty minutes and $3 later I had been lectured on world politics, questioned at length about the Queen Mary project, instructed on the history of greyhound racing, Davis Cup tennis, the obligations of labor and management and challenged to tell what Art Linkletter "is really like."

Linkletter, it might be noted, has extensive holdings in Australia and his name pops up frequently in discussions of what foreign capital is doing to or for Australia.

"I DON'T KNOW Linkletter," I said. "But he's supposed to be a nice man. And nobody can doubt his financial acumen. Why, he made a fortune peeking into ladies' purses and baiting little kids into risque comments."

"I'll take Lucy, Bill Cosby and McHale's Navy," said Reg, allowing that television is the biggest entertainment in his manse of six rooms and "two add-ons."

"How about the opera?" I asked. "Won't the new opera house inundate Australia with culture."

"Maybe," said Reg. "If we ever finish it. But I won't knock something that gives me work."

Reg said he was a crane operator on the opera house construction and piled up mountains of overtime on the job.

"They've spent $84 million on it so far. It isn't finished and probably won't be until 1973. And when it is the tickets will be too high for the likes of me."

"Most interesting architecturally," I said, opting for diplomacy on a subject that has been prickled in controversy for seven years.

"Looks like a heap of pagodas suffering from a slipped disc," said Reg. "When the boat steams past it on the trip to Manly, I'm looking the other way. Bad enough seeing it through me work shift."

OH, WELL, I thought philosophically, it's hard to be culture-conscious on a total income of 90-odd dollars a week.

But then the third pint took full effect and Reg Millbanks blossomed out like a Chamber of Commerce brochure.

"Greatest place in the world to live, that's Sydney, Weather's pleasant all year and the sights are something to behold. Even the hippies look interesting from a distance, but I wouldn't want one for a son-in-law.

"Take Malcolm, my 20-year-old. He's at university on a state scholarship. He's got the beard and sideburns, but his mind is crew-cut. Votes Tory, and me a Laborite. But we want the same things — a clean country, with growth and self-sufficiency. Imagine, a crane operator with an electrical engineer for a son."

It happens all the time in America. I thought to myself. Why not Australia, where the people and their dreams are so much like ours?

Then, right on schedule, Reg's youngest, 10-year-old Freddie came chugging into the bar all out of breath.

"Mum says come on, Dad. The boat's in. And you promised."

"So I did lad," said Reg, hitching up his flannel slacks and reseating the golfing cap on grey-shot red hair.

MILLBANKS TURNED to the pub-keeper and asked him to "mark it down in the book."

"I'll be settling up the week come noon Saturday," Reg said.

Freddie scuffed at the floor with his tennies, impatient with the goodbyes. Then the youngster dispatched the coup de grace to Dad's holiday.

"Hurry up Dad. We're meeting Gran at Manly. It's your surprise."

"Good Lord, lad," exploded Reg Millbanks, Presbyterian vestryman, crane operator and inescapable son-in-law.

Just like home, said I to myself. For haven't I seen many a Stateside bar cleared by the advent of a mother-in-law?

JAL has films on Japan

Japan Air Lines has a Festival of Films available free to interested civic groups, women's clubs or companies seeking information about Japan.

The color movies, running 21 to 30 minutes in length, include "Festival Japan," "Japan Season by Season," "Portrait of the Orient," "A Day in Tokyo," "Discovering the Orient," "Glimpses of Enchanting Japan," "The Inland Sea of Japan" and "Kyoto: Ancient Capital of Japan."

Requests for the films should be made in writing to Regional Film Centers of Association - Sterling Films. In Los Angeles, the address is 2221 S. Olive St., 90007.

TRIP TIPS

Visit an island in the sun

By MARIE MATTSON

Islands that used to be haunts of pirates have been appropriated by sun worshippers seeking a tranquil life amid hospitable people.

If you're looking for such an oasis off the beaten path, consider one of these islands anchored in the Caribbean:

COZUMEL, Mexico. Although this ranks as one of the world's top skin diving spots, it's equally popular with people who just like to sunbathe or drive over unsurfaced jungle roads to Mayan temple ruins. Just 12 miles off the Mexican mainland, Cozumel (ko-zu-MEL) is about 30 miles long, 10 miles wide.

Leading hotel is El Presidente ($52 double, $36 single modified American Plan), where rooms have private solaria for nude sun bathing; next best is Cozumel Caribe ($50 double, $34 single American Plan) with an especially good beach. Cantarell, Cabanas del Caribe and Playa Azul are other good first-class establishments priced about $10 less.

Each hotel faces the sea and has a private beach plus swimming pool. Musicians play in bars and dining rooms, but only El Presidente and Cozumel Caribe offer dancing.

The hotels are a few miles outside the town of San Miguel, which has no beach for swimming. In town, however, are several modest establishments where rooms run about $7 double without meals.

MAIN ACTIVITIES of course, center around the water. One of the choice spots for getting a fish-eye view of marine life is Chancanab Lagoon, which is connected to the sea by an underwater tunnel. A day-long Robinson Crusoe cruise ($10) also takes you to remote beaches while professional divers catch your lunch of lobster, crab and other sea food along the way.

Seas are calmest for skin diving from January through March; best for fishing from May to August. Daily rental for complete scuba equipment runs $6, for charter fishing boat accommodating six people (two fishing chairs) and including equipment and bait, $50.

Cozumel is reached by direct air service from Mexico City, Merida and Miami.

ISLA MUJERES, Mexico. Lying about 100 miles north of Cozumel, Isla Mujeres (EES-lah moo-HAIR-es) is only five miles long and a half mile wide. White sand covers the wide main beach.

Although there is a good amount of seaweed in the water, some has been cleared away to facilitate swimming.

Boats and gear can be rented for skin diving, treasure hunting and salt water fishing. The village is primitive, but good accomodations are available at Posada del Mar ($32 double, $22 single American Plan).

Reach Isla Mujeres by air from Merida or Cozumel.

PIEDERTUPO, Panama. Most people find this island delightful and unique — but if you can't be happy any place except in a Hilton Hotel, it's not for you.

The private home of Joan and Tom Moody, an amiable young American couple, palm-studded Piedertupo (pe-der-too-poe) is about as large as a city block. You feel like a house guest in your attractive thatched cottage with bathroom, but without electric lights or hot water. It's a well managed operation with an efficient local staff.

Joan prepares meals — lobsters are kept live in a sea tank just outside the kitchen door.

Activities include swimming, fishing, skin diving, water skiing, sailing native cayucos and island-hopping to nearby San Blas Indian villages. If you need skin diving or other water sports instruction, Tom will oblige.

THERE ARE only six cottages; daily rate including all meals is $40 double, $25 single. Price covers use of recreational equipment and instruction.

For further information or reservations write George Novey, P.O. Box 6689, Panama City 5, Panama, who operates charter air service from Panama City to Piedertupo.

For all these islands, dress is casual and summery — include a sweater for cooler February evenings. (Piedertupo, with daytime temperatures about 80 degrees, has warmest climate.)

Travel and RESORTS

Weekend party cruises ready for '71 sailings

Princess Cruises will offer four of its highly popular three-and four-night "Party Cruises" this year.

The cruises on the luxurious 420-passenger Princess Italia will depart from Los Angeles and visit the free port of Ensenada, Mexico.

One four-night cruise is scheduled for the Memorial Day weekend, with departure on May 28. Rates start at $210. Three-night cruises will depart March 5, April 23 and June 1. Fares begin at $159.

As a free port, Ensenada offers a wide selection of low-cost goods from around the world. Mexican arts and crafts are available at moderate prices. Excellent buys are also offered in the duty-free gift shop aboard the Princess Italia.

Each cruise will include a close-to-shore look at the elephant seal herds along the beaches of otherwise uninhabited Guadelupe Island, off the coast of Baja California.

PARTICULARLY generous deck space and floor-to-ceiling picture windows provide easy sightseeing.

Every cabin on the fully air-conditioned, all-first-class luxury cruise liner has private facilities, television, individual temperature controls, telephone and multi-channel music system. Passenger amenities include a heated swimming pool, theatre, gymnasium, cardroom, library and nightclubs with live entertainment.

Additional information is available from travel agents or from Princess Cruises, 3435 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

We are pleased to announce our appointment as an accredited agent for

Package tours available to Hawaii

Last year, more than a million people visited the Hawaiian Islands.

Sounds overwhelming at first thought, but not when one discovers that almost 10 times that number visited the confines of the biggest little city in the world," — Reno, Nev.

Nevertheless, Hawaii's numbers are destined to grow. Maybe not by leaps and bounds as some hotel builders prophesy, but a kind of "steady as she goes" growth.

Since last year, 10,000 new rooms have been built. The largest of them all, the Sheraton Waikiki with 1,800 rooms, is now under construction.

FOR THOSE who don't swing to the action of Honolulu, the old Hawaii is still to be found on the outer islands where, at any given time of the day, you may find yourself alone on a great expanse of golden beach.

Lower air fares are encouraging more "malahinis" or newcomers. Western Air Lines and others now offer an $85 one-way economy fare. But probably the largest contributing factor, and it's all in favor of the tourist, is competition and the package tour.

An example of one of these bargains in a package is Western's "Magic Week in Hawaii." It includes seven nights and eight days on Waikiki Beach and Poipu Beach on Kauai, basic transportation, including sightseeing on both islands and a round-trip flight to Kauai — topped off with a flower lei, a beach bag and a valet — all for $99.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

East Africa--unblemised land

By STAN DELAPLANE

Mombasa, Kenya

This is a hot, humid port city in the Indian Ocean, with the whitest sand and warmest water I've ever put a foot in.

East Africa is eager for tourist money. So here we have the Mombasa Beach, the most attractive resort hotel in the country: 100 elegant blue-and-white rooms with a sea view. Good food. Dancing under the stars. A coral reef to explore — and keep the sharks away.

THE PRICE is $30 a day for two with meals.

The problem is getting people here. East African Airways has a package round-trip from New York for $777. (But figure $900 with package sightseeing.) It's a pack of money considering the competition: Round-trip New York-Europe, $210.

But, here you have the last of the untouched people. The big game country. Lion and elephant and rhino on grassy savannahs that go on and on to washed-blue horizons.

MOMBASA looks something like Puerto Vallarta, Mexico. Same palm trees, red-tiled roofs and fishing boats. Britisher here hires out boats for morning fishing at $50. GUARANTEES you'll come home with marlin, sailfish or tuna.

What to buy: Crocodile purses for $60. Leopard skin handbags, $40. Lion's claws bracelets. Elephant hair bracelets — supposed to bring luck.

"Can I wear pant suits in Greece?" (Same question on Mexico, Africa, London, Caribbean cruise ships, etc.)

I think you can wear pant suits anywhere in the world now. I see them in the most conservative countries. On ships. On the street. Evenings. (I saw them in elegant Trader Vic's in San Francisco the other day. Vic was very straight arrow about pants — but he couldn't win them all.)

"Can women wear shorts in Nassau?"

You can wear them around the resorts. But they'll dog-eye you if you walk down Bay Street in them. These British-type islands are very strict about dress. Tie and jacket for dinner, no matter how hot. And so most dining rooms are chilled with air conditioning. Pack a stole.

"My husband and I may be going to Australia in February. What wardrobe?"

Australia is pretty relaxed for daytime street wear. They are still in the shortest minis anywhere — rightly, for Australian girls have great legs. Evenings, Australia is quite dressy British: Cocktail dress and men wear jacket and tie.

If you go to the beaches — wonderful beaches — you'll see bikinis you could airmail with one stamp. Love that Australia! (Summer there now.)

Bachelors can swing in Orient

Fun, adventure and companionship for single people of all ages are accented on Around the Orient tours arranged by Bachelor Party Tours for 1971.

They begin and end in San Francisco with air transportation on Japan Air Lines.

Nights on the town are an integral part of the programs, which include visits to famous restaurants such as the Chinzanso Gardens in Tokyo; unique shows of the Philippine Tagalog dancers and the Thai dancers of Bangkok. No lobby-sitting on these tours with every evening planned for the single to "go native" and take part in local color.

ANOTHER FEATURE is that travelers may join a group of their own general age-level. Departures are planned for groups both under and over 35.

Tours visit Japan, Manila, Singapore, Bangkok, Hong Kong and Taipei.

An experienced tour escort meets the group in each city and handles all details.

Complete land portion of these tours is $639 with complete air fare from San Francisco costing $738. Departures for over 35 age groups are in April, May, June and September. Under 35 groups leave in July and August.

Yacht ports

NASSAU, Bahamas — Long a popular port of entry and the principal Bahamian focus for sport fishermen the world over, easily accessible Bimini and Cat Cay are the most visited by American yachtsmen of all Bahama Out Islands.

Trips show best of U.S.

NEW YORK — New inexpensive Mini-Tours with three to five days of luxury living in a fine hotel or motor inn plus extras such as theatre tickets, champagne, meals and plenty of time to shop will be offered in 1971 by Space Bank, the free travel reservations service operated by American Express Reservations, Inc.

Now you can book a mid-week or weekend fling in major U.S. cities with meals, entertainment, tours (even tips) covered by a low-package rate.

Mini-Tours are arranged by dialing the 800-AE8-5000 Space Bank number. Reservations are made and the arrangements for the three-to-five-day vacation are verbally confirmed in seconds by the Space Bank operator.

A written acknowledgment is also mailed the same day, giving you a confirmation for the special package when you arrive.

EACH HOTEL or motor inn creates its own Mini-Tour tailored to the special flavor of the city and the individuality of the establishment, so no two are the same.

In New York, theatre tickets and flowers in the room are included in one tour; in Chicago all meals, ice skating, sauna and a free cocktail party are included; in Boston, 2½ hours of sightseeing, shopping and a gourmet dinner; and in Las Vegas, drinks, free golf privileges, plus a floor show.

To satisfy all tastes and pocketbooks and to give representation to as many cities as possible, Space Bank is adding additional Mini-Tours every month. Tours will remain available for a minimum of three months to a year.

For a free, detailed catalogue of current Space Bank Mini-Tours, listing rates and packages, write: American Express Reservations, Inc., Department No. M-T 1, 770 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10003.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Dr. Mr. Corn:

My partner and I had a serious misunderstanding in the bidding of this hand. Would you comment?

Misunderstood,
Riverside, Calif.

Answer. It appears there were a number of misunderstandings here. West's one no-trump isn't exactly classic. My guess is that West is East's husband.

East apparently intended four no-trump as Blackwood, asking for aces. East had the right idea but used the wrong approach. Over a one no-trump bid by partner, the four no-trump bid does not ask for aces but says, "I have 15 or 16 points. Do you have a maximum one no-trump opening?" The opener either passes or bids, depending on whether his no-trump bid was minimum or maximum.

Her East should use the four-club convention (Gerber) after the one no-trump bid. This asks for aces and will make it easy for East to bid no-trump.

I prefer this auction.

West	East

Dear Mr. Corn:

In a recent duplicate game, I heard someone discussing the "Landy" convention. What is this?

Wondering,
Ft Wayne, Ind.

Answer. The Landy convention is a device for competing against an opening bid of one no-trump. Over an opponent's one no-trump, a two-club overcall promises nothing about clubs but rather shows length in both major suits. It asks partner to bid his best major.

Usually the Landy bidder has 10 cards in hearts and spades. Something like:

♠ K Q 10 7 6
♥ A J 8 4 2
♦ Q 7

When using the Landy convention, the double of a one no-trump conveys a desire to defend that contract. It is not a takeout double, since the Landy convention substitutes for the takeout double.

DEAR ABBY

Dad needs lessons in fatherhood

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a man to be the father of four wonderful children and not have one ounce of paternal instinct? I think that's the case with my husband. He has four children any father would be proud to claim, yet if I ever heard him give any one of them a compliment I think I would die of the shock. The only time the children have known for sure that they had a father is when they did something he didn't like, and then he'd hit them.

Don't suggest professional help. My husband knows more than the experts. Maybe if you print this letter he will see it and realize it's meant for him. LONG SUFFERING WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I doubt if anyone as insensitive as your husband would get the message. I hope it's not too late for him to thaw out a bit and show some signs of affectionate fatherhood. The father who functions only as a prosecutor and disciplinarian had better prepare for a lonesome old age.

DEAR ABBY: I have had this problem for five years but I never wanted to admit it to myself. Well, today I finally did.

Everytime I get mad at myself I take it out on my hair. What I mean, exactly, is that I cut it. I know that I look much better with long hair, but I keep cutting it anyway and then I am sorry afterwards.

I don't do anything else to myself along the line of destroying my looks, but this is bad enough because I know my hair is my best feature — when it's long. It's an unusually pretty color, naturally curly, and it's very shiny, so why do I do this to myself?

Please tell me what I can do to stop cutting my hair all the time? One of my friends suggested I see a psychiatrist, but he would have to cure me in one hour at the rates psychiatrists charge. What do you think?

SCISSORS IN MY HAIR

DEAR SCISSORS: You've practically answered your own question. Cutting your hair is your way of "punishing" yourself. A psychiatrist could probably tell you more specifically why you feel the need to be punished, and thereby put an end to it. Inquire about the Mental Health Clinics in your area. It's well worth the try.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MONTANA MOTHER: Go to school and talk to the teacher personally! This is one matter you should dig into until you are satisfied that you know all the facts.

A Casualty of Cutbacks

By FRED FERRETTI
New York Times Service

Television news is a casualty of the country's recession, forced into a holding position when its practitioners say it should be expanding; conscious of its ongoing obligation to inform, yet stalled by the economic realities that govern its existence.

The American Broadcasting Company News Department doesn't have the money to reinstate the weekly documentary series it experimented with last year. It can only dream of the late evening network news program it wanted. It draws up lists of expendable news employes.

The Columbia Broadcasting System tries to decide whether economics will force its weekly prime time documentary "The CBS News Hour" into the late Sunday viewing ghetto, where, as one news executive puts it, "only the producer and his family watch." It does away with its opinion polling unit.

The National Broadcasting Company News Department lays off more than 70 producers, writers, directors, correspondents and technicians, and more are expected. Its budget is frozen. It cuts down the size of its specialized space unit and there will be more taping of the

DEATH VALLEY

The Great Mohave

California's Death Valley, which until the late 1800s masked its gold core, earned its name because of its severe face and inhospitable nature.

Gold-rushers made the grave error of trying to cross it in 1849 as a short cut to gold fields farther west. And it is they who christened the truculent valley, which is explored on the season's third National Geographic Society special, "The Great Mojave Desert," at 8 p.m., Saturday, Ch. 2.

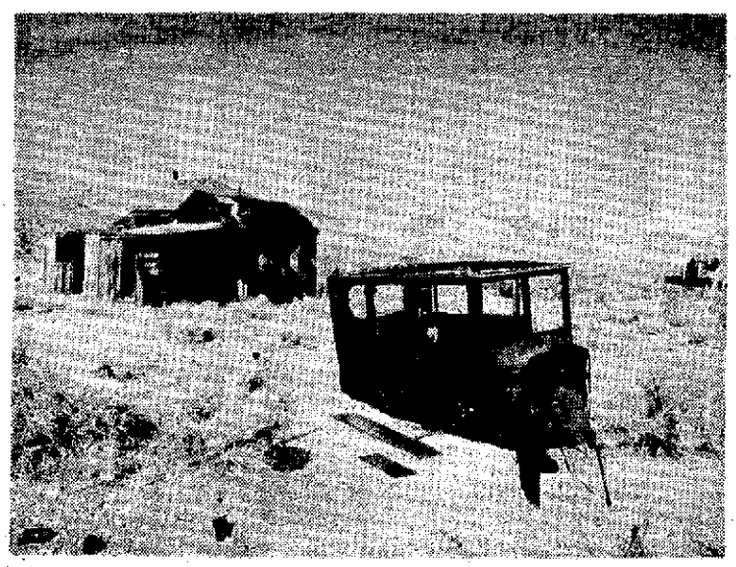

The Forty-Niners could think of no more apt name for the unique, arid basin that drained life, sanity and strength and seemed to give nothing in return. That, of course, was before it, too, yielded gold.

Unable to see the beauties of the valley through the difficulties it imposed, the Forty-Niners, without the necessary provisions and with the added disadvantage of a false map, considered life more precious than gold by the middle of that winter.

Along with the general name Death Valley, the area's various obstacles received equally bitter subtitles from the surviving Forty-Niners. Still retaining these original monikers are such spots as Arsenic Spring, Deadman Pass, Desolation Canyon, Hells Gate, Last Chance Range, Lostman Spring, Rattlesnake Gulch, Badwater Coffin Canyon, Lost Wagons, Suicide Pass, Poison Spring and Starvation Canyon.

On the other hand, the unique land has to its credit some of the most magnificent views of nature anywhere. And a decade after Death Valley tormented the Forty-Niners, it yielded its great wealth of gold and later its even greater wealth of borax, which was taken out by mule trains.

But, although a sturdy breed of man can and still does live in the area, the mining communities are, for the most part, now ghost towns and the face of Death Valley still scowls at intrusion.

GHOSTLY RELICS of Gold Rush days, abandoned shacks are not uncommon sights in Death Valley National Monument. In more recent times some areas have become dumping grounds for junked autos, railroad cars and even old aircraft.

Lily of 'Laugh-In'

By VERNON SCOTT
UP International

LILLIAN TOMLIN

Lily Tomlin, the maddeningly nasal switchboard operator on "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In," has created an assemblage of female prototypes who are too close to truth for comfort:

Ernestine, the aforementioned telephone operator; Mrs. Earbore, strident advocate of good taste; 5-year-old Edith Ann; Suzie Sorority of the silent majority; Lula, the Loud Mouth, and the fast-talking nitwit among others.

AWAY FROM all those characters, Lily is an astonishly pretty girl with a sexy figure.

Of herself, she says, "I have the eighth best pair of legs in the world. I don't know who the other seven are."

Lily's limbs may be checked out — a delightful pastime — at Malibu Beach where she lives.

Personally, Lily is best described as the kind of girl Shirley MacLaine portrayed in "The Apartment." There is an honesty and vulnerability about the girl that is at once compelling and likeable.

She expresses herself in a perfect stream of consciousness.

Mention the weather, the NBC show in which she shines, the color of her eyes or a recent movie and she picks up the conversational ball and runs with it like a seasoned halfback.

Lily can say "I don't know" a thousand times in an hour, all the while expressing herself with her hands, facial moves and self-conscious physical contortions.

THE SLENDER brunette probably would be a great deal funnier if she weren't so attractive.

To play Ernestine she must contort her features into a mask that would revolt the late Boris Karloff.

When "Laugh-In" concludes taping for the year Lily will hit the nightclub circuit starting at Mr. Kelly's in Chicago April 19. Thereafter she will appear in her native Detroit, New York and Washington.

The versatile Miss Tomlin also has recorded a new album with the flakey title, "This Is a Recording," reciting the adventures of Ernestine the earphone enemy of all mankind.

"I don't know what I do," Lily said, waving her hand, "but I like to make up little things and pass them on to other people — share with them. And I like to make people laugh."

PAN AND FAN MAIL

THE SITUATION on news programs seems to create quite some comment. . . . We were so grateful when Tom Reddin was taken off (as anchor man) and Ch. 5. Ch. 2's Jerry (Dunphy) is great, but gives very little local items, which he has no control over, we assume. Ch. 4 is our choice. . . . Each newscast has some comedy along with it which helps sweeten the program. The weather item is fabulous and keeps one's attention constantly — a great help. Peter Miller, we feel, should not have left Ch. 11, but the public opinion never seems to do any good. "Writing in" is wasting your postage.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Phillips,
Lakewood

Ch. 5 has been so busy "up-grading" itself, eventually they'll end up serving no one except those with only black and white (*) sets, as no one who has color is going to waste time watching all the very old movies, re-runs, etc., they show in black and white. I doubt too many who own even B&W sets like the shows, either. Instead of upgrading, I think they're trying to get by with cheap shows.

L. C. Canady,
Long Beach

PLEASE GIVE me any information on why and how Ann Sheridan died.

S. H. Michr,
Carson

(Miss Sheridan, star of "Pistols and Petticoats" on TV, died at the age of 52, on Jan. 21, 1967. Reports on cause of death were not specific, but she was reported to have died "after a lingering illness." Some sources, close to her, said she had cancer).

CHANNEL 7 news has always been one of my favorites but have been wondering what has happened to Bill Bonds? Is Jim Lawrence going to take over the program as anchor man permanently?

J. H.,
Fountain Valley

(Ch. 7 management said Bonds left the anchor post at his own request and will be on special assignment for the station. Bonds' son is recovering from an accident and he requested time off. When or if Bonds returns to the anchor job is up to him, the station reported).

. . . ABC-TV . . . please bring back "The Young Rebels". . . .

Penny and Judy Shubin,
Lakewood

I'VE GOT three things to say about television:

1. People don't watch television to be educated or intellectually stimulated. At least, this has been my experience in talking with people. I certainly don't want my brain picked when I turn on the tube. I want to enjoy myself, having a quiet evening away from that ungodly world of relevancy.

2. For the life of me, I can't understand why people continually write in complaining about "quality" programming. There are so many different shows on the air that everyone should be able to satisfy himself. And to the lady who loves "Civilization," just let me say I can't stand it. I would much rather watch "Green Acres" and "Beverly Hillbillies" when I'm not doing my college work.

3. Finally, a little tip to all those frustrated viewers. In our house we have been able to alleviate the problem of not being able to find something to watch. We turn the television set off.

Network Casualty

Apollo 14 coverage for regular newscasts than live break-ins.

TELEVISION is in the throes of the worst economic slump in history. The general depression of the country's economy and the loss of cigarette advertising, 10 per cent of its advertising income, have combined to constrict the television industry's profits and spending.

Television news has been particularly hard hit in this time of tight money, and what is significant is that there is no way to mask the effect on the home screen. Increased use of still photographs does not compensate for the lack of a strip of current film, nor does the use of polished graphics. Television news executives fear that as the economic pinch gets tighter there will be less enterprise, fewer voyages to out-of-the-way locales for coverage of the unusual and less money to spend on coverage that is not day-to-day hard reporting. News cannot be gathered or presented competently on television without large expenditures of money.

Cross-ocean satellite transmissions cost thousands of dollars a minute, as do telephone line connections between America's coasts. Cost of a three-man camera crew has been calculated at $250,000 a year.

Yet network television must continue to maintain its current level of daily news coverage. It must do so because the Federal Communications Commission says broadcasters have an obligation to present news and public affairs; also because of the keen three-network rivalry, and because there are people in the network news departments to whom news presentation is a matter of philosophical dedication.

THE INDUSTRY says there is yet another factor that militates against the growth, in form and in substance, of television news. In September, network television time, by FCC order, will be reduced to three hours each night. The commission hoped to encourage diversity in programing and to break the hold of networks on viewers.

What will happen, industry spokesman believe, is that there will be diversity but only of program sources, and a lessening of quality. The FCC refused to exempt network news from its ruling, virtually ensuring, industry spokesmen say, that the added time given over to local stations will most likely be filled with the most inexpensive programing available, which is not news, and there will be fewer commercial spots for sale.

Less time for TV in general equals less time for television news in particular.

Prime time news and documentaries draw smaller audiences than do entertainments. Smaller audiences mean less money because sponsors will not pay premium rates for programs with relatively low numbers of viewers.

This is why CBS executives have been playing schedule tennis with the "CBS News Hour," which alternates "60 Minutes" and "CBS Reports" Tuesday nights at 10. Over the last weeks they reported "reliably" that the news hour would move to Sundays at 6 p.m., and just as "reliably" reported that the move will not be made.

The move, if made, would, in the words of Richard Salant, CBS News president, mean "there would be no regularly scheduled news division series on any network." NBC's "First Tuesday" is a monthly two-hour magazine type of program, but it is only on once every four weeks.

Reuven Frank, president of NBC News, does not have a specific program, as does Salant, but what he does, he says, is dictated by economics. The NBC News budget exceeds $100 million for 1,100 people, but this includes sports coverage and news operations at NBC's five-owned TV stations, neither of which are controlled by Frank's counterparts, Salant or Elmer Lower, president of ABC News.

Television documentaries, the news chiefs say, will continue to decline, with money again the prime reason. Once strong topical documentaries were the jewels in network news' crowns. Now there is a disinclination on the part of sponsors to buy controversy, and also lack of network money to subsidize topicality in prime time.

MARY TYLER MOORE

M-T-M's TV Return Looks Good

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

In a television season that has proved decidedly cruel to new shows, the Mary Tyler Moore Show stands as a remarkable achievement.

In a recent rating, the show is the only situation comedy to score a resounding hit in the 1970-71 season. In fact, her series and the Flip Wilson variety hour are the only newcomers that are acknowledged hits.

Miss Moore's achievements is more impressive when you consider that she is female. Obviously.

With rare exceptions — mostly on CBS Monday night — female stars don't last long in television.

"I REALIZE that," says Mary Tyler Moore, "and I don't know exactly why. Maybe because — let's face it — it's still a man's world, and most of the stories are about men.

"Maybe it's because actresses have trouble being funny and still remaining feminine. That's where I'm fortunate. I'm surrounded by five very funny men on the show. Very often I end up with all the straight lines. That's fine with me."

CBS hasn't announced renewal of the show yet but it is practically certain.

Mary Tyler Moore is a Brooklyn girl who grew up in Los Angeles, left Immaculate Heart High School to smile her way through TV commercials. Her first important role — the sexy voice and shapely legs of Sam the secretary in "Richard Diamond," starring David Janssen. The rest of her was never seen on the series.

FIVE YEARS on the Dick Van Dyke Show brought her two Emmies and a movie contract with Universal.

"Except for 'Thoroughly Modern Millie,' none of the Type Victim

"When Hollywood turns its back on someone," says Mercedes McCambridge, "it's one of the most unbending backs there is."

She said it matter-of-factly, without bitterness as she relaxed in her dressing room at Universal Studios.

"There's not a great deal of work I can do in Hollywood anymore," she says. "It was told by one high studio executive that I just don't look like any type.

"In my next life maybe I can come back looking like Doris Day or Julie Andrews, but right now I am what I am and if that's not what they want then I won't work here much.

"It's too bad because I like it here."

MISS McCAMBRIDGE was in Hollywood for the first time in a year, filming "A Capitol Affair" for "The Name of the Game."

In it she plays a character that has almost become her trademark, an abrasively tough, self-reliant woman.

But that character is the anthethesis of the off-stage Mercedes McCambridge, a sensitive and warmly outgoing person.

IF HOLLYWOOD is cool toward her now, it wasn't always the case. She won an Academy Award as the best supporting actress in "All the King's Men," her first film. And she was so convincing as a hardbitten tyrant in "Giant" that, she says, people still stop her on the street and tell her how much they hated her in the film.

Miss McCambridge's first love is the theater. So she has kept busy on the stage during her long absences from Hollywood. About two years ago she became actively involved with college drama productions around the country — acting with them, lecturing and helping to direct. She is paid for her services but only what the colleges' often slim budgets will allow.

"It would be wonderful to own a Rolls Royce instead of a three-year-old Mustang," she says, "but there's more to acting than making money."

Miss McCambridge finds Hollywood's fickleness difficult to understand, but she is nonetheless more at peace with herself now than ever before.

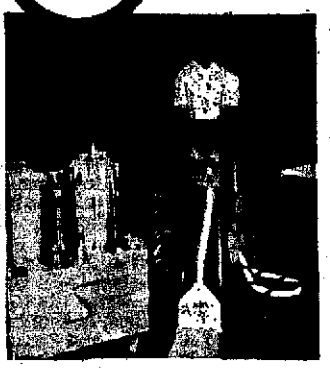

"It's taken me most of my life to realize it," she says, "but the most important lesson in life is that we must learn to be ourselves and learn to like ourselves. You can't be someone else. You've got to risk making a damn fool of yourself, being yourself."

MERCEDES MC CAMBRIDGE and Larry Hagman appear as a columnist and her assistant on "The Name of the Game," 8:30 p.m., Friday, Ch. 4.

SPECIAL

APOLLO 14 — Splashdown in the Pacific south of Samoa is due at 1:01 p.m. with coverage continuing until the three astronauts are safely aboard the helicopter carrier USS New Orleans.

IT COULDN'T Be Done (4), 8 p.m. — Lee Marvin is host-narrator for a repeat screening of the salute to American workers whose "know how" created such impossible projects as Mount Rushmore, the Golden Gate bridge, the Panama Canal, the Holland Tunnel. The 5th Dimension appear as special guests with folksinger Steve Mills performing off-camera.

THE ANONYMOUS Mr. Hughes (2), 10 p.m. — The fabled career of billionaire Howard Hughes is examined by Jerry Dunphy for KNXT with early films of the publicity-shy recluse, interviews with Robert A. Maheu, Ida Lupino and others who have been closely associated with him through the years.

STAND UP & Cheer (7), 10 p.m. — Johnny Mann brings to TV the Americana show that won the hearts of Las Vegas showgoers, with unabashedly patriotic music from George M. Cohan to today's hits. Guest Henry Fonda delivers a dramatic reading honoring Abraham Lincoln and Martin Luther King, while Pearl Bailey talks with seven small children about what they think of America.

NEW VOICES in the South (2), 10:30 p.m. — Roger Mudd looks at four newly-elected southern governors — all considered to be racially moderate — exploring what this means to the Nixon "southern strategy" and the Wallace bid. Interviewed are Govs. Dale Bumpers (Ark.), Jimmy Carter (Ga.), John West (S.C.) and Rubin Askew (Fla.).

DAVID FROST (11), 8:30 p.m. — Bing Crosby reminisces about his fifty years in showbusiness, and his friendship with Paul Whiteman, W. C. Fields and Barry Fitzgerald. Then Louis Armstrong joins in, teaming with Bing for "Blueberry Hill" and recalling incidents from their 40-year friendship.

JOHNNY CASH (7), 9 p.m. — Borrowing a bit from "Hee Haw" and from Mayberry, and adding a twist of corn, Cash salutes country style comedy with skits and one-liners, a medicine man show and the old traveling salesman jokes. Among the guests are Jim Nabors, Minnie Pearl, George Lindsay, Homer and Jethro and Junior Samples.

2 Men at Law, Gerald S. O'Loughlin, Robert Foxworth, Jack Cassidy, Sue Lyon, Nina Foch. Questionable techniques of a marriage counselor make him the target of a malpractice suit.
4 Men from Shiloh, James Drury, Van Johnson, Dina Merrill, Ruth Roman, Chill Wills, Stephen McNally. The killing of a widow's herd of cattle seems linked to the earlier murder of her late husband.
5 Virginia Graham Show, Lucie Arnaz, George Wallace Jr.. Hermione Gingold, mentalist Richard Ireland.
7 Courtship of Eddie's Father, Bill Bixby, Miyoshi Umeki, Brandon Cruz, Gordon Cooper (as himself). Eddie writes a letter to the Gemini astronaut and naively invites him to lunch. And Cooper accepts.

Sheriff of 'Dodge'

Joe Higgins Never Arrested Anyone

By MARTIN KRUMING
Associated Press

Joe Higgins doesn't ride a horse, has never arrested anyone and doesn't foresee shooting any chicken thieves.

But as the burly character actor who plays the role of a Southern-talking sheriff in a television commercial, Higgins is one of the most recognized law enforcement officers in the country. More than 50 police and sheriff's organizations have made him a member.

Two years ago a car manufacturer — Dodge was looking for a "Rod Steiger 'Heat of the Night' — type" for a commercial and had run through 26 applicants before Higgins appeared for an audition.

"Most Southerners are sensitive to a fake Southern accent," says Bill Brinkley, 32, creator and writer of the commerical.

WEARING A 10-gallon hat, a badge and a pair of 25-year-old yellow-tinted skeet glasses, Higgins arrived at the set.

"Y'all looking for a sheriff?" he asked.

"That's him," one man shouted. Brinkley calls Higgins "a fantastic dialectician."

The commercials are still being made. Higgins has done seven for network use and several regional ones, earning around $50,000 a year.

Higgins is cast as a folksy, hard-nosed sheriff named J. W. Standing 5 feet 10 and weighing 238 pounds, he talks with a drawl saying "Boy, y'll in a heap o' trouble, Y'all drive careful now heah" and "How in the blue Susie are you?" The setting is Bristol, a bustling Tennessee-Virginia border town in the foothills of the Smokey Mountains, where Brinkley grew up.

MOST LAW enforcement agencies enjoy Higgins' humor. As one Alabama official said "In today's uptight world, if we don't have the ability to laugh at ourselves, our future is bleak."

But two departments — the Wisconsin Sheriff's Association and the Ohio Highway Patrol — threatened to stop buying the sponsor's cars if Higgins wasn't taken off the air.

They felt he was "demeaning law enforcement at a time when law enforcement has enough problems."

Things were smoothed out. Higgins now is a lifetime member of the Wisconsin Sheriff's Association and both department are still buying the cars.

Higgins has been a night club entertainer, singer and actor for 30 years, the last 17 in Hollywood where he appeared in more than 650 television shows and movies. He was the blacksmith in the "Rifleman" series and guested on "The Detective," "Mod Squd," "Bonanza" and "My Three Sons."

Besides commercials, Higgins speaks at automobile shows and schools for the company on driver safety, drugs and police-community relations.

Mary Tyler Moore's TV Return Looks Good

pictures worked out," she recalls. "Always the studio had a story property, a commitment with me and another star, and a director under contract. Put it all together and out came nothing."

She expressed her yen to re-enter TV, and CBS was buying. Next step: the format.

"I DIDN'T want to do another husband-and-wife show because it would be compared with the Van Dyke series. We figured what television didn't need was another widow with three kids. And I didn't want to be divorced, because the audience would figure I was divorced from Dick.

"So I became a girl who helped put her boyfriend through medical school and the fink wouldn't marry her. The idea was that she is not — well, I hate to say it because you'll print it. Oh, well, I'll say it, she is not a virgin."

A veteran television producer, Harry Ackerman, was asked why the Moore Show has succeeded. He helped create "Bewitched," and he cited the similarities between Miss Moore and Elizabeth Montgomery.

"They both exude a wholesome sex, so that they appeal to all segments of the public. Women don't resent them, and men can have their daydreams."

SPECIAL

THEY'VE KILLED President Lincoln! (4), 7:30 p.m. — Richard Basehart is storyteller for a special using contemporary actors to re-create — as TV and newsreel cameras might have covered — the final days of Abraham Lincoln, the subsequent capture and presumably inadvertent shooting of assassin John Wilkes Booth, and the fruitless inquiry into the scope of the conspiracy. The you - are - there approach is used as Joseph Leisch Jr. (an Interior Department employe) portrays Lincoln, with Robert Leonard as Booth, and utilizing historical Washington locales.

CRITICS' CORNER

THE POINT, aired Feb. 2, Ch. 7.

. . . The feature-length cartoon, was a gently satirical, wise and very hip tale for children and adults about a boy born with a round head in a land where everyone else — and everything else — are pointed. Dustin Hoffman was the narrator, and (Harry) Nilsson, who thought up the story, wrote and sang the charming, witty songs, with their pointed yet humorous attitude about conformity and tolerance as seen from the young side of the Generation Gap.

Although there were several moments when the tale seemed a trifle stretched out, the script by Norman Lenzer hardly could be improved . . . The writing was the work of an intelligent man, and so was the directing and animating by Fred Wolf (of Murakami-Wolf Productions), who also contributed additional story development.

The overriding presence, however, was that of Nilsson, regarded by many as one of the truly pivotal figures in pop music, a composer with a genuine vision into the American experience. . .

At any rate, his singing of seven of his songs in "The Point" was, alone, worth tuning in for . . .

—Rick DuBrow, UPI

AND ANOTHER VIEW

. . . The story of little Oblio made clear the message at the outset: He was a sweet, well-intentioned boy with the misfortune to be born with a round head in a land where points — on buildings and atop human heads — were the norm. As a consequence, Oblio suffered all sorts of indignities and perils including being banished to the Pointless Forest. However, he was so eager to do right that he came through unscathed and returned home in triumph.

This was done in rather primitive drawings while the story line was punched up by some forgettable music and a narration by Dustin Hoffman.

It was a decided departure for the anthology series. While the moral was trite and obvious, the program was not without interest although it rambled along about an hour more than was needed

—Cynthia Lowry, AP

. . . WHO KILLED THE MYSTERIOUS MR. FOSTER?, aired Feb. 1, Ch. 4; Carol Burnett, Feb. 1, Ch. 2.

. . . It seemed to waver between standard Western action and one of those rowdy, roistering shows with emphasis on comedy, As a result it fell with a dull thud between the two.

Ernest Borgnine played the title role, a slow-moving but canny deputy sheriff. He was running for election as sheriff — with a confidence man who had a hidden hoard of $10,000.

While Borgnine and company were meandering through the plot, Carol Burnett on CBS was having trouble finding something to do with Rita Hayworth in the actress' first variety show appearanc

It was, all around, an off-night for the variety hour which usually has pretty high standards.

—LOWRY

GEORGE PLIMPTON, MAN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE, aired Feb. 2, Ch. 7.

. . . This one about that daredevil amateur, George Plimpton, who has produced some incisive writing about his brief personal plunges into such sports as football, baseball and golf . . . found him preparing for a trapeze performance with a circus.

That is no mean trick for a fellow who is six-feet-four and 190 pounds, as well as an amateur on the trapeze. And that is what made the hour absolutely fascinating — that and the ability of Plimpton to transmit his feelings toward the magical atmosphere of circus life.

Plimpton also entered the lions cage and was the target for a knifethrower, But the trapeze act was the main thing, and his painful yet exhilarating preparation for his try was captured remarkably well. Although the attempt before an audience did not quite work out to perfection, one could only admire Plimpton's guts and perfection. When the attempt did succeed in privacy after the audience left, one felt like shouting hooray.

—DuBrow, UPI

SPECIAL

HE'S YOUR DOG, Charlie Brown (2), 7:30 p.m. — It's a repeat animated cartoon in which Snoopy's manners get out of hand, and the Peanuts get Charlie to agree to send the beagle back to the Daisy Hill puppy farm for a refresher course in obedience.

THE GREAT Mojave Desert (2), 8 p.m. — Joseph Campanella is narrator for the third of this season's "National Geographic Society Specials," exploring the disconcerting beauties and hazards of the arid, rocky and often ghostly piece of America. Highlights are ghost towns, the oldest living tree on earth, petroglyphs on canyon walls, and Death Valley's fiery floor and railroad junk yards — plus the deceptions of the land where "you simply don't make any mistakes."

WELLS REPORT

'Get in There and Give It All You've Got'

As a safe booster subject for editorialists, politicians, and Chamber of Commerce resolutions, good teaching has replaced motherhood. What with the population explosion, the ecology thing, Zero Population Growth and all, there is for the first time a sizeable anti crowd on the motherhood issue. But everyone is in favor of good teachers.

As with the weather, everybody talks about finding new and innovative ways to improve teaching, but nobody does much about it. The president of the University of California says we have to put more emphasis on teaching and less on research — but he continues to pay researchers more than teachers. The State Colleges boast that they emphasize teaching over research — but they pay their faculty less and work them longer than the University does its researchers.

The public schools are likewise in favor of rewarding and encouraging good teaching — only not this year because the budget just won't take it.

One of the problems is that no one knows what makes a good teacher or good teaching. That is not surprising when you consider that the neurophysiology of the learning process is almost unknown. There are various theories of learning, but they are all — in the words of B. F. Skinner of Harvard — "explanatory fictions."

One thing all teachers and psychologists agree on is that motivation is extremely important in learning, whether it be induced by hope of reward in the form of good marks or jobs, or by fear of punishment, or merely by the satisfaction of accomplishment.

That is why I cannot understand why our educational psychologists in addition to fooling around with their pigeons and rats have not spent much time in some of the most interesting learning-and-teaching laboratories available.

Every high school and practically every college has an athletic field and gymnasium. Some of the most extraordinary teaching achievements of our times are being accomplished in interscholastic athletics. Yet the rest of the educational establishment shuns athletics as unscholarly.

What other area of instruction has motivated so many to try so hard to master new skills despite long hours, exacting performance standards, actual physical pain and risk of injury?

What other area of instruction has succeeded in motivating such large numbers of youths from the ghetto and barrio and persuaded them to believe in their abilities to compete on equal terms with members of the dominant culture and race?

"I regard myself as a teacher," says Jim Stangeland, football coach of the Cal-State Long Beach Fortyniners. "If I have one skill that fits me for this job, I believe it is the ability to teach."

Most classrooms still reflect the early work on learning theory which attempted to train one animal at a time. That is, members of a class still learn as individuals and compete against each other for rewards in the form of grades. Under this system, both the brilliant and the slow student quickly lose all motivation. The brilliant student can loaf and still get an A or a B. No matter how hard the D student works he is still not going to get more than a C, so why bother?

You can train pigeons or rats efficiently this way, and even dogs and horses. But you cannot educate humans to perform as highly organized social animals if the only alternative to failure offered them is near-failure or mediocrity.

Yet the need for some form of grading is self-evident. Who wants a doctor that really was only a D student in anatomy but was allowed to take it on a nongraded basis?

Athletics solves this problem by providing the incentives of individual and group competition and cooperation. Athletics is sometimes denounced for promoting an unhealthy competitiveness. Yet it is one of the few areas of education that consistently urges the individual to put the welfare of the class (that is, the team) above his own.

"I tell my teams," Stangeland says, "that the most valuable man on the squad is the fellow who by hard work and playing over his head moves himself up from the third team to the second. He improves the whole squad."

The athlete of meager native ability who improves that ability by concentration and hard work doesn't just raise his grade one notch. He raises the caliber of the entire team. His effort while comparatively mediocre may mean the difference between victory and defeat. And if he succeeds in winning his letter it isn't a D letter or a C letter. It's the same varsity letter that the team's All-American wears on his sweater.

I do not know if the motivational techniques of athletics can be adapted to the classroom. But I would feel better about our resolve to improve teaching if I saw a few educational psychologists out on the practice field once in a while instead of tossing pellets to pigeons.

Kraft's new Creamy Russian Dressing is a grand new experience. It's incredibly thick and luxurious. But easy to pour. Pungent with spices. Onion. And pickle relish. But mellowed with smooth tomato flavor. This tart, creamy taste opens new worlds of flavor for vegetable salads, seafood, hard-cooked eggs, even sandwiches. Open some tonight.

The Truth About Black and White Marriages

By Phyllis Bradley

The distraught young mother hurried into the emergency room, accompanied by two small boys and a man. The dozen or more people seated there glanced up casually as the little group entered; then in an obvious double-take, they all looked from the mother to the children, then to the man, and back to the children.

After the first expression of shock, and in a couple of cases, outright contempt, they glanced at each other, raised their eye-brows and carefully avoided looking in the direction of the new-comers again.

It is doubtful if any of them even noticed the badly swollen and discolored hand of the tearful older child.

Only one thing made this group unusual. The woman and children were white and the man was black.

A black couple seated there seemed just as disturbed and embarrassed by their appearance on the scene, as were the others.

As soon as the preliminary information had been given at the desk, and the woman and children were seated to wait for the doctor, the man told her in unnaturally loud tones, "I'd better find a phone and call my wife to let her know where I am."

The woman looked relieved and, just to be sure everyone understood, she replied, "Yes, and ask her if she'll watch for my husband and, as soon as he gets home, tell him where we are."

As the man walked toward the phone booth, the woman explained to no one in particular, "He lives next door and was just passing when Roger slammed a door on his hand, so he was kind enough to bring us to the hospital."

The others looked a little sheepish and went back to their magazines. I looked around at them and wondered if they realized just how thick the air was with disapproval, until the couple pointed out they were not man and wife.

And I wondered about the couples who are man and wife; one black and one white. Do they get the same stares, the disapproving silence, the almost disgust, that I had just witnessed . . . every time they go into a public place?

The only black and white marriages we ever hear about are those between celebrities — movie stars, television performers, vocalists and big-wheel politicians. What about the ordinary working and professional people who marry one of another race?

I determined to find out. I mentioned my intention to a few friends, one of whom is a prominent Negro physician. They all advised me to forget about it. The doctor said, "These people are not about to discuss their lives and problems with a stranger, most certainly not a white stranger!"

Others said, "You're out of your mind. It isn't even safe for you to venture into the neighborhoods where most of these people live" and, "You're just asking for trouble. You wouldn't dare go around prying into the private lives of these people. You know how 'colored' men are. There's no telling what might happen."

I told myself, "No, I don't know how colored men are; or what kind of women marry them, or why, but perhaps someone should make an effort to find out!"

So against all advice, I put cards up on supermarket bulletin boards and ran newspaper ads that said simply, "Wanted . . . inter-racial married couples to be interviewed by writer for magazine article. Call for details."

I was overwhelmed at the response. The first day I received only three calls but, from the second day on, the phone rang almost constantly. Some callers were just curious, but most were enthusiastic about the idea and anxious to make appointments for interviews. I had anticipated a few crank calls, but did not receive one.

At first, I offered a small fee for their time, but it was only accepted by three couples. The number of responses was so great, I had to quit offering payments, but I found that it didn't matter.

All the couples I talked to felt that an in-depth study of the situation is needed to enlighten the general public as to the reasons for such marriages, the problems created, the ways of coping with these problems and to dispel common myths implying a basically sexual reason behind all such marriages.

All expressed hope that in making others understand their motivations and results, that some people might learn to accept these families as friends and neighbors; and that they might help couples who may be considering such a marriage to decide whether they care enough about each other and little enough about what others think; whether they have the personal characteristics necessary to withstand the onslaught of outside pressures and the stamina required to stick it out and "roll with the punches."

Families interviewed were within the 20-to-45 age bracket. Some have children, some do not. Most who do also have children by a former mar-

The unmixable character of East and West is legend, yet the brash young West continues to swagger among the hallowed temples, traditions and taboos of the inscrutable Orient. What effect has the show of Western affluence had on the Eastern man and his "Good Earth."

THE SEARCH FOR THE GOOD LIFE, ASIAN STYLE

By Pearl S. Buck

The new year faces us again.

Western style, it is the year of Our Lord, 1971. Asian style, it is the Year of the Boar.

What will it hold for both sides of the world, this year of 1971, the Year of the Boar?

East and West, shall we be looking for the same things? Shall we be working for the same ends?

Yes, I believe we shall, provided that we express those ends in large enough terms, such as peace and the good life. Why do I use the plural? Peace is essential for the good life. Therefore, let me say that all the world's people are longing for the good life and so, longing, they search for the good life.

We see the search everywhere.

Here in the United States we see it expressed in many ways by many different groups of people, from hippies to women in rebellion against their traditional roles in life. But our newspapers and reporters keep us well informed of our own struggles.

What about Asia, where most of the world's peoples live? We are a minority, we peoples of the West, particularly we white people. Most of the world's peoples are Asian, and it is of them I think first in this Year of the Boar, not only because I know them so well, but because upon their decisions rest our solutions.

We are no longer independent of each other, East and West. We are face to face now, East and West, and never again can we live independently of each other. We are already one world, however unwilling we may be to acknowledge the fact.

It behooves us, therefore, to know what the good life is, for which we both so passionately search.

Peace, of course, as I have said, but peace is based upon concord of desire and purpose. Are we alike, East and West, in our definition of what constitutes the good life? Basically, yes; we want food enough to keep us not only merely alive but at the height of our abilities. We want not only shelter, but homes. We want the benefits of modern life and the comfort of our own traditions.

Ah, here let me pause!

GENERATION GAP BETWEEN CULTURES

I have reached the point of our greatest difference between Asia and the West. It is comprehended in the huge generation gap between East and West.

If we suffer from the generation gap here in our own country, it is slight indeed compared to the generation gap between Asia and the West. All Western peoples are adolescents in comparison to the age of Eastern peoples.

Our American couple of centuries make us an infant compared to the five thousand years of China, for example. Long, long ago, thousands of years ago, again for example, China rejected aggressive war as a means of settling differences between nations.

By Imperial command, gunpowder, a Chinese invention, was forbidden as a weapon and it was afterward used only as an amusement for people to enjoy in firecrackers and beautiful fireworks. Quarrelsome men — for the practical Chinese realized that there are always such war-loving men — were limited to the use of swords, bows and arrows, spears, and such hand instruments, and were commanded to limit their wars to themselves and not to involve other human beings.

Centuries ago, for another example, Chinese scientists understood the principle of rocketry, but forbade its development into weaponry. Even an early Japanese emperor forbade the use of explosive weapons to his war-loving Samurai, bidding them to be content with hand weapons and with killing each other and not innocent people.

The lack in Asia of what seemed to Westerners industrial and military development, so that absurdly we call these people "backward" and "underdeveloped," has been for centuries a purposeful search for what seemed to the Asians to be the good life — that is, a life where the individual was important, where he was secure in a family-supported environment, and where laws were based upon human characteristics.

One of the great differences between these ancient nations of Asia and of our own impulsive, idealistic nations of the West is in our differing legal systems: The Asians base their laws upon the character of human nature and we base ours upon punitive ideals. But this difference is only another evidence of the generation gap between old Asia and the young West.

ASIA CAUGHT OFF BALANCE

Our basic difference, yes — and the basis, too, of our struggle to understand each other now and somehow to find a common ground whereupon we can build the structure of a commonsensical, practical and lasting peace. In the meantime, Asia has made more compromises than we have, because Asians know and understand Westerners better than we know and understand them, and this is the result of centuries of colonization in Asia by Western peoples.

This colonization came about because the Asians were not prepared for the ruthless and mercenary invasion of greedy young Europeans, who were still in the age of war and explosive weaponry. And when, in the name of trade, Europeans and Englishmen attacked Asian countries in the 17th and 18th centuries, the Asians were not prepared and were compelled to capitulate, exactly as a peaceful householder and shopkeeper in the United States today capitulates to the invasion of a robber with a pistol in his hand.

Even a president, surrounded by guards, whatever his skills, his brilliance, his success, is at the mercy of any dangerous fool with a gun in his hand. Exactly in the same way and for the same reasons, Asia has had to give up her old happy established way of life, which had eliminated aggressive war, and now she is having to learn how to defend herself against aggressive weaponry by developing for her own defense the same weapons she once refused.

RESPECT FOR CRAFTSMANSHIP

It is not only in the area of war that Asia is having to search for the good life. She is face to face with the young West in modern industries. In her past, she had highly developed industries of her own. Fine craftsmanship, exquisite objects of art, superb paintings, a pride in perfection which extended to the simplest instrument of daily life had built in Asian countries these industries based upon high ideals of beauty combined with usefulness. I think of Japanese friends of mine, a family who for five generations have made lacquer ware for the Imperial family of Japan, and who will not even today lower themselves to make cheap, commercial lacquer ware.

Among the gifts they have given me is a medium-sized salad bowl of a soft orange hue. Its sale price in Japan is thirteen hundred American dollars. It took one man five years to make this bowl. The base is a thin wooden shell, exquisite in design, with layer after layer of lacquer rubbed into it, with long intervals between for the drying process.

GOOD LIFE, ASIAN STYLE

"Use it yourself every day," my friends begged me when they gave it to me.

I cannot, remembering the five long years of a man's life. It stands on a shelf in my treasure room.

In my last visit to their store in Tokyo, a young American picked up a gold lacquered cigarette box.

"How much?" he asked.

"Six thousand dollars," the clerk replied. "The lacquer is solid gold." The American put it down hastily.

The father of this famous family brought some of his lacquer ware to our country, at my suggestion. Alas, he could not sell it at the price he could get in Japan where its perfection was appreciated. Nor did he lower his prices, for he felt that to do so would be to lower himself and his art.

This, too, is an example of the generation gap between old Asia and the young West. There are many other examples. I see them every day, here in my own country, and when I go to Asia, as I do almost every year.

The younger generation of this very family illustrates my point. There are three sons in the family and they are carrying on the business after their father's death. Their father did not falter in his determination to maintain the standards of old Asia. But can the sons afford his integrity?

Their market today is the world. It is not enough to continue as lacquer-ware makers for the Imperial family. They will be compelled to make lacquer ware that the common man in the West, too, can enjoy and buy. Or will they?

MEMORIES OF INDONESIA

And what of the artist and worker in Indonesia? In ancient days the beautiful silks were handwoven, and even in the days of colonialism the old ways of Asian life were maintained to a large degree, although the Dutch rulers made profit, not only from silks but from fertile rice fields, coconuts, and other fruits and produce. But colonialism ended abruptly after the Second World War and the Indonesians are still floundering between past and present in their search for the good life.

How well I remember those beautiful fields of rice! So excellent was their climate that rice grew the year around. In one field the golden grain was ready for harvest while the field next to it might be flooded and bright green with rice seedlings planted in the water. Not even in the rice-growing sections of China, where I grew up, did I see such beautifully cut sheaves of rice carried at either end of a pole on a farmer's shoulders.

And the young Sokarno, in the days after the Second World War when I knew him, was searching for the way to a good life for his people, never to find it. My husband, prescient of Sokarno's future greatness, published his first book. That same Sokarno, so troubled and so confused by the ways of the West, lost himself during the years to follow and so never found the way of good life for his people.

Today they are still searching for that good life of independence and plenty but with no great soul to guide them, the past lost and the future not yet clear.

I sometimes wonder if it matters what a government is if there are no great and good people to administer it. The best government in the world is not good enough unless the people who administer it are good men and women.

And India — how often have I visited that manifold land, so different in every way from China and yet equal in magnificence, and even greater in variety! England left there a Civil Service trained in the language and ways of the West, a Western democratic form of government with Western ideals, and yet the people of villages live as they have lived for centuries untouched, seemingly, by the modern and the new.

THE INDIA THAT NEED NOT BE

Untouched? I am not so sure.

I have passed through hundreds of Indian villages and have lingered in many, and all seemed the same. Yet even so it has occurred to them now that they need not starve from one generation to the next; that their children can learn to read and write, they they need not die so young, nor labor so fruitlessly on the gray dusty soil of their land. And in their great cities, such as Bombay and Calcutta, in the midst of the huts of Jehu Beach and the homeless poor who are born, live and die on the streets, they have come to see that these things need not be.

The young sons and daughters of the rich know, too, that they need not be and their consciences are beginning to stir. Do they not owe something of the good life to their people?

They are searching for a better life for their poor, too. They are ashamed of the ancient belief that Karma cannot be changed. Of all the countries of Asia, it is India, I think, which will proceed most quickly in her search for the good life of the future.

Among the many whom I knew there, the procession of faces, the faces of villagers dressed in their ancient and traditional garb, faces of smart young men in the cities dressed in Western suits of the latest London fashions, how can I choose one out of that land of contrast, India?

I believe India has chosen the new ways of the West in industry, and to some extent in government, but in her spirit she is ancient. Her soul remained Indian, although in mind she is modern. Even that mind, however, is old, and wise, and she approaches the new with an ancient wisdom.

China — what shall I say of that loved land of mine? How can I tell how she is changed now and what that change means?

Will her people be changed? Yes. — the young are changed, but they are only one generation.

Twice before now China has had a form of communism devised by two men living in different ages, one Wang An-shih and one Wang Mang. Though each in his time had power, when both died, each in his time, the people returned to their ancient ways of government and behavior in their search for the good life. It may be that this will be so again.

We may see, perhaps in the Year of the Boar, the traditional struggle for power between the present military men governing each province now and each with his own section of the mainland army — his own army in effect.

REFUGEE CONFUSED AS U.S. HIPPIE

I can only judge China from the refugees who reached Taiwan. One, a young man born under communism and trained and educated in communism, was a captain, a leader in the Red Guards. He had never lived in a village but he had been told that the villagers were happy under the new system.

When he had graduated from college, he was sent to a village as an adviser and political teacher. There, to his dismay, he found that what he had been told was not true. The villagers were unhappy, confused, and often hungry.

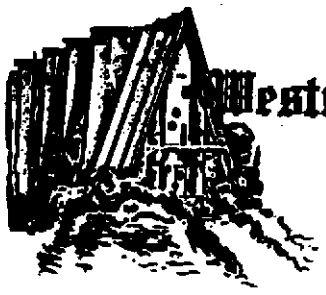

Theirs was not a good life.

He became disillusioned and he escaped to Taiwan. Yet there, too, he is dissatisfied and he is still searching for the good life.

Taiwan has prospered with American money. Many rich people live there and this disturbs him. The rulers, too, are very rich. To his Communist-trained mind, this wealth is evil.

Men and women, he thinks, ought not to wear garments of fine silks and satins and they should not wear silver and gold. In the good life, he says, it is not enough merely not to starve and these rich people should share what they have with the poor.

What then, he asks, is the good life and how is it to be found? He does not know. He cannot go back, he does not know how to go forward. He is as confused as any hippie living and lost in the forests of California or in the streets of New York or Philadelphia.

Yet looking forward in the new year, 1971, the Year of the Boar, I find myself thinking of the two countries who face most sharply the necessity to find the way to the good life, each for itself.

REMARKABLE WOMAN

I think of beautiful Thailand, always independent, never a colony, influenced much by India and somewhat by China, yet always herself, rich in the midst of Asian poverty, free in the midst of colonialism in Asia, maintaining her own exquisite culture, even now. I think of a woman there of independent wealth, a Thai woman of beauty and style though no longer young, a famous woman, a widow and yet much admired by men, both Asian and Western. One would say that she is more Thai than Western and the other would say she is more Western than Thai.

She wears Thai costumes or Western garb with equal grace. One would say she has chosen the best of both sides of the world. But she has two sons, neither of whom she trusts, because what she considers the good life they do not. They run her businesses and she believes they have chosen the West and this for profit alone.

They are no longer Thai, she fears. Therefore she is selling her successful businesses, she is selling everything. She is retiring from the life of wealth.

Perhaps, too, she is haunted by the poverty of Laos only a few miles to the south, a land of wretched villages and ignorant farmers. Ah, that poor farmer whose miserable hut in Laos I visited so many years ago!

THE SEARCH FOR THE GOOD LIFE, ASIAN STYLE

"Has he progressed in the least?" I asked my friend who had just returned from a military journey to Laos.

"Not at all," my friend replied. "He is only totally confused by what is happening. Why are Americans running over his scrap of land? What do they want? What does anyone want? He only wants to be left in peace to grow his little harvest of rice and a few vegetables, enough for himself and his family, and when he dies to be buried decently in his land by his children.

"What is the war for? Why are people fighting back and forth? He longs for the good life of the past. He has no dreams for the future."

But the most troubled souls of all are perhaps to be found in the prosperous Islands of Taiwan. What will happen to them when The Old Man Chiang Kai-shek, dies? Taiwan has seen many rulers, Chinese and Portuguese, Chinese and Japanese, and now Chinese and American. Some day the Americans will go away — or will they? And when they go — if they go — will Japan come back? And if not, will China take them back entirely? And what is China now — old or new? Where oh where, is the good life for the people of Taiwan? They do not know, they cannot tell.

Perhaps this is true of all of us. We search, we all search, for the good life. The past is gone, the old ideals no longer hold. We search for the new that will guide and save us. East and West, we search.

The Year of the Boar, 1971, may provide the answer to the world's question. Perhaps — perhaps! If we have peace — if we have peace!

THE AUTHOR

(Copyright 1971 by Field Enterprises, Inc.)

Through her uncharted exploration of East-West themes, Nobel and Pulitzer Prize-winning author Pearl S. Buck "long ago taught us to love the Chinese," says The New York Times.

What inspired her to build a bridge of understanding to Asia and back through her celebrated novels was the reminiscing of her homesick young mother far from her native America and the tales spun by her old Chinese nurse.

Millions have read the novelist's Pulitzer Prize-winning classic, "The Good Earth"; millions more have flocked to see the movie adaptation starring Paul Muni and Louise Rainer, considered a classic itself of cinematic art.

Symbolic of her lifetime tie between East and West was Miss Buck's birth in America to missionary parents — followed by the family's almost immediate return to China, where she grew up in the historic city of Chinkiang.

Returning to the States in her teens, she graduated from Randolph-Macon College. Then it was back to China to marry John Lossing Buck, a teacher of agriculture in North China.

She knew always that one day she would write, but for some years busied herself with the care of her home, her children and her parents, and taught English literature at the universities of Nanking and Chung Yang.

An article on the Chinese young generation, accepted by the Atlantic Monthly, opened the door to her first novel, "East Wind, West Wind," followed by a steady stream of award-winning works including "Dragon Seed"; "Satan Never Sleeps"; "Pavilion of Women"; "The Living Reed," and "The Big Wave," which the author later adapted for television. She was the first woman to receive the Nobel Prize for Literature, for the body of her works.

Meantime she had written a number of non-fiction works, notably "My Several Worlds," which she calls "a personal record," and many stories for children.

She participates actively in work for retarded youngsters. Her small book, "The Child Who Never Grew," tells the story of her own experience with her eldest daughter, whose mental growth was retarded. This appeared first as an article in the Ladies' Home Journal and was reprinted widely, helping to bring about greater understanding of mental retardation.

Today Miss Buck is prolific as ever. In 1970 she added to her list of about 75 books "China As I See It," "The Kennedy Women" and "Mandala," one of her rare novels about India.

In her latest article, "The Search for the Good Life, Asian Style," the time is now; the conflict between ancient, enigmatic East and lusty, adolescent West clearly defined. In personal vignettes Miss Buck poignantly captures the dilemma of Asian man in his effort to find the meaning of self.

THE NIGHT I SHOOK SAN DIEGO

By W. P. Crowe

A year after our declaration of war against Germany in 1917, I had edged my way from a 21-year-old buck private to commander of Company "B," 25th Artillery, C.A.C. Our regiment was encamped high on the hills above Ft. Rosecrans on Point Loma in San Diego. We were supposed to be training in the use of British 15-inch howitzers, but none had arrived. In the meantime, to keep us busy, my company was given a temporary assignment to a battery of 3-inch anti-submarine guns located on the beach of North Island across the channel from the fort.

All I knew about the guns was contained in the manuals that came with the assignment. We cleaned, polished and practiced loading and unloading the little monsters. But it was a happy evening when I discovered in one of the manuals that the company commander could, at any time, hold night target practice. The following week was a busy one as my men readied live ammunition, tracers, searchlights, a target raft and tugboat. We went through a daylight simulated drill to test communications and plotting arrangements. Finally all was ready and I gave orders to man the guns at 9 o'clock that evening.

The guns were manned, a spotter sighted the target and phoned in its coordinates and soon the searchlights on the bluffs had zeroed in on a point over the horizon from our low position.

Plotting room fed range and direction data to the gunners and I gave the order to commence firing. That first salvo really jarred us! God, what wicked little devils. Soon the spotters were reporting splashes straddling the target, but we kept on firing.

I was standing on the parapet watching out to sea when suddenly I was startled by a burst of star shells overhead, and I called to cease fire. My first sergeant yelled, "Hey look! The whole damn Navy's coming out!" Sure enough, the silhouettes of a line of destroyers could be seen sedately steaming out of the channel.

I felt someone tugging at my leg and looked down into the upturned face of our colonel.

"What is it?" was his urgent question.

"Sir, we are having target practice."

"Target practice! And just who gave you permission to hold target practice?"

"It is in my manual."

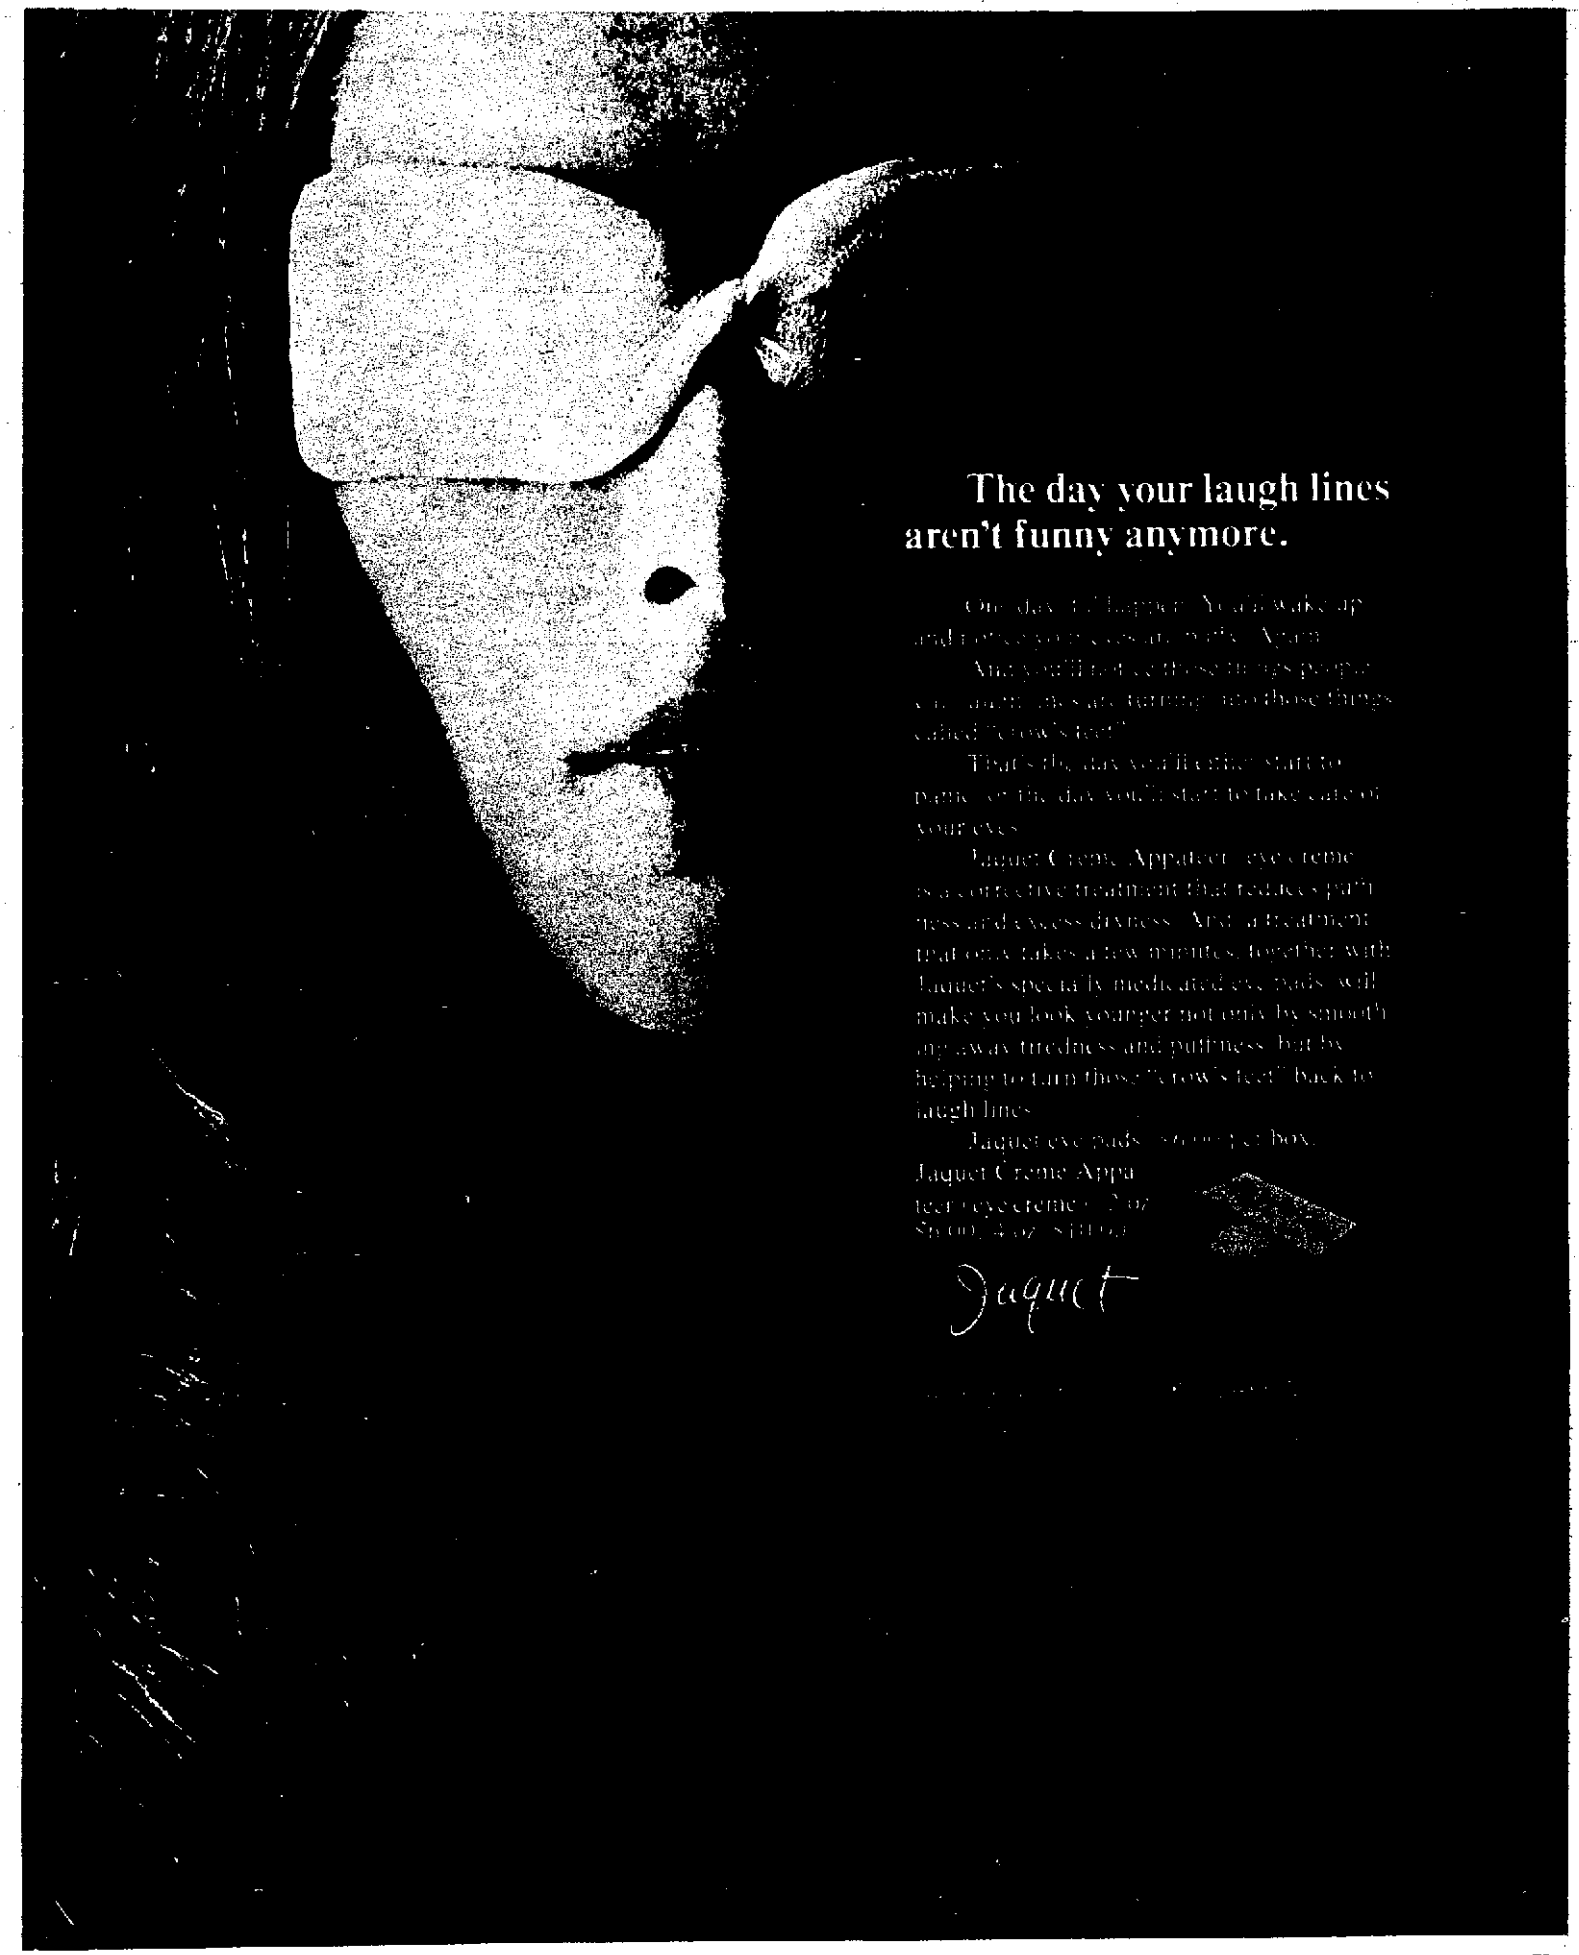

"Not in your wartime manual! Young man, do you realize you've got the blessed Navy out on a wild goose chase and that half the people of San Diego are headed for the hills? Secure the battery and report to my office the first thing tomorrow morning."

"Yes, sir!" □

AN ISLAND OF EFFICIENCY

By Steve Ellingson

Want to stretch the space allotted to your kitchen without moving the walls? Then consider the kitchen island pictured here with actress Sandy Grant. It's an efficient space-booster for small kitchens and a step-saver for big kitchens.

The mobile unit is mounted on casters and may easily be moved from one room to another. You will notice that it has loads of storage space for mixers and other kitchen appliances and utensils. The top measures 24" by 44" which gives you lots of table top space for a carving and mixing center. On the back of the island is a hinged leaf which may be lifted to increase the table top area to 36" by 44" for an eating counter. Included is a handy handle for hanging towels.

When getting ready for dinner you can save steps by simply gliding the cart to your dining area loaded with dinnerware and silver. In summer use it outdoors for patio parties. It will hold all of your outdoor eating utensils and make serving a pleasure. Some folks use it as a mobile home bar. The shelves and drawers give you ample space for all supplies.

Anyone can build this kitchen island with the easy-to-follow pattern. It lists the required materials and gives easy-to-understand directions and illustrations. The cost, when you do it yourself, is within everyone's budget.

To obtain the easy-to-follow kitchen island pattern number 326 send $1.00 (add 25c per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to:

Black and White Marriages

four or more years. Both husband and wife were interviewed except in a few cases where conflicting work schedules made this impossible.

In every home I met enthusiasm and a willingness to convey information that might help promote understanding.

Occupations ranged from janitor, truck driver and common laborer to automobile dealer, college professor and undercover agent. Levels of education covered as wide a range, from seventh grade to college degrees.

Home situations ranged from poorly furnished, ramshackle houses in Long Beach's central district to tastefully furnished, beautifully decorated homes in Beverly Hills and Pasadena.

In every home I met enthusiasm and a willingness to convey any information that might help promote better understanding by both races.

Sixty per cent of the couples had met where they worked, either as coworkers, or in customer/clerk relationship. Several met while taking special courses or night classes. One couple met after riding to and from work on the same bus for several months. One couple freely admitted they met as a "pick-up" at a bar.

With only three exceptions, all the couples had known each other casually for several months before dating was mentioned. Most described their first date as being accidental, more as a result of unexpected circumstances than by any real plan.

My friends need not have been concerned for my safety. I have never had my presence accepted more graciously. I might add, I have never seen better behaved children.

Some may have been little "monsters" when no outsider was present, (and noises I heard as I approached a couple of homes indicated this could very well be!), but from the moment the doorbell rang, all such noise ceased, children spoke when introduced, answered direct questions politely. There was no interruption of adult conversation. They left the room without asking "Why, Mama?," when told they were no longer needed.

They played quietly; no parent had to excuse himself to "quiet the children or to "see what they're up to," as has happened countless times in interviewing other groups.

I asked each family the same leading questions. A very few confined their answers to specific questions. Most were anxious to express their views and volunteered much more information than asked for.

One man reflected my reasoning behind the writing of this article, when he said, "We have always felt that if there was only some way we could make people see and realize that the Negro man and white woman they see together on the street or in the store are not necessarily immoral, that it's not a 'pick-up' or 'one-night-stand' affair. That kind make it a point not to be seen together. The pick-ups sneak out parking lot doors of the bars; the one-night stands beckon from shadowy doorways, creep in back doors and leave before daylight.

"The ones you see together are more likely to have been married several years, have three or four kids at home, are struggling to make a decent living and are trying to raise their kids to be decent citizens, just like you are.

"Together they've gone through births, illnesses, injuries, maybe even deaths in the family, just like you.

"They plan and hope for a better future for their kids, try to save enough money to assure them a decent education, worry about the bills, pay their taxes, support their schools and churches, just like you.

"When their children get old enough to date, they're going to worry about the girls when they're late getting home and be concerned about the group of kids the boys hang around with, just like you are.

"When their babies are sick and burning with fever and the doctor doesn't seem to be helping much, they pray to the same God you do. When their kids are hurt in accidents, they worry and cry. When a death occurs in the family, they mourn, just like you.

"When a child makes top grades in his class, or makes the varsity team, or wins a cooking contest, they're just as happy as any other proud parents.

"They try to live a normal, average family life, and it would be much, much easier for them if people didn't stare as if they were some kind of freaks every time they step outside the door."

These are the major problems, not necessarily in the order of their importance:

1. Finding adequate housing . . . only two families had never experienced housing problems. One of these had lived in an integrated housing development the entire five years they've been married. The other lives in an ultra-expensive apartment where the only discimination that exists is in the ability to pay the exorbitant rent.

All the others have had many problems; landlords in predominantly white areas refused to rent to them because of the Negro spouse, and those in predominantly Negro districts refused because of the white spouse. Of course, none said as much, in so many words. However, it is a natural assumption when a husband or wife locates a suitable house or apartment, makes initial inquires of the landlord and everything appears mutually agreeable — until he or she returns with the spouse, then are told the unit has been rented in the interim.

Some were satisfied with the housing they were eventually able to find but, even those who were not, preferred to remain where they are rather than repeat the demoralizing experience of searching for better housing, only to meet rebuffs at every door.

2. Family objections . . . very few couples claimed to have met absolutely no objection from either family. One white wife was permitted to visit her father and brother, but could not take her children or her husband. The father and brother apparently had no personal dislike of the Negro husband, since they visited in the couple's home. They seemed to be concerned only about the impression of their neighbors and friends, if it became known.

Another white wife met no objection from her mother, the mother being willing to accept "anyone I love, who will be good to me and make me happy." However, her father disowned her completely, even apoligizing to the mother for having had any part in her creation! A sister stated it was "just like having a death in the family," and had refused any further contact.

This wife had been reared in a supposedly non-prejudiced home and appeared more shocked by the sudden realization that her father and sister were prejudiced at all, than by the actual rejection of her and her husband.

As her husband explained, "Many people claim to be, and honestly think they are tolerant of other races, until they actually are confronted with such a situation in their own family. It's a case of, 'I don't care how many people marry into a different race, so long as it's no one in my family!'."

He had been just as shocked by his mother's refusal to accept his wife. He had always assumed she would accept anyone he chose to marry. While she hadn't actually closed her door to them, she had made it painfully evident she did not fully accept or trust the wife, nor would she ever do so.

His wife found it easier to understand and accept his mother's rejection, considering his mother was an elderly woman who had lived her entire life in the Deep South, where distrust of whites is understandably inherent in the nature of the native Negro.

Some couples who have been married five and six years still have not told their families their husbands or wives are of a different race. These people are fortunate in that their families live in distant states, but as one man said, "We live in hope they'll never decide to pay us a surprise visit. We keep making excuses why we can't get away to see them, but some day we're going to run out of excuses."

Another said, "My mother's pret ty old, so I know she'll never make it here to see us. I just hope we can keep stalling her off about going to see her for as long as she lives. Of course, if she'd get bad sick, I'd go to her, but I wouldn't dare take my wife. It would kill my mother to know."

Somewhat to be expected, brothers and sisters of the couples were more inclined to accept the marriages than were the older generations. In fact, one Negro man has three brothers who are also married to white women. One wife has two sisters who are also married to Negro men. One German-born white wife has an only sister living in Germany who is married to a black man.

3. Children produced by mixed marriages . . . a few couples saw no problems for their children. Since they live in areas where there are many races, and mixed races, the children had had no neighborhood or school problems at this time.

One mother of three children states that the 10-year-old, who was light in color and did not have pronounced Negroid features, always disclaims any Negro blood. He claims to be Mexican, since many of his neighbors and schoolmates are Mexican.

His 6-year-old sister claims which ever race seems advantageous at the moment. In a Negro group, she's Negro; in a group of white children, she is white. This mother saw no future problems in this situation.

In direct contrast, the problem of definite identity for their children is uppermost in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Clemon Parson, of Long Beach.

Mr. Parson says, "We've taught our children that they are what they are — mulatto. Not that we're trying to make them anti-white or anti-Negro. We feel that it is absolutely necessary for children like them to have an identity of their own.

"If we don't establish their identity from tthe beginning, they're going to have problems later on, because they've seen a certain amount of prejudice from both races, so they can't feel completely accepted by either.

"It will be easier for them to cope with prejudice if they know who they are, that they have a race of their own.

"We decided when we were married that if we had children, since in fact they would be a mixture of the two races, they should always know that they are a mixture of the two. And the only way they can be sure of their own identity is by calling them what they are. The dictionary defines it as 'Mulatto.'

"If anyone else wants to play up the racial differences, that's up to them," he went on, "but we have only one purpose in mind; to establish an identity for our children."

That the Parsons' theory appears to be effective was pointed up recently when an older neighbor child asked one of the Parson girls which she was going to be when she grows up, black or white.

She replied, "Why, neither one. I'm going to be the same thing I am now — Mulatto!"

Here are three children who won't be in the awkward position of having to "decide" whether they want to "go white or black," thus feeling they are in effect rejecting one or the other parent.

Another family has a 4-year-old who, paraphrasing a popular bumper sticker, says "I'm black and I'm proud; am' I'm white and I'm proud, so that makes me proud-proud!"

4 Employment . . . here one might think the lower levels would be more tolerant, but exactly the reverse seems to be true. The amount of prejudice against mixed marriages appears to decrease in proportion to the elevation in educational and professional levels of the couple's associates and contacts.

We use the word prejudice here, not referring to either race, but to the Negro who has married a white mate, and vice versa!

One Negro machinist had been considered a top man in the shop where he worked, though the only black man there. He had maintained friendly relations with all of his coworkers for over a year and a half. They had demonstrated their respect and friendship in many ways . . . until the day he forgot his lunch and his wife took it to him.

They had demonstrated their respect and friendship in many ways . . . until the day he forgot his lunch and his wife took it to him.

From that day on, he underwent persecution and harassment until he just couldn't take it any longer.

After leaving that job he was unable to obtain comparable employment with a comparable salary, so they lost the home they were buying and now live in a rented house in an integrated area. He now works as a truck driver.

Though the entire area is populated by many races, the next door neighbor is the only one on the block who will speak to them when they are working in the yard — not because the family is Negro or white, but because it is black and white.

Another man lost three jobs in a period of four months, each one immediately after his wife appeared on the scene. He was given the excuse that "work is slowing," "we're having to cut back on the crew," "business is bad," etc., although there had been plenty of work and, in some cases, the employer had been taking applications, expecting to hire additional people, up until the day of dismissal.

On one job this man had been walking to work, a distance of approximately three miles. One day, he and his wife had overnight visitors who happened to own a Cadillac.

The guests told his wife to use their car and drive him to work the next morning. She did, and he got out of the car in front of the office. When quitting time arrived, the boss paid him up and told him they didn't need him any longer; adding "and she drives a Cadillac, too!"

Black and White Marriages

To help out financially, this man's wife took a job as a waitress and was getting along fine, until the first night he arrived a bit early to walk her home, and had a cup of coffee while he waited. She wasn't really fired, but her employer asked her to ask her husband to wait outside next time, or at least not to leave with her, because it "doesn't look good to the customers."

I witnessed a typical example of this sort of thing at a hospital where I was employed. A nurse's aide, whose work had always been satisfactory, who got along with other workers and with the patients, suddenly became a virtual outcast.

She worked the evening shift and her husband, who worked days, cared for the children while she worked. One evening he came into the hospital and asked to speak to her because of some emergency that had arisen regarding one of the children.

During the next week, I must have heard at least 30 times, in horrified whispers, "Mrs. B., did you know that so-and-so is married to a colored man?"

From that day on, every trival thing that had been left undone, everything that had been done incorrectly, everything that had been misplaced or thought stolen . . . someone was sure to say, "Oh, so-and-so was supposed to do that"; "She was the last person in that room so she probably took it!"

Her co-workers made life so intolerable for her, she was forced to quit.

The other girls, as many of whom were Negro as were white, who had previously appeared to be her friends, suddenly became too busy to eat lunch at the same time she did. They all managed to finish their work in time to eat, just as she was returning to the floor.

While she was not discharged — the administrator maintaining that as long as she did what she was being paid to do, it was really no concern of the hospital who her husband was — her co-workers made life so intolerable for her, she was forced to leave.

A husband and wife who worked at a car-wash, had not told anyone there they were married. They carried their lunches and ate together, until their boss told her she would have to "quit being so chummy with the 'colored' help, because the customers are commenting about it."

One interview was interrupted by a phone call from one of the husband's fellow employes, inviting him and his wife to a surprise party for the boss. He told his friend he'd call him back to let him know if they could come.

He turned from the phone, laughing, "Well, here we go again! Do I attend the party alone and say my wife is sick, do I plead a prior engagement and be the only member of a small crew that doesn't go, or do I take my wife and risk her being snubbed and hurt, and maybe lose another job?"

Professional people — doctors, teachers, an attorney, an undercover agent, etc. — claimed very few problems among their associates. All have rather wide circles of friends, both black and white, whom they see socially, regularly.

5. Acceptance by the general public . . . all say they are often stared at, sometimes treated contemptuously by clerks in stores, by waitresses, etc.

It was pointed out by several black husbands that they had expected and could understand animosity on the part of white males, who might exhibit a sort of "Who do you think your are . . . and what right have you to cross the color line, etc." attitude. But they were astonished to find more animosity and downright hatred displayed by black females.

Couples who were married 10 years or longer have weathered so many racial problems, they say it doesn't really bother them much, now. One wife said, "We just hold hands a little tighter and go on about our business."

Another said, "I've even found myself staring at black and white couples I see when I'm alone. I wonder if they're just like us, and I try to see if there's anything about them that sets them (and us) apart from everyone else.

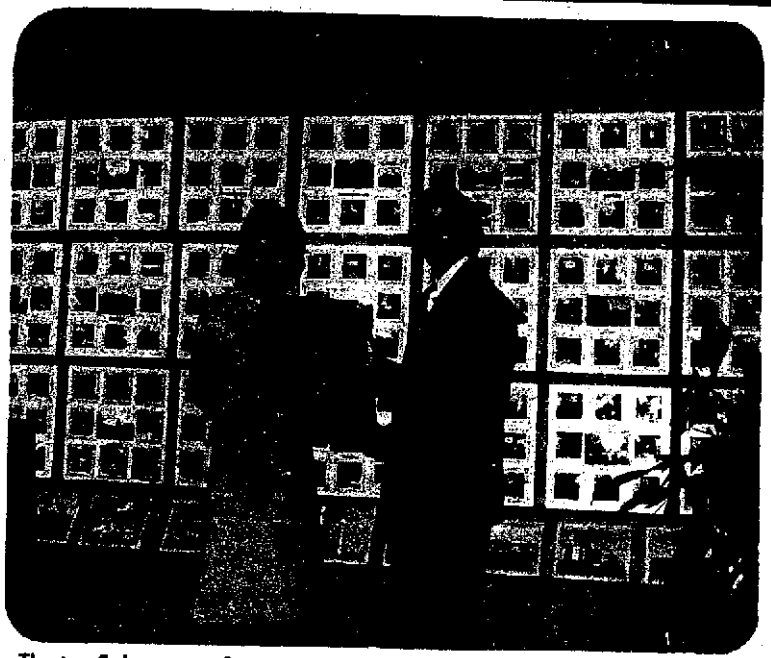

"Now, when I see someone staring at us, I tell myself maybe that person has a black wife or husband at home and is wondering the same thing about us. It helps a little," she said.

One young wife had noticed while attending a small Midwest college, that many black foreign-exchange students were welcomed with open arms. Now, when anyone openly questions her husband's race she simply tells them he is not Negro, he is Jamaican.

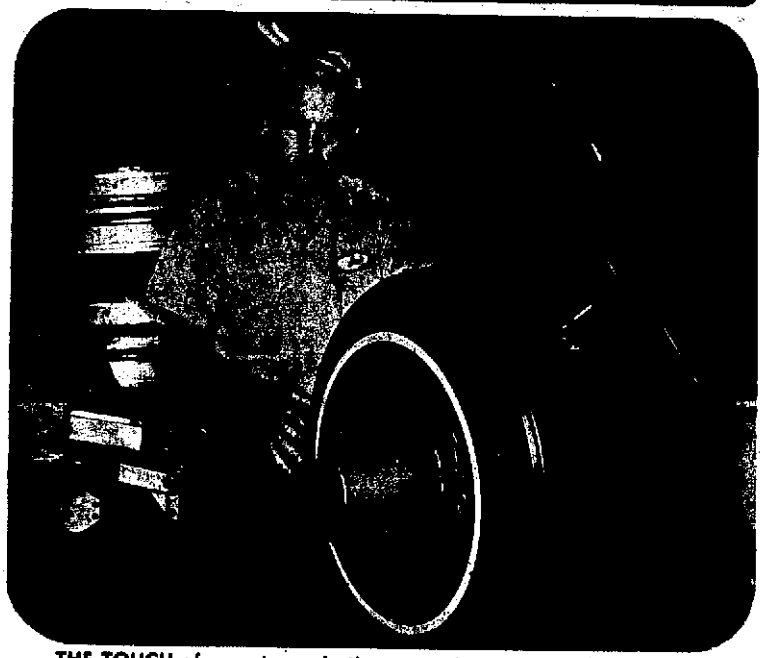

She says this lie has smoothed out several threatening problems. Her husband is aware of this, and rather than feeling she is "putting him down," he says, "What I don't like is for her to have to lie. I'm certainly not ashamed of my race, and I don't believe she is, but anything that makes the situation easier for her . . . then I'm all for it!"

He hesitated, as though wondering if he should say what he was thinking, then grinned, "Besides, if it makes some people feel less contaminated to think they're associating with a Jamaican (or a girl who's married to one), than if they thought I was a plain old Negro, who am I to argue?"

Black and White Marriages

One couple says when they're driving down the street, and notice people in another car staring at them, the husband sometimes waits until the other car is abreast of them, then rolls down his window, sticks out his head and says "Boo!" — much to the chagrin of the occupants.

6. Religion . . . it is a sad commentary on our churches that 75 per cent of the couples interviewed are not attending the same churches as before their marriages. Some were told quite bluntly they were no longer welcome; others were made to feel so uncomfortable they either joined other churches (after first making certain they would be welcome), or simply quit going to church at all.

. . . 75 per cent of the couples interviewed are not attending the same churches as before their marriages.

As one wife put it, "It does seem a little hypocritical to sit and listen to sermons about brotherly love, and how we're all God's children, when the people around you would cut off their right arm before they'd invite you into their home."

Early in this project, one outstanding fact became apparent. The ratio of white women married to black men as compared to white men married to black women is roughly 20 to one, or more.

Asked for their theories as to the reason for this, it seemed to be a consensus that there are more such marriages than is apparent, for the simple reason that these couples do not go out together.

Some believed the white female is more willing to make the sacrifices necessitated by marriage to a black mate than the white male is. A woman who feels she truly loves a man doesn't care what anyone else thinks about it, while a white male tends to be more concerned not only about how it would affect his relationships with his family and friends, but also about his standing in his profession or occupation.

It is felt, too, that the black male has been more or less conditioned by the past to expecting some doors to be closed to him, so if he loves a white woman, he is not quite so concerned about the possibility of his marriage closing another door or two.

On the other hand, a white man may love a black girl just as deeply, but he can't quite bring himself to marriage, because he is just not psychologically prepared to face closed doors that have always been open to him.

He is more inclined to establish what is politely called "a meaningful relationship," in which, for all practical purposes, they might as well be married. In this case, though, he is not expected to introduce her around, so his "social" standing suffers no ill effects.

This type of situation can hardly be pleasant for the girl, especially if she is really in love with him, but she is hardly in a position to force him to marry her, even if she wanted to!

One black man feels a contributing factor may be the domineering attitude of the average Negro female. He believes that since, in the Negro family, the mother tends to control the entire family, including the father, that few white men are willing to accept the secondary role of "assistant" head of the household.

He feels, too, that his is a prime reason why certain black males are attracted to certain types of white females. They want a wife who will be content to let them assume what they feel is their proper role as head of the family.

Our own observations give weight to this theory. In most of the families contacted, it is obvious the husband is the authority figure, even in those homes where the husband was not present at the time.

Several couple were concerned about a common myth, which they feel influences many persons to "look down on" mixed marriages. That is the often-heard or implied supposition that sex is the real foundation of all black and white marriages, that all black men are "oversexed", more virile than the average white male and that the women who marry them do so solely for this reason.

All the wives who broached this subject had previously been married to white men. They pointed out that black men are no more or less virile, and no more or less favorably endowed physically than any other male. There is as much variation in sexual prowess among black men as among white.

The husbands agreed that they make no claim to being any "super-Don Juans." One grinned, "This is one instance where the white man has attributed more to our credit than we deserve, I'm afraid!"

Most couples felt that few of their disagreements or arguments are due to racial conflict. Most had agreed before marrying that they would have to make special effort to prevent any racial overtones from entering into arguments, and they have pretty well adhered to this agreement.

One wife felt some arguments were due to racial differences, but indirectly from outside pressures, rather than from any internal racial conflict.

Most couples believed they got along as well or better than the average married couple. Their attitudes and comments to and about each other would indicate that they do, indeed, have a deeper understanding, and more consideration for each other than many married couples of my acquaintance. There was none of the so-called "good-natured" needling, and no ego-shattering gibes of the type seen so frequently between husbands and wives.

Most couples believed they got along as well or better than the average married couple.

To all appearances at least, these families seem more closely knit than 90 per cent of the general population. It is almost as though they think, "If he (or she) cares enough about me to go through all this and still stand beside me, the least I can do is show him (or her) I appreciate it by giving him (or her) the same respect and consideration."

This attitude is just as evident on the lower income and educational levels as on the higher levels. It is as though the outside pressures tend to weld these families together. Being in an us-against-the-world position, they seem to feel their only real security lies in presenting a united front.

When asked what advice they would give a black and white couple considering marriage, our subjects were generally agreed that if the couple had known each other for a long time and were sure they really loved each other, they should go ahead and marry.

All stressed that such a couple should first acquaint themselves with what they would have to expect, by discussing it with similar couples who had been married for some time.

Characteristics considered most necessary were maturity, emotional stability, a well-developed sense of humor and, probably most important, the ability to "be tolerant of others' intolerance."

One man stated frankly, "I'd tell them 'forget it'! If I hadn't been fortunate enough to have the wife I have, I'd never have made it. Marriage is a certain amount of hassle at best, but I wouldn't advise anyone to stick their neck out that far!"

One wife pretty well summed it up when a relative asked her, "How could you? Why on earth did you marry him?"

She answered, "Because he's kind, honest, gentle and understanding and he loves me . . . and I love him. Isn't that about the same reason you married your husband?" □ even for thousands who perspire heavily

A different formula has been found to keep underarms absolutely dry —even for thousands who perspire heavily. A formula so different it has far more anti-wetness agent than it is possible to put in any aerosol can. By anybody. After decades of common "deodorants," it took a chemical invention to make this truly effective protection possible — with the same safety to clothing—the same skin mildness as popular "deodorants." Called Mitchum Anti-Perspirant, it is the product of a trustworthy 57-year-old laboratory and guaranteed by Good Housekeeping. By the thousands, women with problem perspiration are finding the protection they need—and never could find before. And fully effective as a deodorant, too, of course. If you perspire more than average—even heavily — get the positive protection of Mitchum Anti-Perspirant. Your choice, liquid or cream. Ninety-day supply, each $3.00. Available at your favorite drug or toiletry counter.

ANSWER TO CROSSWORD PUZZLE

(See Page 31)

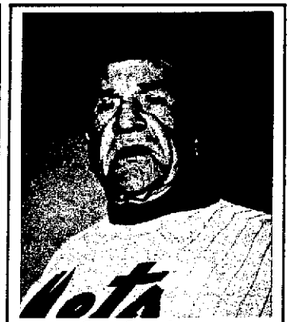

Glad you asked that!

By HY GARDNER

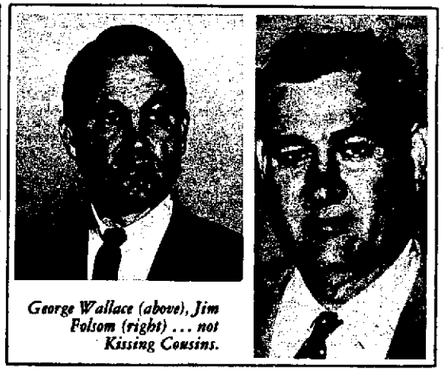

Somerset Maugham ... preferred longevity to talent.

Casey Stengel ... opens his own mouth rather than the mouths of others.

Maurice Chevalier ... wished his name was Onassis.

Joe Namath, Ann-Margret ... without dames, Notre Dame didn't interest him.

Gina Lollobrigida ... a kind word for Howard Hughes.

Q: I've heard that some of the rock groups are beginning to mellow, actually encouraging young followers to look up to and respect their elders. Can you cite just one example? — Sissy L., Waterbury, Conn.

A: Steppenwolf's lead vocalist John Kay put it this way: "There's a lot of talk about the Establishment. But only by working together can we get anywhere . . . I feel we need the experience of the older generation. And they need our energy, our enthusiasm." (Which makes John O'Kay in our book.)

Q: What author advised, "If you are a writer, live a long time. I have found that longevity counts more than talent"? — Bill M., Dallas.

A: The talented (late) Somerset Maugham.

Q: I heard it was Casey Stengel's ambition to become Dr. Stengel. If so, how come he switched to baseball? — Grover M.O., Cincinnati.

A: Because he was lefthanded. Playing ball to finance his way through dental college, the "Perfessor" realized how clumsy it was to be a lefthanded tooth-puller. Decided he could make more money with a bat and ball and by opening his own mouth wide than asking others to, please, do so.

Q: I'm aware that Maurice Chevalier was an admirer and friend of Jackie Onassis, even her escort at times. How did he react to her marriage? — Marilyn Honihan, St. Louis.

A: Muses Maurice: "The Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis marriage shocked the world, but it has already found its champions, many famous writers among them. Such as James deCoquet, who said in Le Figaro, 'There's nothing scandalous about her preferring the caresses of fortune to the pitfalls of public widowhood.' All of my best wishes are with this extraordinary and beautiful bride. When the news was first announced, I wired her: 'All the happiness in the world magnificent Jacqueline stop wish my name were Aristotle Onassis instead of Maurice Chevalier.' "

Q: Weren't our governors, George Wallace and Jim Folsom, related? — Emelia D.N., Birmingham, Ala.

A: Not until Wallace wed Big Jim's niece, the former Mrs. Cornelia Ellis Snively. Now he calls him Uncle Jim. The two politicians have been close friends — on and off. In '54, when Folsom sought his second term as governor, Wallace was his south Alabama campaign manager. They broke politically in 1962 when Wallace ran successfully for the office, followed by his late wife, Lurleen, in 1966. And finally in the '70 election. In all three jousts "Kissing Jim" became "Hissing Jim" because he was with the opposition.

Q: About Howard Hughes's mysterious disappearance — any reaction from his one-time girl friends? — Baylor J., Memphis.

A: Most of his disbanded harem prefer to forget their boredom and tension while waiting for the phone to ring in their Hughes-financed hideaways. But Gina Lollobrigida confesses: "He was very much in love with me. I was one of the few people in the world who really knew him." (He'd signed her to a seven-year contract when he brought her to Hollywood 20 years ago.) "He took me everywhere," Gina recalls. "I wasn't seeing anyone else, just Howard. But later he tried to stop me working in movies. One studio paid him so I could work on two films. We had legal fights for 12 years. But if I were to see him today I would say a friendly hello."

Q: Didn't Joe Namath once turn down a football scholarship to Notre Dame? And has he now decided he's about through with football? — Gertrude Berkson, Brooklyn.

A: Far from being through, the breezy quarterback has gotten his second wind and looks forward to sparking the Jets next season. About the scholarship, Joe chuckled: "That's pretty close. When I discovered there were no dames at Notre Dame I headed right back to Beaver Falls. I wanted to play football where there were girls." Namath has switched his winter bachelor pad from the Palm Bay Club in Miami to Fort Lauderdale — to spend more time at his Bachelors 3 pub.

GERIL MULLER
Wondrous Aroma

If, from a discreet distance, we could watch a guest dining on his favorite entree at Chez Cary, 571 S. Main St., Orange, this is what we might see:

First of all he is seated at an elegant table in a crystal and red velvet dining room reminiscent of a continental palace. He lifts a gleaming silver spoon and dips it into a steaming dish which gives off a heavenly aroma.

He closes his eyes. He tastes. Ah ... ecstasy ... This is the kind of fare that every epicure should enjoy at least once in a lifetime, even if he must cross a continent or a sea in order to visit this fabulous restaurant.

The dish is bouillabaisse, the famous fish soup of France. It is served every Friday and Saturday night at Chez Cary. When given a day or so notice, master chef Fred Hossli will also prepare it on other nights, if the ingredients are available.

The bouillabaisse (17.50 a la carte) includes seven kinds of sea food, plus spices, liqueurs and fresh vegetables. The Chez's recipe is faithful to the original Marseilles formula, except that eel and octopus are eliminated. It is made with langoustine from India, live baby lobster from South Africa, Spanish shrimp, whitefish, clams, sea bass and scallops. The broth, flavored with pernod, is simmered all night in the stock pot.

Such masterpieces have helped Chez Cary win two coveted Holiday magazine awards plus recognition from connoisseurs throughout the world. Its guiding genius is tall, handsome Geril Muller, an interior decorator and artist as well as a perfectionist regarding the most minute dining details. He has assembled a superlative European-trained staff, including captains, waiters and waiter's assistants who wear beautiful garb and treat each guest like visiting royalty.

Despite its grandeur, the Chez is a friendly place noted for its graciousness and warm hospitality. The haute cuisine is a la carte. Each night special plats du jour are offered, $5.50 to $7.75, garnished with succulent fresh vegetables. The regular entrees range from the choicest sea delicacies in rich sauces to beautiful double and single steaks and unusual European beef and veal creations.

The Chez's wine list is one of the finest in the world. Dinner is served Sundays from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. and daily starting at 6 o'clock.

I have also seen expressions of ecstacy on the faces of guests dining at another distinguished Southern California restaurant — Hoefly's, 4911 E. Second St., in the Belmont Shore suburb of Long beach.

HAL SOLOMON
Distinguished Prime Rib
Caricatures by Larry LaVoie

Designed like a modern English inn, Hoefly's has been a great restaurant for over four decades. Its delicacies, prepared from treasured recipes, have won praise and congratulations from world travelers who have tasted similar dishes in London or Paris and commented: "I liked what I had in Europe, but this is even better!"

The most popular dinner entree at Hoefly's is that king of roasts — prime rib au jus. Owner-host Hal Solomon buys the best beef in the land, prime eastern cuts of such rare quality that they are unobtainable in ordinary markets; nor can they be purchased from ordinary wholesalers.

The beef is annointed with rock salt and a kiss of spice before being roasted gently for many hours by Hoefly's talented chefs. When it arrives at the table, it is a pampered dish suitable for a king or maharaja. The meat is lusciously tender, served with its rich natural juices. The slices are thick and well-trimmed — $5.25 for the regular cut, $6.25 for the cattleman's cut. The accompaniments include relish tray, Hoefly's beautiful tossed green salad, or tangy fresh spinach salad; oversized baked potato or rice Yohan and beverage.

Hoefly's (now closed Sundays) also offers such gourmet enchantments as appetizers of Blue Point oysters or escargot a la bourguignonne; Caesar's salad, live Maine lobster, flaming brochette of prawn, tournedoes of beef and magnificent thick steaks, ranging from top sirloins, steak Roman and filets to chauteaubriand and planked N.Y. steak for two persons.

For years epicures have raved about another of Hoefly's treats — charcoal-broiled halibut steak, $3.95 on the complete dinner with dessert and beverage. This is marvelous halibut caught in the cold blue waters off Alaska and Canada. The steaks are unusually thick. The meat is so moist, white, flaky and delectable it falls apart at the touch of a fork.

Hoefly's serves luncheon Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dinner is from 4 to 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 4 to midnight Friday and Saturday. □ in YOUR food?

Preservatives and Pesticides

Read the small print on the labels of many common foods and you'll find strange sounding chemicals and preservatives.

It used to be a fad to visit a health food store. Now it is becoming a way of living for people who are particular in the type of food and vitamins they put in their bodies.

Looking for really good food and natural vitamins? We carry a complete line of organically grown dried fruits — no DDT, sulfur or other harmful chemicals — just the way nature intended. Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

Old age may be more directly related to environmental factors than supposed.

Using laboratory rats, investigators at the University of Notre Dame are measuring the effects of chemical, physical and biological agents found in the environment.

According to a report from the National Society for Medical Research, many tumors linked with aging are reported to be actually produced by accumulated insults to the body by environmental factors.

Such factors include microbial agents, toxic chemicals and physical injuries.

Examples of such agenrs might include bacteria, viruses, air pollutants, pesticides, smoke, radiation and excessive sunlight.

Hallmarks of aging such as pneumonia, nephritis and malignant tumors and lesions of the skeletal muscles, heart and arteries are appearing in conventional laboratory rats at about two years.

None of these degenerative changes have showed up so far among 61 two-year-old germ-free rats.

Say the researchers: "We do not know what germ-free rats will ultimately die of since they have not been observed for long enough periods under sterile living conditions.

"It appears that many changes now associated with aging are actually due to the organism's lifelong exposure to the outside world and its hardships."

A New York psychiatrist warns that drugs and pornography can prove hazardous to our nation's future.

Dr. Max Levin, reporting in Current Medical Digest, has this to say about drugs:

"If every person exercised his 'right' to abuse drugs, our society would go downhill, but fast. Productivity and creativity would slow down, and genetic defects would probably multiply."

He had the following to say about the principle said to have been enunciated by the American Civil Liberties Union — that the individual is the sole owner of his body:

"In its zeal to protect the popular appetite for pornography, the ACLU ignores the moral pollution that results from the untrammeled dissemination of filth and smut. It ignores the damage done to the development of healthy human values in our youngsters. The future of our society is in the hands of these youngsters.

"Woe to the nation that has no regard for civil liberty and human dignity. But woe also to the nation that does not recognize its own ultimate interest, a nation that cannot understand that indulging the baser appetites of its citizens will end in its decline and fall."

A conservative estimate of the number of living persons in Los Angeles who have made one or more suicide attempts is 75,000.

Dr. Ronald S. Mintz gives the estimate in the most recent edition of the Bulletin of Suicidology published by the National Institute of Mental Health. The estimate is based on a statistical study involving 2,018 questionnaires.

For the entire nation, Dr. Mintz estimates a total of five million suicide attempts.

The antibiotic ampicillin can effectively shorten the course of the disease shigellosis, Navy researchers report.

Shigellosis, caused by a micro-organism, has been one of the major causes of acute diarrhea in American personnel in Vietnam.

Navy doctors say that ampicillin significantly shortens the duration of diarrhea, abdominal cramps and fever in adults with the disorder.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Artificial kidney machines, either in homes or in neighborhood centers, should be available to all who need them by 1978, a government health official predicts.

Dr. Benjamin T. Burton, chief of the kidney program of the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases, says also that new improvements in methods of treating chronic kidney patients may have made possible miniaturization of artificial kidneys.

A new hingeless heart valve with a free-floating disc may be superior to the conventional ball-cage prosthesis, medical researchers report.

The man-made valve, made for replacement of the heart's aortic valve, is known as the Bjork-Shiley prosthesis. It is being used at the Texas Heart Institute in Houston.

The valve consists of a metal seat partially covered by a thin Teflon suture ring. Suspended between two struts is a free-floating disc which tilts open to an angle of 60 degrees. This design provides for speedy opening and closing.

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. What are the chances of President Nixon pulling a Lyndon Johnson? By that I mean not running for reelection.—Mrs. Harold Stein, Brooklyn, N. Y.
A. Those chances will be determined by the pre-election 1972 polls. If they indicate clearly, say, by ten to 12 percentage points, that Nixon cannot win, he most probably will not stand for reelection. His popularity, however, seesaws from month to month. How voters will regard the President in the summer of 1972 depends in part upon the state of the economy, the war in Vietnam, his personal image, the achievements of his Administration, other pertinent factors.

Q. Pearl Bailey, the singer—is her new husband white? What does he do for a living?—C.R.D., St. Petersburg, Fla.
A. Pearl Bailey has no new husband. She has been married to white musician Louis Bellson for almost 19 years. Bellson is an ace drummer, frequently plays with Duke Ellington's band.

Q. Can you tell me what former Apollo 8 astronaut Frank Borman does for a living nowadays?—Wesley Page, Woodward, Okla.
A. Borman is an executive with Eastern Air Lines, assigned to spend 13 weeks at the Harvard Business School's advanced management program.

Q. When we send up armed reconnaissance planes over North Vietnam, are those planes escorted by fighter-bombers?—N.T. Chapman, Cambridge, Mass.
A. According to Defense Secretary Melvin Laird in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Nov. 24, 1970—"That is correct." The recon planes are escorted by fighter-bombers.

Q. Did the late President Kennedy ever offer Leonard Woodcock, chief of the United Auto Workers Union, an ambassadorship?—Maurice Rose, Detroit, Mich.
A. In the early 60's when Woodcock's marriage had foundered, President Kennedy suggested that Woodcock might be interested in representing the U.S. in Pakistan or Taiwan. Woodcock might have accepted one of these positions, but his then boss, Walter Reuther, would not let him go. He considered protégé Woodcock too valuable.

Q. I've been told that Tom Jones, the singer, has flipped for two black chicks, Gladys Knight and Mary Wilson. The scan, man?—Virgie Hall, Compton, Calif.
A. Jones regards the girls in question as two dear friends.

Q. Please list the wives and offspring of actor Rex Harrison.—Martha Hays, Vernal, Utah.
A. Rex Harrison's first wife was Marjorie Thomas. They married in 1934 when Rex was 26. They had one son, the singer Noel. The marriage was dissolved in 1942. Harrison's second wife was actress Lilli Palmer. They married in 1943, had one son, Carey. His third wife was actress Kay Kendall who died of leukemia in 1959 after two years of marriage. His fourth wife was actress Rachel Roberts. They were divorced several months ago. His fifth wife will be Elizabeth Harris, divorced from actor Richard Harris.

FRANCOISE GILOT AND DR. JONAS SALK

Q. What sort of painter is Francoise Gilot, formerly Picasso's mistress and now married to Dr. Jonas Salk? —C.L., La Jolla, Calif.
A. Not too long ago Francoise Gilot Salk displayed her work, a collection of ink drawings and lithographs based on Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream in the Latin Quarter in Paris. The Parisian art critics gave the show an excellent review; as a result, Mrs. Salk sold much of her work at prices ranging from $250 to $1000.

Q. Who is the opera star whose plunging neckline embarrassed President Nixon?—Mrs. David Newmark, Santa Monica, Calif.
A. Last year when soprano Anna Moffo, 35, sang at a White House state dinner, President Nixon blushed at her ample cleavage when she bowed in acknowledging the applause.

Q. How and when did magician Harry Houdini die? —Jerry Nocera, Forestville, Conn.
A. Harry Houdini died of a ruptured appendix Halloween day, 1926.

Q. Is it your understanding that no nude paintings or photographs of the British Royal Family are permitted to be circulated anywhere in the world?—Harold Hofmann, Bloomington, Ind.
A. There is no such understanding. In Great Britain, embarrassing photos of the Royal Family are generally not published. In many other countries, however, no such unwritten privilege exists. Several weeks ago, for example, the mass circulation Vienna Express published an illustration of Queen Elizabeth lying on a couch, dressed only in crown and garter, reading a comic book to her children. The nude painting caused a mild stir, and the Austrian Foreign Ministry expressed regrets to the British Embassy. But it was no big thing.

The First Woman President of the U.S.— Why Not and When?

by Lloyd Shearer & Carol Dunlap

Here are the 13 women in the 92nd Congress—one Senator and 12 members of the House. Could one of them or a future Congresswoman work her way up to the Presidency as Richard Nixon did?

How soon will the voters of this nation elect a woman President? In 20 years, 30 years, or will we have to wait well into the next century?

Are there any valid reasons, other than tradition and male vanity, why a woman should not be elected President of the United States?

"When you get down to basic biology," Gina Allen wrote in a recent issue of Family Health, "a woman is better fit for the office of President of the United States than any male can hope to be."

Dr. Edgar Berman, physician and adviser to Sen. Hubert Humphrey, is typical of many men who contend that women are not structured for positions of political power and influence because of hormonal changes during menstruation, pregnancy, and menopause.

To emphasize that point, Dr. Berman last year raised this hypothetical question: "Suppose that we had a menopausal woman President who had to make the decision of the Bay of Pigs or the contretemps with Cuba at the time?" Such a female President might well be "subject to the curious mental aberrations of that age group."

But John F. Kennedy's Bay of Pigs fiasco hardly constitutes exemplary proof of superior male ability in either decision-making or crisis diplomacy.

Moreover, the people of this nation now know that during his incumbency Kennedy suffered from Addison's disease, treatment for which involves the administering of cortisone, a drug which has potentially a greater disruptive effect on behavior and judgment than the periodical hormonal changes in the female.

Furthermore, it is likely that these female hormonal fluctuations actually provide women with a chemical advantage over men. Certainly, estrogen deters heart attacks. It is also an energizing substance which raises self-confidence, conveys a sense of mastery, and supports the ability to think out problems actively.

According to Gina Allen, a woman's estrogen level reaches its lowest point during menstruation. Only then is it as low as the average man's is all the time. During menopause the adrenal glands actually increase their output of estrogen to compensate for decreasing ovarian production of it. Besides, there is always estrogen replacement therapy for those women who are in short supply.

The weaker sex

It is true that women may suffer premenstrual tension, but it is equally true that men commit more violent crimes and suicides than women do. Men fall ill more frequently and, of course, they simply do not live as long. They constitute the weaker sex.

Although it is no longer medically or politically permissible to argue the natural inferiority of women, the fact is that feminine political power remains extremely remote in the United States. Characteristically, the Gallup Poll of "The Most Admired Women" is usually headed each year by the President's wife or widow, mere tokens of women's political power in America.

Yet the same list of women most admired by Americans also includes the names of two women who have achieved real political power—Indira Gandhi and Golda Meir. Both serve as Prime Ministers of their countries, India and Israel.

A third woman who has risen to the political pinnacle is Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon. She has been Prime Minister of her nation twice. In 1960 she ran for office, following the assassination of her Prime-Minister-husband, and won, thus becoming the world's first female Prime Minister. She held office for five years, was defeated, then ran again last June and was returned to power.

Any doubt that women are biologically, socially, or politically capable of leading a country is dispelled by the performance in power of these three leaders: Indira Gandhi, Golda Meir, and Sirimavo Bandaranaike.

Tough jobs

The Presidency of the United States may be rated the world's most difficult job, but is it not truly significant that a woman should run India, with its staggering problems of overpopulation and underdevelopment, or Israel, a war-state completely surrounded by seemingly implacable enemies? Ceylon, with its severe ethnic and linguistic cleavages, is no island paradise either.

How did these three women come to power? How have they wielded it? And at what cost, either to themselves as women or to their countries?

All three were born, reared, or married into political power. Indira Gandhi is the daughter of Jawaharlal Nehru, who ranks along with Mahatma Gandhi (no relation) as the father of his country.

From earliest childhood, Indira was involved in her country's struggle against Great Britain for independence. "Both my parents were in jail so much," she recalls, "that I had to learn to make my own decisions and stand on my own feet." At the age of 12 she organized the "Monkey Brigade," a force of 6000 children who carried messages and ran other odd jobs in the independence movement.

Later, after her mother died, Indira acted as hostess, housekeeper and personal secretary to her father. When he died, she succeeded him as President of the Indian National Congress. In 1964 she became Minister of Information in the Cabinet of Lal Bahadur Shastri. When Shastri died of a heart attack in 1966, Indira Gandhi became Prime Minister and leader of some 480 million Indians.

Golda Meir's rise

Golda Meir was born into the highly politicized atmosphere of the Jewish ghetto in Kiev, Russia. As a child she suffered the fears of pogroms and other manifestations of anti-Semitism which drove her family to America.

In Milwaukee where they settled, Golda trained as a teacher and became involved in Socialist and Zionist activities. She married another Russian Jew, Morris Myerson (later Hebraicized to Meir), on the condition that they emigrate to Israel. There she involved herself in Socialist politics and eventually in the movement for Israeli statehood.

As a reward for her services, Golda Meir became Israel's first minister to Moscow. Later, Ben-Gurion made her his Labor Minister, then his Foreign Minister. In March of 1969 she was called from retirement to replace Premier Eshkol, and in October was elected to a four-year term as Prime Minister of Israel.

Sirimavo Bandaranaike entered politics on the reputation of her assassinated husband. To those who accused her of having no political experience, she retorted, "People forget that I had 20 years of political experience from my husband. I am not as inexperienced as they make me out."

Before her husband's death Mrs. Bandaranaike was active in the Women's Social Welfare Movement, agitating for family planning and political as well as educational rights for women. Last year she was returned to office with the largest majority in Ceylonese history.

'I am a human being'

How do these three leaders feel as women in politics?

Indira Gandhi declares, "As Prime Minister I am not a woman I am a human being." To a journalist who asked her about the role of sex in politics, she replied, "I don't think it makes any difference. Every person has advantages and disadvantages in this job. Some people say a woman hasn't as much stamina as a man. I can't tell, never having been a man, but I certainly have more physical stamina than anyone else around here."

When asked if she felt handicapped as a woman in politics, Golda Meir replied in similar vein, "I don't know. I've never tried to be a man." (Upon naming her to his Cabinet, Ben-Gurion said of Golda Meir, "She's the best man I have.")

Sirimavo Bandaranaike, even blunter in her assessment of the problems, states, "I think most men in politics are weak."

Most political observers agree that these three women bring valuable feminine qualities to their work. As Betty Friedan writes, "The naturalness of Indira Gandhi's authority comes from using not alien abilities copied from men, but abilities that are very much her own as a woman. For instance, her ability to compartmentalize her time and her thinking, to do four or five jobs at once, has always been the secret of a woman's creative energy." And a close associate writes of Mrs. Meir, "Golda has the strong qualities of a man and the extra qualities of a woman —intuition, sensitivity and humane feelings."

In addition, the fact that all three of these women are compromise or coalition candidates suggests that they are endowed with the particular feminine quality of accommodation. Both Mrs. Gandhi and Mrs. Meir characterize themselves as Socialists, and Mrs. Bandaranaike as a nationalist, but essentially all three are political pragmatists. As Indira Gandhi once remarked to Cy Sulzberger of The New York Times, "Politics is just finding the best way of doing things as they arise, often having to compromise . . . we are pragmatic, we use the word 'socialism' but have no particular prophet." A colleague describes Mrs. Gandhi as flexible and practical in human relations: "She has disposed of an enormous backlog of difficult decisions by somehow bringing together positions that had seemed to be opposite."

Golda Meir is also regarded as a most practical woman, more concerned with action than ideology. As for Mrs. Bandaranaike, she has welded together Marxists and nationalists in a coalition that works.

Have the members of this trio suffered as women because of the demands of high political office?

All three readily admit regret at not having enough time to spend with children and grandchildren. But this problem is one that all working women face. More serious are the problems they have encountered in their marriages.

Mrs. Bandaranaike, who literally lost her husband to politics, is a special case, a wife widowed by a political assassin. Indira Gandhi and Golda Meir, on the other hand, suffered years of pain and separation from their husbands (both now deceased) as a result of their political ambitions.

A close friend of the Gandhis pinpoints the problem: "He [Feroze Gandhi] had a very sensitive male ego, and he didn't like reflected glory."

Here again, every modern feminine activist faces the same problem: Relatively few husbands understand and take pride in their wives' success, especially if it is greater than their own.

The future? Barring unforeseen circumstances, Golda Meir will probably serve out the remainder of her term before retiring at age 75.

A test for Mrs. Gandhi

Indira Gandhi faces the most severe test of her political career in this month's parliamentary elections. Experts anticipate her defeat. Mrs. Bandaranaike, however, in the most trying of circumstances, seems to be holding on.

What these three woman are proving, of course, is that nature has not disqualified the female sex from handling authority or conducting national leadership. In fact, the opposite may very well hold true.

"Women live longer than men," explains Dr. Ferguson Anderson of Glasgow University, "because nature has equipped them with a six-cylinder engine compared with man's four-cylinder one.

"Woman has a better heart and a better system generally. She has a built-in punch that man lacks."

In a sentence, premenstrual tension, hormonal changes, a woman's ups and downs, her menopause—these are no proper grounds for banning females from the highest office in the land. These are in truth the rationalization for male bigotry and sexual chauvinism.

Dr. Edgar Berman contends women are susceptible to hormonal changes that disqualify them for political power.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

What World Youth Wants

The Citizen Watch Company of Japan recently conducted an international youth poll.

More than 6300 young people, ages 16 to 22, from 22 countries including Poland and Yugoslavia, were polled on 30 questions relating to goals, society, travel, and life.

Among world youth, the poll reveals, the single most desired thing is money. After that, come (2) jobs (3) happiness and love (4) home and peace (5) automobiles.

The poll reveals further that most youths want to visit (1) the U.S. (2) France (3) Great Britain (4) Switzerland and Italy.

On the sex questions, more than 50 percent of the youths in the U.S., Japan, and the Scandinavian countries are in favor of premarital sex, providing mutual love exists.

Most of the young people in Catholic countries as well as in Southeast Asian countries replied that premarital sex should be avoided under virtually all circumstances.

The poll was drafted and the data analyzed by four Japanese professors and Don Shannon of the Japan bureau of The Los Angeles Times.

Coed Is the Trend

Gordonstoun, the school in Scotland where Prince Philip and Prince Charles were educated, may go coed. Coeducation was the original intention of the late Dr. Kurt Hahn, the German refugee who founded the school in the 1930's. But Hahn was dissuaded by English friends who advised him that preparatory schools in Great Britain were traditionally non-coed.

Gordonstoun would like to admit girls from the age of 13 and up starting in 1972, but is awaiting an okay from the school's governors and patrons. It should be forthcoming any day now.

Eton, perhaps the most famous of all British preparatory schools, has no intention of going coed but recently broke with tradition by appointing Lady Douglas-Home, wife of the British Foreign Minister, to its board of governors. At one time her father, Dr. Cyril Alington, was headmaster at Eton.

LEANNA—GI PINUP AND PEN PAL

Volunteer Pinup

Betty Grable, Lana Turner, and Rita Hayworth were the pinup girls of World War II. Marilyn Monroe was the pinup queen of the Korean War. To date there has been no outstanding pinup doll of the Vietnamese war.

To fill that void, Leanna Johnson, 20, an acrobatic dancer-singer from Long Beach, Calif., has nominated herself.

A beauty contest winner, 5 feet 7, 123 pounds; vital measurements: 36-24-36, Leanna has mailed more than 5000 pinup photos of herself to our servicemen in Vietnam. Moreover, she has answered by hand every single letter from an overseas GI.

Says Leanna: "That's the least I can do for our boys." She can be reached via Box 3525, Long Beach, Calif. 90803.

STILL SMOKING?

Are there some people who just can't quit?

A year ago his doctor ordered John Beam (not his real name) to stop smoking. John had just recovered from a massive coronary attack. The next might be fatal.

Since then John has tried to quit at least five times—and every time given up the attempt after just a few days.

A two-pack-a-day man for longer than he can remember, John becomes nervous and irritable when he tries to cut out smoking. Any small crisis—business or domestic—he is liable to blow sky high.

"Take away my cigarettes," says John, "and I'm not fit to live with."

John Beam is one of an increasing number of people who have desperately tried to give up smoking, but just can't make it.

Many of them have turned for help to one or another of the widely advertised smoking deterrents found in every drug store—often to no avail. Can anything be done for these people?

The answer is, "Yes."

One of the most effective smoking deterrents ever discovered is a drug called Lobeline Sulfate. Lobeline works, not by making smoking unpleasant, but by acting as a substitute for nicotine. It helps to remove the craving, and to reduce withdrawal symptoms.

However, don't think that if you want to quit smoking you can just walk into a drug store and ask for some Lobeline Sulfate. It's not as simple as that.

Unfortunately this highly effective drug has a big drawback. Taken in sufficient quantities to get the job done, it often upsets the stomach.

A number of years ago a team of scientists at a great American University determined to tackle this problem. After months of research they discovered that buffering the Lobeline Sulfate with two special antacids virtually eliminates any likelihood of stomach upset. Also, just as importantly, these buffers increased the efficiency of the Lobeline, thus greatly reducing the amount necessary to do an effective job.

This discovery was the first, and has turned out to be the only, great product breakthrough in the smoking deterrent field since Lobeline Sulfate was first discovered. It was immediately patented* and Lobeline Sulfate is now available in this new form under the name of Bantron®.

No other smoking deterrent has such a patent. That is why Bantron can safely give you four times as much Lobeline in a single dose as any other deterrent in the drug store.

In appearance Bantron is a little white tablet, somewhat like an aspirin. It is easy to swallow, safe and pleasant to take, but marvelously effective.

Before Bantron was put on the market it was thoroughly researched. It was tested on hundreds of people who wanted to stop smoking. In these clinical tests 83%, more than 4 out of 5, quit easily and pleasantly with the help of Bantron in only 5 to 7 days. Today Bantron has helped countless others, and is the smoking deterrent many doctors not only recommended but use themselves.

If, like our friend John Beam, you still need help in your struggle to quit smoking you have probably not yet met Bantron. You may have chewed stacks of gum or sucked piles of lozenges, all calling themselves smoking deterrents—but only Bantron can bring you the effectiveness of buffered Lobeline Sulfate.

This is why, in clinical tests, 4 out of 5 people who took Bantron, kicked the habit within 7 days.

Isn't it worth a try?

Trouble in the Frat House

Fraternities may be on their way to extinction, a casualty of the revolution in student life.

Roger Prince, president of the Intrafraternity Council at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., reports a 12 percent drop in fraternity membership over the last decade, compounded by a 3 to 4 percent drop in 1970. "It's like inflation," Roger comments. "It's not going to hurt too much in any single year, but the system cannot sustain an annual drop like that and survive."

"If there is another bad year, a couple of fraternities could very easily fold," warns Stephen C. Williams, assistant dean at Dartmouth.

Dean Williams attributes the fraternities' difficulties to student dissatisfaction with traditional institutions plus the high cost of social dues, $280-$355 a year. The prospect of coeducation in the near future also means that fraternities will lose their importance in attracting weekend coeds.

UCLA is a typical coed multiversity. But in the past three years, nine out of 29 UCLA fraternities closed their doors, and the number of pledges declined from 457 in 1965 to 170 in 1970.

Jim Goodman of the UCLA Intrafraternity Council blames a statewide cut in admissions that halved the freshman class last year, and the limitations of the average student budget. "Students can no longer afford to live in or pay frat dues," Jim explains.

But the facts tell another story: UCLA dormitories charge $119 a month for room and board, the fraternities $5 less.

The reasons obviously lie elsewhere. Many students finding the country-club atmosphere of the fraternity an anachronism, are turning their attention to more radical forms of social and political activity. As for the experience of small-group living, at least one of UCLA's bankrupt frat houses opened its doors again—as a coed dormitory.

DRESSED TO KILL

Bullet-Belt Fad

If a good-looking chick swaggers into a party looking as if she's spoiling for a shoot-out, don't call the cops. She's merely sporting the new hot fashion accessory that's making the rounds of the girls these days—a cartridge belt. Consisting of brass cartridges strung together and joined at the front, the belts are being worn with jeans, pants, suits, gauchos and other formerly masculine forms of attire.

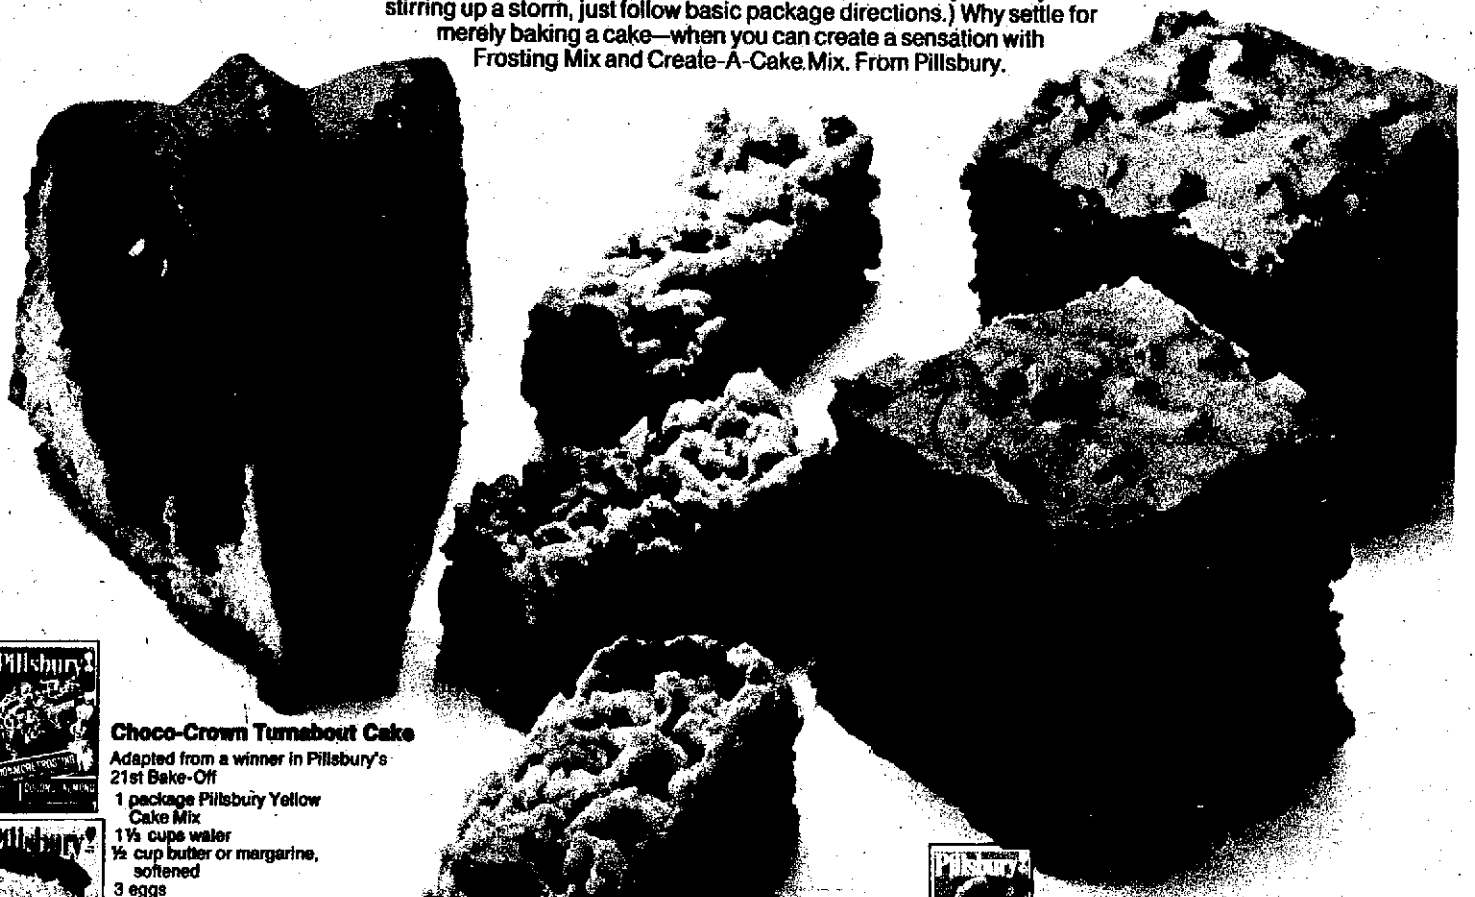

The belts are usually slung about the hips in the manner of a Western outlaw, and the girls apparently like what it does for their image.

The bullet-belt craze started in England last year, was introduced to the U.S. by the wife of a New York department store magnate who saw them being worn by the mod set in London. They're reported selling briskly at department stores and specialty shops for from $15 to $25. One maker, Coco Creations of New York, is also putting out a $5 shoulder bag with two bullets for decorations, and a three-bullet rawhide necklace for $2.50. "It's part of the 'Army chic'," says a Coco executive. "Girls are buying surplus Army belts, bags, shirts."

Among the girl-watchers during the bullet-belt fad is the U.S. Government, because theoretically, at least, it's possible to convert empty cartridges into live ammunition. To assure that this doesn't happen, manufacturers now are boring holes in the sides of the cartridges before selling them. That way belt-wearing girls won't have to explain they didn't know it was loaded.

How to create a cake with a frosting mix.

When you start with Pillsbury Create-A-Cake Mix, creativity comes easy. As easy as adding a Pillsbury Frosting Mix to create an original cake that's all your own. What makes Pillsbury Create-A-Cake Mix so special? It's the first cake mix specially made to let you add just about anything you can think of to make every cake you bake your own creation. It's easy. It's fun. (And on days when you don't feel like stirring up a storm, just follow basic package directions.) Why settle for merely baking a cake—when you can create a sensation with Frosting Mix and Create-A-Cake Mix. From Pillsbury.

Choco-Crown Turnabout Cake

Adapted from a winner in Pillsbury's 21st Bake-Off

1 package Pillsbury Yellow Cake Mix
1⅓ cups water
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
3 eggs
1 package Pillsbury Coconut-Pecan or Coconut-Almond Frosting Mix
1 envelope (1 oz.) pre-melted chocolate

Grease and flour 10-inch Bundt or tube pan. In large bowl, combine dry cake mix, water, butter and eggs. Blend and beat as directed on package. Reserve 2 cups of batter. Pour remaining batter into prepared pan. To reserved batter, add dry frosting mix and chocolate. Stir until combined; spread mixture evenly over batter in pan. Bake at 350° for 50 to 60 minutes. Cool 15 minutes. Remove from pan. Cool completely. High altitude: 5200 feet. Add 3 tablespoons flour. Bake at 375° for 45 to 50 minutes.

...ge-Full ...nut-Butter Bars

Adapted from a winner in Pillsbury's 21st Bake-Off

1 package Pillsbury Yellow Cake Mix
1 cup peanut butter
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
2 eggs

FILLING
1 cup (6-oz. pkg.) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1⅓ cups (14-oz. can) sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 package Pillsbury Coconut Pecan or Coconut Almond Frosting Mix

In large mixing bowl, combine cake mix, peanut butter, butter and eggs. By hand, stir until dough holds together. Press ⅔ of dough into bottom of ungreased 13x9-inch baking pan. Reserve remaining dough for topping. Prepare filling. Spread filling over dough in pan. Crumble reserved dough over filling. Bake at 350° for 20 to 25 minutes until light golden brown. Cool completely; cut into bars. Makes about 36 bars. FILLING: In heavy saucepan, combine chocolate pieces, sweetened condensed milk and butter. Melt over low heat, stirring constantly until smooth. Remove from heat. Stir in Frosting Mix. High altitude: 5200 feet. No adjustment necessary.

Chocolate Caramel Cake

1 package Pillsbury Caramel Frosting Mix
1 package Pillsbury German Chocolate Cake Mix
1 cup water
4 eggs
½ cup nuts
CARAMEL TOPPING
Reserved frosting mix
½ cup nuts
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
3 tablespoons water

Generously grease and lightly flour bottom and sides of 13x9-inch pan. Measure ½ cup dry frosting mix; reserve remaining frosting mix for caramel topping. In large mixer bowl, combine dry cake mix, ½ cup dry frosting mix, water, eggs and ½ cup nuts. Blend and beat as directed on package. Pour into prepared pan. Bake at 350° for 30 to 40 minutes. Remove from oven and cool 15 minutes. Spread with caramel topping. CARAMEL TOPPING: In medium saucepan, combine reserved frosting mix, ½ cup nuts, butter and water. Stir over medium heat, until butter melts. Spread over slightly cooled cake. High altitude: 5200 feet. Prepare recipe above, adding 3 tablespoons flour. Increase water to 1⅓ cups. Bake at 375° for 25 to 35 minutes.

How the day begins: The teacher has the computer's long list of instructions telling her each child's study program for the day. "Jimmy, Lesson 36 in math. Mary, Lesson 16 in reading." The children then go off on their own or into small groups for study. Novel learning method is called PLAN.

I've got a little problem, teacher. In the PLAN learning system, used at Robert Frost Elementary School, Salt Lake City, children do most of their studying individually. When they hit snags they consult the teacher and then return to their work with fresh outlook.

Dear Computer, How Am I Doing?

by John G. Rogers

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Teachers in Robert Frost Elementary School here never have to mark tests or decide which lessons the youngsters should study next. It's all done for them by a computer more than 1000 miles away.

"Being free of all drudgery and record-keeping gives the teacher so much more time to work at the individual level with the children," says Dorothy Wardrop, consultant at Robert Frost. "That's one of the special advantages of our system."

The system at Robert Frost is called PLAN (Program for Learning in Accordance with Needs). In keeping with today's trends, PLAN uses special materials and teaching devices which permit each student to move along through the educational process at a pace geared to his own natural ability.

Enter the computer

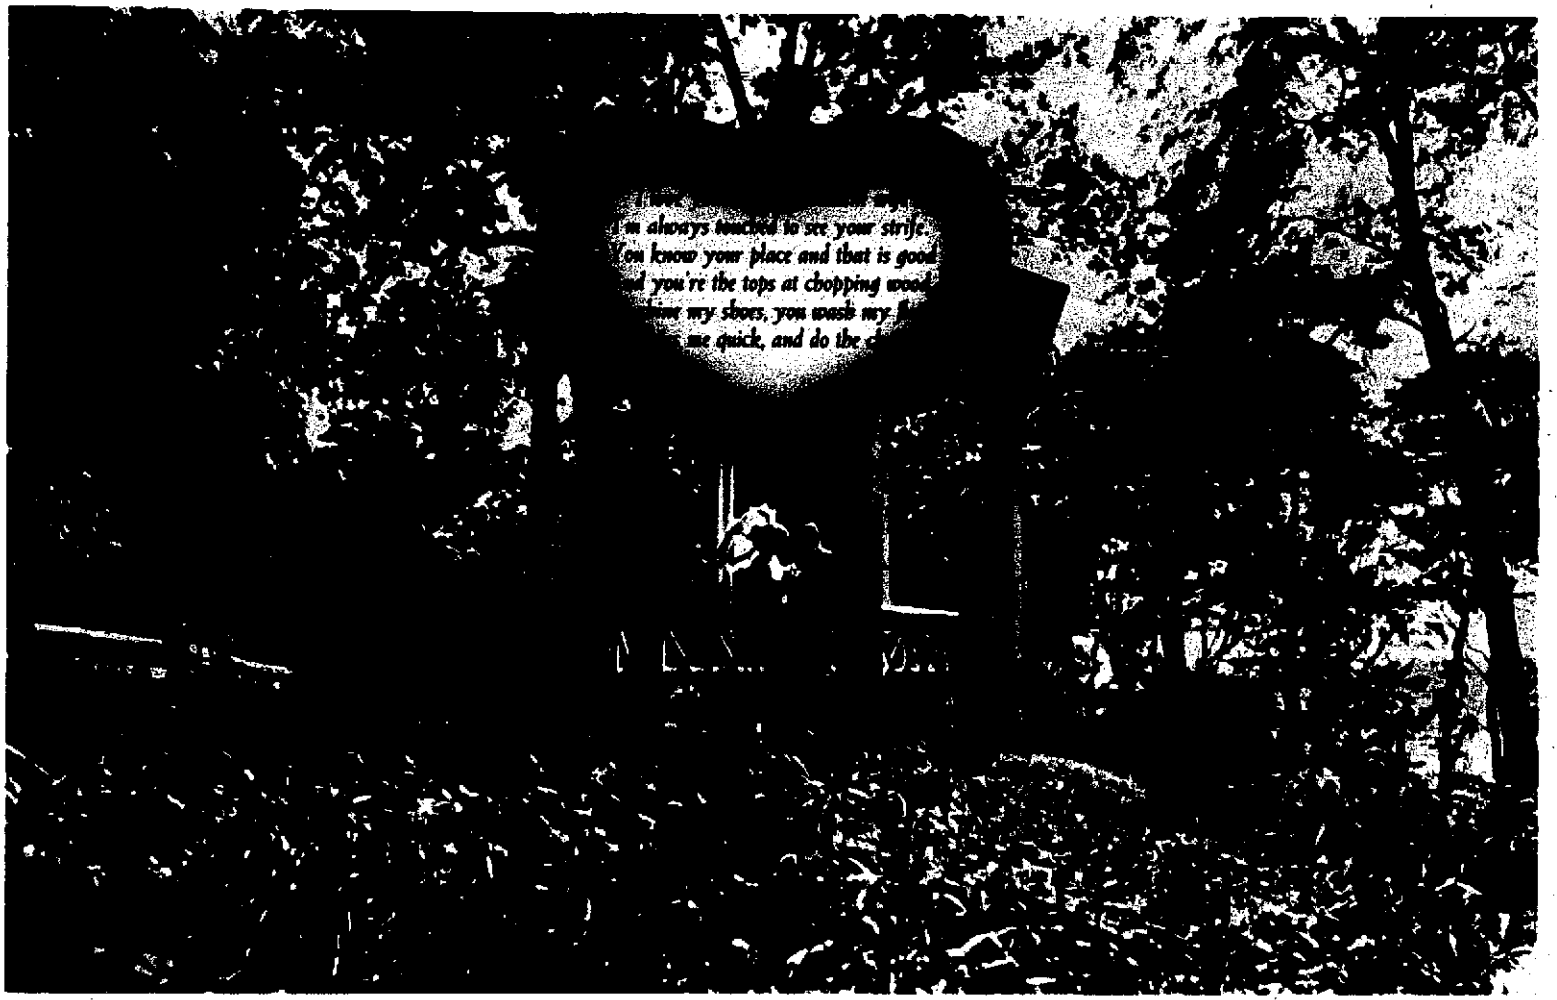

Suppose Jimmy and Billy are on the same lesson in math on a given Tuesday. Toward the end of the day they take a test of multiple-choice questions and make penciled dots on a card indicating their answers. That information is fed into an electronic device that "reads" the cards and transmits their information by wire to a computer in Iowa City, Iowa—a central point.

"The computer," says Dorothy Wardrop, " 'knows' Jimmy and Billy and also 'knows' just how they stand in each of their subjects. It digests the information from their cards and sends back its decisions to a printer here in our school. This printing goes on all night and when the teachers and children arrive in the morning, they find their instructions on hand for the day."

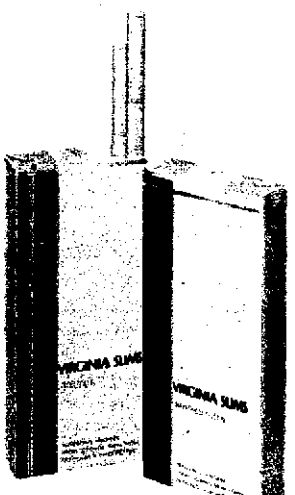

Let's say the computer found that Billy had failed the test. Then the instructions for him are to restudy the material. But Jimmy passed and he is told the number of the next math lesson to take up.

Cucumbers and Beauty

by ANA MAHER

Every woman, at some time in her life, faces the spectre of an aging skin. Most women never solve the problem, and finally become resigned. A fortunate few find the answer and are rewarded with a complexion that remains fresh and youthful all their lives.

Ten years ago, I had this skin problem. Nothing very serious, but when I took my mirror over to a bright light, I could detect evidence of dryness and faint little lines in those areas where wrinkles have a tendency to show first. And I didn't like it. I knew that these were danger signals that warned of an aging skin.

I was also very bewildered. I had always taken the best care of my skin. I used expensive night creams, lotions and highly touted astringents. So I tried other creams, with no improvement. Finally I became resigned. After all, everybody gets older and most of us show our age.

Then one day I had a visit from an elderly widowed neighbor. This charming lady was about seventy, but she had the most beautiful, moist, youthful skin. I remarked about it and mentioned my own skin problem.

She told me she used a marvelous cream which had been formulated by her late husband, a physician, and that she made it herself. "Try it," she said, and then she left and returned with a jar of this cream.

So I tried using my neighbor's cream.

In only three weeks, I began to see a marked improvement. My skin was fresher, clearer, smoother. After two months, my former dry, dull skin was revitalized. The lines and puffiness had been eased away. My skin now had a youthful, almost translucent quality. I was thrilled with my neighbor's formula.

For six years, this kind lady kept me supplied with this cream. And I want to tell you that my skin was more vital and younger looking than it had been when I first started to use it, six years before.

Then my neighbor died suddenly — and with her went that wonderful cream and its secret ingredients. I was saddened by the loss of a good friend — and dejected by the loss of a miracle cream. Her family told me that her personal papers revealed no formulas of any kind. I was desperate. But I did have three jars left from the last batch she had made.

So I took the cream to one of the best known analytical cosmetic chemists. The cost of the analysis was enormous, but I got what I wanted. I had the wonder cream formula.

It has a base of pure cucumber juice, two super-moisturizers and three natural lubricants. It also contained Vitamins A and D and a special component to keep the cucumber juice fresh. My chemist told me that the formula consisted of only safe, pure ingredients — no hormones, estrogens or steroids.

I made a batch of cream for myself, following the chemist's instructions. Then my friends and relatives began using it. And in every case, the results were absolutely astounding.

Soon friends began insisting that the cream should be made known and available to all women, since the problem of aging skin is universal.

So my cream was put on the market three years ago, with the financial help of an uncle. It is called Cucumbre Frost.

The same wonderful results experienced by me, my friends and relatives were repeated time and time again by women all over the country. I have in my file hundreds of letters from grateful women telling of the remarkable results obtained with Cucumbre Frost.

Treatment is not a complicated ritual. I don't have time for that and the chances are you don't, either. You apply Cucumbre Frost at bedtime. Leave it on all night. It feeds, protects and nourishes your skin while you sleep.

I know what Cucumbre Frost can do for you. Therefore, I offer you this UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE. Try it. See for yourself in your own mirror how, after a few treatments, Cucumbre Frost helps revitalize dull, dry, aging skin. How Cucumbre Frost helps ease away lines and puffiness. Many women wrote me of astonishing results after only two weeks. Some take longer. But I say this to you: If, for any reason, you are not delighted with Cucumbre Frost — return the unused portion to me for a complete refund. No questions asked.

You now have the opportunity to have a vital, youthful, lovely skin — at no risk. Cucumbre Frost can be purchased only by ordering it directly from me. Simply send your name, address and $5.00 (cash or check) to:

Revealed at last by one of America's most successful weight-reducing doctors, a simple plan of hearty eating and gentle body toning that Turns up your "Digestive Furnace" and burns flab right off your body!

From the office of the "body-slimming specialist" whose patients have lost from 26 pounds to 148 pounds each, without a single moment's hunger!

A doctor who is so successful—who has produced so many incredible weight losses for men and women of all ages—that new patients are often forced to wait as much as several months to see him!

And—most astounding of all—a doctor who forces his patients to lose weight by eating! By eating three full meals a day—all with second helpings, and with "fill-em-up snacks" at bedtime (if they still have room for them)!

Because this doctor has discovered an "upside-down" way to reduce! A way to lose weight (to repeat this all-important fact once, again) by eating, and not by starving! Because the foods he feeds you—and the simple "body-toning exercises" he recommends for you—automatically make your "inner furnace" burn hotter—so that flab turns into fuel—and you can lose 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . even 100 or 120 ugly pounds in the most delightful way you've ever dreamed possible!

Revolutionary? Yes! Controversial? Yes! But it Works! Hundreds Upon Hundreds Of Personal Patients Follow This Simple Plan Every Month! AND We'll Let You Prove At Our Risk That It Can Work For You!

So here it is: A new way to lose the kind of weight you've always thought it was possible for you to lose. And do it—not by starving—but by eating as much as you want wisely!

Yes, this is a diet—an eating diet! That forces you to eat at dinner, even though you may actually feel full from breakfast and lunch and the hearty snacks you've had in between!

Yes, there are certain foods you can't eat, because they're poison for your weight. But this doctor pays you back for passing by those "poison foods"—by letting you take another second helping of other foods you love instead! And you keep right on burning off the weight!

Yes, you have to stick to the diet every day if you want to keep on melting off those pounds. And you have to stick to the diet even if you've lost 40 or 60 or 80 or 100 pounds—so you can keep that weight off for good! But who wouldn't want to stay on a diet that lets you fill up your plate with delicious delicacies over and over again! And snack in the morning! Snack in the afternoon! Snack delightfully every night before you go to bed!

And One Extra Point: This Diet Has A Second Giant Benefit For You! It Drains THE EXCESS FLUID Out Of Your Body, That You May Never Have Been Able To Lose Before!

This second way of evaporating ugly flab from your body is perhaps equally as important as the first. For medical science now knows that a huge portion of those ugly bulges on your waistline, hips, thighs, buttocks and elsewhere is nothing but plain trapped water! And that even when you melt away the fat itself, too much bulge remains until you get the trapped water out with it!

You probably already know this. But did you know that most of the ways you use to lose weight today—most of the so-called "diet foods" you use to try to starve that weight off your body—actually increase the amount of trapped water in your tissues!

This includes the Number One "reducing fruit," eaten by millions of men and women when they want to go on a "crash diet"—and that is so effective at retaining water in the body that the armed forces uses it to keep men from bleeding to death when they have no plasma handy!

This also includes the Number One "reducing cheese"—and the Number One "reducing hot drink"—and every single one of the so-called "no-calorie" or "low-calorie" soft drinks! They are all "super water holders"! And unless you know when and how to use them—and when not to use them at all—you'll simply swell up like a balloon, even if you're conscientiously starving yourself twenty-four hours a day!

This Doctor Teaches You How To Drain Out That Excess Fluid—As Well As That Ugly Flab—In Just Fifteen Minutes With His New Book! And Do It Without Destroying Your Face!

At this point, we must quote the doctor himself. Here is what he says:

"The results of this diet will never be seen by your friends in sunken cheeks, hollow eyes, folds of unfilled skin, or other evidences of the typical starvation diet. If you stand before a mirror, you will have nothing but memory, and perhaps an old photograph, to tell you where you carried the weight before which has now disappeared."

At the same time, he also says:

"My patients find that soon enough their clothes will become frightfully loose; even their shoes become too big. If you stick to my diet, you might even have to have your bowling ball refilled!"

And he quotes patient after patient, like this: "I am very happy with the results. I can wear a size 12 dress (was 20) or suit, and some size 10 dresses. Weight was 183, now 136 . . . I feel 10 years younger too.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Doctor Ernest R. Reinh entered University of Nebraska in 1917, received Bachelors Degree in 1921; Doctor of Medicine in 1923.

Doctor Reinh interned and has been associated with Providence Hospital, Detroit since graduation and has been in continuous practice except for the interruption of three and one half years as a Medical Officer in U.S. Navy.

Professional Memberships: Wayne County Medical Society, Michigan State, American Medical Association and Society of Abdominal Surgeons.

The interest in the problems of obesity was accentuated when patients came from the corners of the earth, such as Australia, South Africa, Europe, England, Sweden and South America.

No wonder prospective patients wait as much as several months to see this man—to learn how they can lose 20 . . . 40 . . . 60 . . . 80 . . . 100 and even 120 pounds with a diet that forces them to eat and eat again—and that drains excess fluids right out of their bodies at the exact same time!

But YOU don't have to wait a single minute! All you need to do to try this revolutionary diet— AT OUR RISK—is simply send in the coupon below! It must work for you, or every single penny of your money back!

Why not start losing that ugly flab—for good—today!

RESEARCH SCIENTIST WHO GETS SINUS HEADACHE PAIN AND CONGESTION CREATES TABLET TO GET RELIEF.

Sinarest was created by a research scientist who's suffered from sinus headaches nearly all his life.

So he knew just what he was looking for. It wasn't just a cold tablet or an allergy tablet. But a tablet for sinus congestion headaches. What he created is Sinarest. And he made it strong so it would be effective.

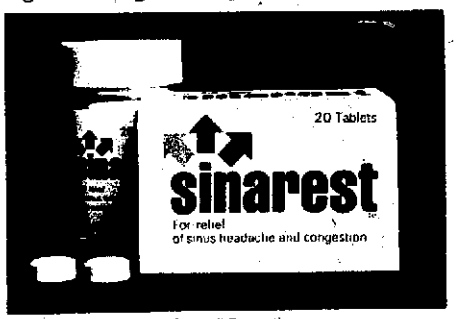

The basic idea behind Sinarest is to help relieve your headache pain fast. And to go to work on your swollen sinus cavities.

To do this he used a pain reliever that's easy on your stomach, a decongestant that helps drain your sinus cavities and an antihistamine.

He even added a mild energizer to help keep you from getting drowsy.

Sinarest for sinus headaches and the congestion that causes them.

It can mean the difference between suffering and feeling better again.

Denture Invention

For People With "Uppers" and "Lowers"

For the first time, science now offers a unique plastic cream that holds false teeth—both "uppers" and "lowers"—as they've never been held before. It forms an elastic membrane that actually holds dentures to mouth and gum surfaces!

It's FIXODENT—a revolutionary discovery for daily home use. So different it's protected by U. S. Patent #3,003,988.

FIXODENT not only holds dentures firmer, but it holds them more comfortably, too. It's so elastic you may bite harder, chew better, eat more naturally. You may even eat and enjoy apples, steak, and corn-on-the-cob again.

The special pencil-point dispenser lets you put FIXODENT exactly where it's needed. Resists oozing over and gagging.

Just one application may last round-the-clock. Dentures that fit are essential to health. See your dentist regularly. Get easy-to-use FIXODENT Denture Adhesive Cream at all drug counters.

Just look at this great selection of recorded entertainment — all available in your choice of 12" LP Records OR 8-Track Cartridges OR Tape Cassettes OR Reel-to-Reel Tapes! So no matter which type of stereo playback equipment you now have — you can take advantage of this special introductory offer from Columbia House!

To receive your 3 records or tapes for $1.00, just fill in and mail the postpaid coupon provided (no stamp needed — just fold in half, seal with paste or tape, and drop it in the mailbox). Indicate which type of recorded music you prefer . . . records, cartridges, cassettes or reel tapes . . . and your three selections will be sent promptly. Also be sure to indicate the field of music in which you are mainly interested — in order to help us serve you better.

As a member you will receive, every four weeks, an informative music magazine — describing the regular selection for the month, and scores upon scores of alternate selections from every field of music.

If you do not want any selection in any month — merely return the special card by the date specified. If you want only the regular selection, do nothing — it will be shipped to you automatically. Or use the card to order any of the alternate selections offered. And from time to time, we will offer some special selections, which you may reject by returning the special dated form provided — or accept by doing nothing . . . the choice is always up to you!

Your own charge account will be opened upon enrollment . . . you pay for your selections only after you have received them. They will be mailed and billed to you at our regular prices: records, $4.98; cartridges and cassettes, $6.98; reel-to-reel tapes, $7.98 . . . plus a mailing and handling charge. (Occasional special selections may be somewhat higher.)

Fantastic bonus plan. Your only obligation is to buy four selections during the coming year. After doing so, you have no further obligation — and you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you will be eligible for our generous bonus plan — which can save you at least 33% on all your future purchases! This is the most convenient way possible to build a music collection at the greatest savings possible! So don't delay — mail the postpaid coupon today!

Elegant Peach Melba

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

■ Long years ago, the opera star Nellie Melba dined at a restaurant where the chef, an admirer, made a dessert especially for her and called it Peche Melba. It is an elegant dessert and amazingly simple to make, it has only three ingredients—vanilla ice cream, peach halves and ruby-red raspberry sauce. If you make the sauce the day before, the dessert can be put together in a matter of minutes. Remember it for your next dinner party.

Peach Melba

1 quart vanilla ice cream
12 small canned cling peach halves
Melba Sauce*

Place a scoop of ice cream in each of 6 deep dessert dishes. Arrange a peach half on either side of ice cream. Pour Melba Sauce over all. Makes 6 servings.

*MELBA SAUCE

1 package (10 oz.) frozen red raspberries, thawed
⅔ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon cream of tartar

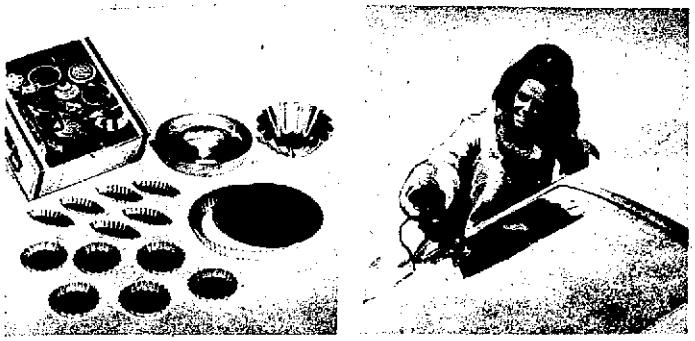

Press raspberries through very fine sieve into small saucepan. Stir sugar and cream of tartar into puree. Heat quickly to boiling point. Boil 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Cover. Chill thoroughly. (Sauce will thicken as it chills.) Makes 6 servings.

GOURMET BAKE SET: You can make a variety of interesting desserts—Quiche Lorraine, rum-soaked sponge cake, Gugelhupf, mousses, puddings and tarts—with this 15-piece bake set (above, left). Included are Quiche pan with removable bottom for oven to table use; Brioche and Savarin mold; 6 pieces each of individual tart molds and fluted oval molds. $8.29 ppd. Stuart, Dept. PP, 84-39 Van Wyck Expressway, Briarwood, N.Y. 11435.

WINDSHIELD DE-ICER: A quick way to safely remove frost and ice from your car windshield is provided by this new de-icer (above, right). Operating from the cigarette lighter socket, it's said to heat up in 15 seconds, melt up to 4" of ice quickly, then cool off enough in a minute to go into the glove compartment. It incorporates a plastic-covered squeegee rod to wipe glass clean and has a cord long enough to reach front, rear and side windows of any car or station wagon. $12.95 ppd. Bryce-Branton, Dept. PP, 690 Southern, Muskegon, Mich.

CONVERTIBLE BAR: Not a portable you can push around but not hide, this build-it-yourself bar (above, left) becomes a simulated fireplace—and is completely out of the way—when not needed for serving. It's said to be simple and economical for you to build from complete pictorial plans that cost $4. Details: Zufari Crafts, Dept. PP, 135 N. Hamilton St., Lockport, Ill. 60441.

TIME WITH HI-FI: Here's an AM/FM clock radio (above, right) said to sound almost like a high fidelity receiver. Its air suspension speaker in a sealed acoustical enclosure, claims the maker, provides a quality of audio response usually found only in expensive sound systems. The digital clock has indirectly illuminated numerals to tell the hour, minute and second, and you can set it to wake you to music or alarm. $49.95 in stores. Emerson, Dept. PP, Box 499, Stamford, Conn. 06904.

PORTABLE CRIB: A help when you take baby on visits—and for summertime picnics and trips to the beach—a new portable folding crib-playcrib opens and closes in seconds without need to manipulate nuts, screws or bolts. It has a convenient carry strap, fits in trunk of a car, and its telescoping legs quickly adjust from playcrib to crib height. $39.95. Hendry, Dept. PP, Box 783, Upper Montclair, N.J. 07043.

My Favorite Jokes

by Al Bernie

EDITOR'S NOTE: Al Bernie is a versatile performer who can be depended on to entertain an audience with his distinctive comedy style and oddball personality. Al made his mark at top nightclubs across the country and on television talk shows. He has also appeared on the legitimate stage in a revival of the Richard Rodgers musical, I Married an Angel, and in the comedy-drama, Two for the Seesaw, among other productions. Al writes his own comedy material. Herewith some of his favorite jokes:

A doctor was awakened at 4 a.m. to make a house call. He reluctantly got dressed and braved a snowstorm. After the examination, he told his patient to send immediately for his lawyer and relatives and friends and make a will.

The doctor got home and told his wife what he had done.

His wife asked, "Was he that bad?"

The doctor said, "No . . . he was fine. I just didn't want to be the only sucker called out on a night like this."

Two men sat sipping orange juice after making their donations to the Red Cross Blood Bank. One said to the other, "You know, you look like an Indian."

"I am," was the reply.

"Are you a full-blooded Indian?"

"No, I'm one pint short!"

An office worker was accused by his firm of stealing $1000 worth of stamps. His lawyer got him off and told the grateful clerk that he could take his time about paying the legal fee.

The clerk said, "Look, I can pay you right now. Will you take stamps?"

An investigator came to a neighborhood and asked a passerby if he knew anything about a Henry K. Drollman.

"Drollman! I know plenty about him. He cheats at cards, he's a liar and he owes everybody money."

The investigator said, "You certainly seem to know a lot about him."

"Of course I do. I'm his best friend!"

The town panhandler asked one of the local citizens for a handout and after receiving a few coins he said, "Your son gave me twice as much."

The man replied, "He can afford to. He has a rich father."

A man stood before the Pearly Gates awaiting admission to Heaven. St. Peter asked him what he had done on earth to deserve entrance.

He said, "Once I went to Russia. I succeeded in confronting Kosygin and I really told him off for persecuting people and keeping the world in a state of tension. Then I slapped him."

St. Peter said, "That was very brave considering that he is always surrounded by armed guards. When did that happen?"

"Oh, about five minutes ago," was the reply.

A man wanted to order a suit and the tailor told him it wouldn't be ready for six weeks. "That's ridiculous," said the customer. "It only took seven days to create the whole world."

The tailor replied, "That's the trouble with the world. It was a rush job!"

A policeman stopped a stroller and asked where he was going.

He answered, "I don't know."

The officer, now suspicious, asked him again and, upon receiving the same reply, arrested him.

In jail, the man's lawyer asked, "Why did you give the policeman such a hard time and cause yourself all this trouble? Why didn't you tell him where you were going?"

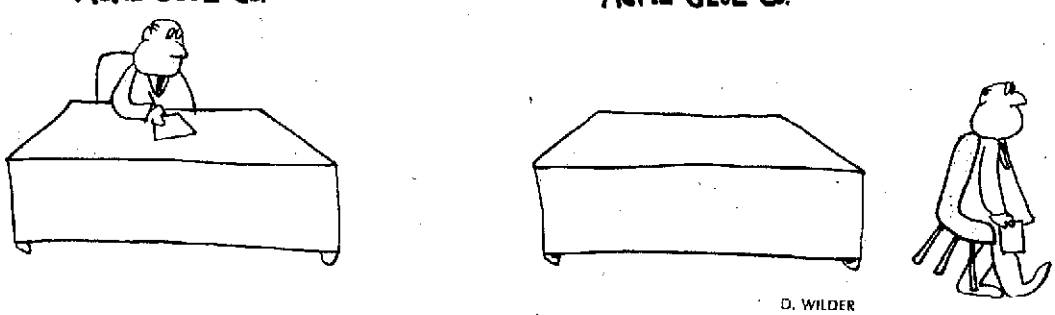

The man said, "Because I honestly didn't know where I was going. I started out to take a little walk and I wound up in jail. Isn't that proof?"

A diner ordered two eggs. The counterman asked, "How would you like your eggs cooked?"

"Of course, that's the only way I can eat them."

A playboy, notorious for not paying his bills, was reminded by his valet that his shirtmaker was demanding $200. The playboy said, "Promise him $100."

The valet went on, "Your landlord wants his $600." "Okay promise him $200. And, incidentally, promise yourself a few dollars."

PARADE'S SPECIAL

EDITED
by LLOYD SHEARER

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

TOO MUCH PEP The address on the package turned out to be the 11th hole of a Tijuana golf course. The contents of the package: 1.2 million amphetamine pills or "bennies" destined for black-market sale in California. The source of the pills: a legitimate pharmaceutical company in Chicago.

The House Crime Committee, in its investigation of the drug industry a few months ago, cited many such cases to conclude that the cause of amphetamine abuse is overproduction. American drug companies produce 8 billion pills yearly, or 40 for every man, woman and child in this country. The Food and Drug Administration reports that approximately one-half of this production is illegally dispensed. Large quantities of the pills, for instance, are legally exported to Mexico, then smuggled back into the U.S. for sale to truck drivers, hippies and addicts.

The FDA is also concerned that the legal use of amphetamines is excessive. Eight percent of all prescriptions written in this country call for amphetamines, usually as a stimulant or appetite suppressant. Yet research has shown that the drug has a diminishing effectiveness in weight reduction, and creates extreme psychological dependence as well.

In order to curb legal prescription distribution of amphetamines, the FDA now requires manufacturers to print the warning: "Amphetamines have a significant potential for abuse," on their labels. Physicians are asked to prescribe the drug only for narcolepsy, minimal brain dysfunction in children, and short-term weight reduction, and no longer as a stimulant for mild depressive states.

To cut off the source of illegal amphetamines, the House Crime Committee asked for production quotas on the drug, charging that drug manufacturers knowingly overproduce in order to reap higher profits. This controversial measure, hotly contested by the drug industry, died in a joint House-Senate conference.

In Britain, on the other hand, a leading manufacturer of amphetamines recently announced that it was halting production and withdrawing its stock from the market. In announcing the decision, Stewart Kiplins, managing director of Nicholas Laboratories, explained, "There is a growing weight of evidence that the use of amphetamines has undesirable social side effects."

NEW ENGLISH MONEY On Monday, Feb. 15th, Great Britain begins its new monetary system.

In the new money there will be only two units: pounds and pence. The pound, worth $2.40 in U.S. money, will consist of 100 new pence, each pence worth 2.4 U.S. cents.

Four "silver" coins are already in use in the following denominations: 50 new pence, 10 new pence, 5 new pence, and 2½ new pence.

There will also be three new "copper" coins in the following denominations: 2 pence, 1 pence, and ½ pence or penny.

There will no longer be 12 pennies to the shilling and 20 shillings to the pound. Shillings are out, and the decimal system is in.

Remember, one pound consists of 100 new pennies.

SHOULD CAR SPEEDS BE LIMITED? What would you think if the Government issued an order limiting the maximum speed rate on all vehicles to 95 miles per hour?

The U.S. Transportation Department is proposing that all cars, trucks, buses and vehicles be engineered to operate no faster than 95 miles per hour. Moreover, all vehicles would be equipped to sound an alarm and flash lights at 85 mph. The only exception would be police cars.

This proposal, to become effective with 1973 models, is currently open to the automobile industry and the public for comment until Feb. 26, 1971. If you feel strongly one way or another, you may write to Docket #1-19, National Highway Safety Bureau, 400 Seventh St. S.W., Washington, D.C. 20591. Be sure to write before Feb. 26th.

After that date, the Government has the option to finalize, modify, or abandon the proposal.

According to the Transportation Department the rate of automobile fatalities increases markedly once cars exceed 80 mph. A reasonable speed limit would help "reduce the gap between maximum attainable speed and the speeds at which occupant restraint systems are capable of adequately protecting vehicle occupants from serious injury or death."

The Transportation Department proposal does not envision any national speed limit, but horns honking and lights flashing once a car exceeds 85 mph would serve to provide the driver, the pedestrian and other motorists with an adequate warning that a speeding vehicle is on the highway.

COST OF DYING As the cost of living increases, so does the cost of dying. Hospitals and nursing homes, undertakers and funeral parlors, all raise their prices to keep pace with the cost of living.

In Japan, the price of a funeral has doubled over the past five years. It now ranges from $150 to $2800, and for extras such as catering, rental of mourning clothes, upholstered caskets, special lighting and acoustic effects, the Japanese pay up to $5500. (Per capita income is less than $1000 yearly, but the mourners traditionally contribute to meet the funeral expenses.)

Japanese undertakers explain that they must charge such high rates because they fulfill so many functions: transportation, catering, photography, decor, as well as undertaking or cremating.

But if Western-style extravagance has come to Japan, so has consumerism. Professor Tadashi Uematsu of Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, who recently organized an "Association to Improve Funeral Services," explains: "We don't see any point in extravagant funeral services with decorative altars and flowers. Some people prefer to do away with funeral services altogether and believe notice cards are sufficient."

NEWSPAPERS HELP

Traditionally, marriages in India are arranged. Parents and marriage brokers get together with astrologers and fortune-tellers; details are worked out; and the bride and groom meet for the first time on their wedding day.

Nowadays, however, young Indians are using newspaper want ads to find mates. They're faster and cheaper.

Even the most sophisticated members of the educated middle class in India rarely date. Hence they fail to meet eligible members of the opposite sex. Like computer dating in the United States, newspaper ads in India alleviate the problem of finding a suitable partner.

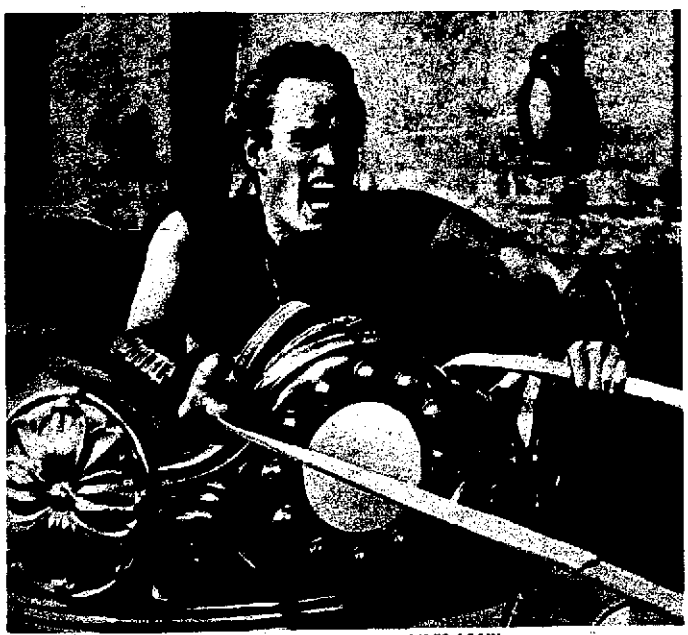

In 1971, as in 1871, family, horoscope and complexion rank high in the criteria of selection. Here is a typical ad:

"Wanted--good looking, fair, graduate girl, below 26, from decent family for handsome, well-settled lawyer. Contact with horoscope and other details."

But other traditional requirements, such as caste and dowry, are deemed less important by young prospective brides and grooms.

A survey of advertisers in The Hindustan Times reveals that most men seek beautiful virgins, while most women want their husbands to be well-heeled bureaucrats or businessmen, doctors or engineers.

The ads also highlight the increasing importance of education in India. Forty percent of the men want educated or working wives (compared with 12 percent in 1950) and forty percent of the women are themselves educated or employed.

BEN-HUR (CHARLTON HESTON) RIDES AGAIN

BEN THE BLOCKBUSTER

With the football season over, how is TV continuing to attract large weekend audiences? The answer: blockbuster films. Last year CBS-TV bought from MGM for approximately $3 million the right to show Ben-Hur for three runs. Next Sunday the network will preempt the entire night for a four-hour showing.

Ben-Hur, released by Metro in 1959, stars Charlton Heston, was directed by William Wyler.

WILL YOU SMOKE MY NEW KIND OF PIPE

30 Days at my Risk?

All I want is your name so I can write and tell you why I'm willing to send you my pipe for 30 days smoking without a cent of risk on your part.

By E. A. Carey

My new pipe is not a new model, not a new style, not a new gadget, not an improvement on old style pipes. It is the first pipe in the world to use an entirely new principle for giving unadulterated pleasure to pipe smokers.

I've been a pipe smoker for 30 years, always looking for the ideal pipe—buying all the disappointing gadgets, and never finding a single, solitary pipe that would smoke hour after hour, day after day, without bitterness, bite, or sludge.

With considerable doubt, I decided to work out something for myself. After months of experimenting and scores of disappointments, suddenly, almost by accident, I discovered how to harness four great natural laws to give me everything I wanted in a pipe. It didn't require any "breaking in." From the first puff it smoked cool—it smoked mild. It smoked right down to the last bit of tobacco without bite. It never has to be "rested." AND it never has to be cleaned! Yet it is utterly impossible for goo or sludge to reach your tongue, because my invention dissipates the goo as it forms!

You might expect all this to require a complicated mechanical gadget, but when you see it, the most surprising thing will be that I've done all this in a pipe that looks like any of the finest conventional pipes. The claims I could make for this principle in tobacco enjoyment are so spectacular that no pipe smoker would believe them. So, since "seeing is believing," I also say "smoking is convincing" and I want to send you one Carey Pipe to smoke 30 days at my risk. At the end of that time, if you are willing to give up your Carey Pipe, simply break it to bits—and return it to me—the trial has cost you nothing.

Please send me your name today. The coupon or a postal card will do. I'll send you absolutely free my complete trial offer so you can decide for yourself whether or not my pipe-smoking friends are right when they say the Carey Pipe is the greatest smoking invention ever patented. Send your name and mailing address to me today. As one pipe smoker to another, I'll guarantee you the surprise of your life, Free. Write:

E. A. Carey, Dept. RS-279B 1920 Sunnyside Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60640

E. A. CAREY, 1920 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. RS-279B, Chicago, Ill. 60640

Please mail facts about the Carey Pipe postage prepaid. After reading I will decide if I want to try it for 30 Days at YOUR RISK. Everything you send is free. No salesman is to call.

Lady Beware!

EDITOR'S NOTE: Several weeks ago PARADE recommended a brochure, "Lady Beware," published by the Los Angeles Police Department. Owing to budgetary restrictions the department finds itself unable to mail the brochure to the many thousands who wrote in for it. We are therefore reprinting it herewith.

The city is a magnet for all types of people. Nearly all are law-abiding citizens; however, there is the exception who might endanger a woman like you. If you are home alone or travel unescorted, you should be aware of measures you can use to safeguard yourself from this type of person.

Walking

A man determined to follow and attack a woman is more readily attracted to a woman who is wearing revealing clothes or behaving in a suggestive manner.

After getting off a bus at night, look around to see whether you are being followed. If someone suspicious is behind you, cross the street. Should he continue to trail you, be prepared to defend yourself by . . .

- Screaming and running to a lighted residence or business.
- Flagging down a passing car.
- Using any available object for a weapon such as a nail file, high-heeled shoe or an umbrella.

Do not be tempted to accept rides from strangers. If a car approaches you and you are threatened, scream and run in a direction opposite that of the car. The driver will have to turn around to pursue you.

Maintain a secure grip on your purse, preferably under your arm. Money and wallets are safer in an inside pocket. Unless absolutely necessary, never carry expensive jewelry or large amounts of money.

Walk near the curb and avoid passing close to shrubbery, dark doorways and other places of concealment. Shun shortcuts.

Have your key ready so your house door can be opened immediately.

When arriving at home by taxi or private auto, request the driver to wait until you are inside.

This is the cover of brochure issued by the Los Angeles Police Department.

Driving

When practicable, travel on well-lighted busy streets. Keep windows rolled up and doors locked.

Do not leave your purse on the seat. Put it in the glove compartment or on the floor opposite yourself. Your purse can lure a criminal to your car.

Keep your car in gear while halted at traffic lights and stop signs. If your safety is threatened, hold down on the horn and drive away as soon as possible.

If you believe you are being followed by another car, do not drive into your driveway. Should another car attempt to force you to the side of the road, do not pull over. In both instances, obtain the license number and "WRITE IT DOWN" along with any description; then, continue to a police station or open business. Report the incident to the police.

Should your car become disabled in an isolated area, raise the hood and sit inside with the doors locked until assistance arrives. Leave the windows up while you talk to whomever approaches. It may be preferable to remain there rather than go with strangers to seek help. Frequently freeways are patrolled at all hours.

When traveling alone, you should not stop to aid disabled motorists.

Park only in a well-lighted spot near enough to your destination for safety. Look around for loiterers before leaving the car.

Lock your car whenever you leave it. This will help safeguard property inside and discourage thieves. Upon your return, examine behind the front seat before you enter the car. A criminal may have entered to wait for you.

Upon arriving at home, keep the headlights on until the garage is opened, the car is parked and the house door is unlocked. Be particularly alert when going into apartment house basement garages. If possible, have a friend or relative meet you.

A well-lighted garage and front door entrance is a friend to an unescorted woman.

At Home

Women who live alone should list only their last names and initials in phone directories and on mailboxes.

After moving into a new house or apartment, it is a good idea to change the door locks. Previous tenants or former employees may still have keys. Pin-tumbler or square bolt types are best for replacement as these are quite difficult to force.

Install and use chain locks or a peephole. When alone, you should never open a door to strangers without having the chain in place.

Police officers will display credentials whenever asked. You should always request salesmen and repairmen to show identification prior to being admitted.

Be alert to protect your neighbors as well as yourself. Never mention to a stranger that a neighbor lives alone or is at home alone.

When a stranger asks to use your phone, do not permit him to enter. Offer to summon emergency assistance or make the call for him.

Should wrong number calls be received, never reveal your name or address or admit you are alone. Do not give your phone number to an unknown caller, but ask what number he is calling. Do not prolong the conversation. Hang up. Notify the police of obscene calls.

Keep windows secured or install window locks on those left open for ventilation. These can limit openings to space small enough to prevent entry.

Window shades should be drawn after dark. Leave lights on in two or more rooms to indicate presence of other persons.

Be cautious about entering an apartment house elevator with strange men. It is wiser to remain in the lobby for a few minutes.

When using a laundry room in an apartment house, never remain there alone. Women have been assaulted in such areas.

If you are thinking about the use of a gun for protection, you must be aware of the hazards involved. Consult now with officers at your local police station. Remember, if the criminal has the opportunity, he might take the gun away to use against you.

Your best defense is prolonged loud screaming. A good protective device is an electric buzzer which you can have installed to alert your neighbor in the event of an emergency.

If a door or window has been forced or broken while you were absent . . . "DO NOT ENTER OR CALL OUT." Someone may still be inside. Use a neighbor's phone immediately to call the police and wait outside until they arrive.

Never assume that suspicious persons, occurrences or vehicles have been reported to the police. Do it yourself at once. Keep the police department number by your telephone.

Call whenever danger threatens. In the event of a false alarm it is better to be a bit embarrassed than to be killed or injured.

If Attacked . . .

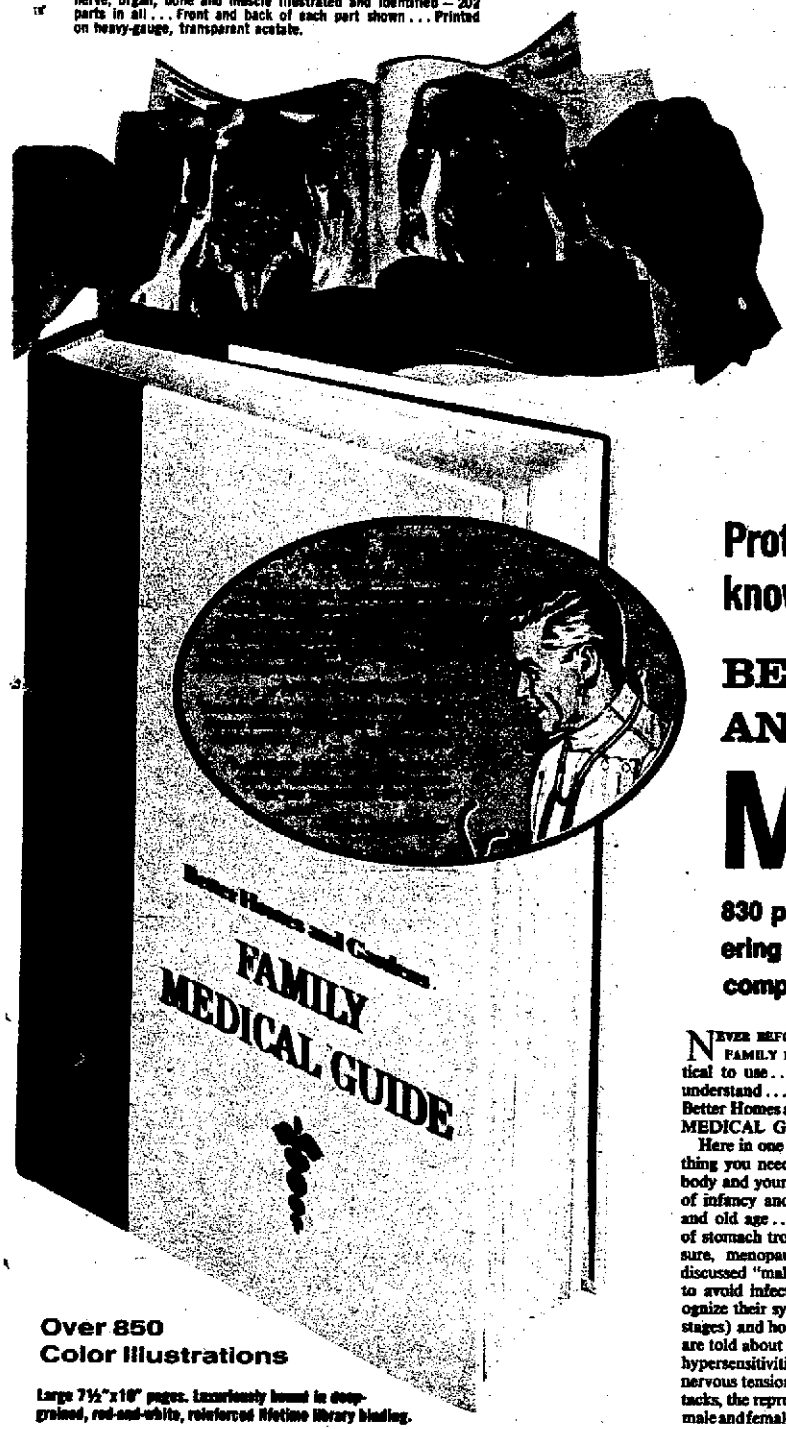

No holds are barred when your safety is threatened.

Cries for help have discouraged many criminals and often resulted in their capture.

830 pages — packed with reliable, simply written medical facts covering infancy to old age. There's nothing quite like it for easy use and comprehensiveness.

NEVER BEFORE HAS THERE BEEN A FAMILY medical book so practical to use . . . so easy to read and understand . . . so up-to-date as the Better Homes and Gardens FAMILY MEDICAL GUIDE.

Here in one giant volume is everything you need to know about your body and your health. The problems of infancy and childhood . . . middle and old age . . . symptoms and cures of stomach trouble, high blood pressure, menopause (and the seldom discussed "male menopause") . . . how to avoid infectious diseases (or recognize their symptoms in the earliest stages) and how to give first aid. You are told about annoying allergies and hypersensitivities, crippling arthritis, nervous tension, strokes and heart attacks, the reproductive systems of the male and female, operations, nutrition, liver, kidneys and the urinary tract.

Includes all common diseases of childhood—intestinal colic, allergies, scarlet fever, whooping cough, mumps, measles, etc. You'll learn about viruses, mental illness, drugs and tranquilizers, intestinal problems, etc.

You learn how to spot first signs of prostate trouble, rheumatic fever, cancer of the breast, appendicitis. You get frank advice on "female disorders", what to do about varicose veins, irregularities of the heartbeat (skipping a beat). You are given a seasonal calendar of infectious diseases, advice on special problems such as: pelvic disorders, congestive failures, ulcers, loss of vigor, even freckles. And you are given special advice and information on arthritic conditions, skin problems, hearing difficulties, other health problems that affect older folks.

Better Homes and Gardens FAMILY MEDICAL GUIDE has been prepared by 30 of America's most prominent physicians, surgeons, and specialists . . . doctors whose knowledge and opinions have earned them worldwide recognition in their fields of specialization.

Over 850 illustrations show you how your organs function, where they are located and what happens when they fail to work properly.

Millions of American families rely on the Family Medical Guide. You owe it to yourself and to your family to see this unique volume . . . and you can at NO COST. Examine it for 10 days. If for any reason you return the book within this period, there is no charge; you pay nothing, owe nothing.

Over 850 Color Illustrations
